36 — Mad Reg IV of 1816 ss 15 16—Disobedience of summons—Concurrent jurisdiction—The provisions of s 174 of the Penal Code are not in conflict with the special provisions of ss 15 and 16 of Regulation IV of 1816 (Madras). In ordinary cases disobedience to the summons of a Village Munsif should be dealt with under the Regulation. But if a charge is laid under the Penal Code the Criminal Court must deal with it. QUEEN v RAMACHANDRAPPA [I L R 8 Mad. 240]

37 — Disobedience to a summons—Summons to appear at place outside British territory—It is not an offence under the Penal Code s 174 to disobey a summons issued by a British Magistrate directing the person summoned to appear before him at a place outside British territory. QUEEN v PARANGA [I L R 16 Mad. 463]

33 ——— Attendance of a public servant—The offence is committed by a public servant if he fails to appear at a particular time and at a particular place before a specified public functionary. Where therefore the public servant was absent on the date fixed in a summons—Held that the person summoned could not be convicted under this section though he failed to attend having the intention to do so. *QUEEN EMPRESS v. 39 ——— Penal Code s. 175—Omission to produce document when ordered by Court—Criminal Procedure Code 1892 ss. 47, 49, 450 and 457—Jurisdiction of Magistrate in respect of offence committed before him—Process not producing document—Dated order of lawful authority of public servant—The accused was summoned as a witness to produce certain documents in a case before a Magistrate but he failed to produce them saying that they were not in his possession. The Magistrate having found that the statement was incorrect and that the accused could have produced the documents in question charged him with having committed an offence under s. 175 of the Penal Code and himself tried and convicted him. Held that neither s. 47, 450 nor s. 455 (which sections provide for the only cases in which a Court other than a High Court etc. can try persons for offences committed before itself) was applicable to the case and the Magistrate was therefore precluded by s. 437 from trying the case. QUEEN EMPRESS v. SETHIAIA

It does not appear from the statement of the case whether or not the offence was committed in view or presence of the Court and taken cognizance of the same day. From the judgment it would appear that it was not and this must form the ground for the decision for offences under s. 175 Penal Code are expressly mentioned in s. 450 of the Criminal Procedure Code and if committed in view or presence of the Court and taken cognizance of the same day the Magistrate would apparently have had clear power to try the offence and convict the accused as he did.

1 CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACTS

1. — Printed form of contract—Writing and printing—Sale of goods to arrive—
The defendants contracted to purchase certain piece goods from the plaintiffs who were dealers in these goods. The contract of sale was written out on one of the printed forms of the plaintiffs firm which forms contained in print the words now in course of landing or in the godowns and now on board ship. As a matter of fact well known to both parties the goods contracted for were neither in the godowns nor on board ship. Held that under the circumstances the printed words above set out formed no part of the contract entered into between the parties. CARLISLE NEPHEWS AND COMPANY v. HURKOOK ROY

5 ——— Duration of contract—Effect of recital as to control over operative words—The parties during several years had transactions consisting of the deliveries of produce by the defendants to the plaintiff's agent under advances upon separate contracts specifying prices and of consignments by the defendants through the plaintiffs. A purchase account and an interest account kept between them resulted in a general account and in 1872 a large sum was due thereon to the plaintiffs to whom in 1873 the defendants sent letters mortgaging property with instruments of title accompanying. In the beginning of 1874 the parties entered into a written agreement which described the balance due in respect of previous advances as the block account comprising also an interest account and the transactions proceeded. The intention was shown that the advances should be liquidated by returns but the only date mentioned from which an inference could be drawn as to the intended duration of the arrangement between the parties show at 30th June 1875. In this suit brought in December 1875 it was contended that the right construction of the agreement of 1874 required that it should continue to subsist (unless rescinded either by mutual agreement or on breach of its stipulations by one party justifying its rescission by the other) until the liquidation of the balance by returns at all events as regarded the block account. In order to the working of an agreement for a liquidation in such a way it would have been necessary to imply obligations for which no express provision had been made nothing for instance having been fixed as to the extent or duration of the business or as to the rate at which produce was to be offered or accepted. Held that such provisions could not now be supplied and that the stipulations as to the block account were binding only during the continuance of the arrangement for the conduct of the business by the parties such arrangement being terminable at will after the 30th June 1875. The letters of 1873 and the documents of title deposited with them were held to constitute a security for the general balance due from the defendants to the plaintiffs and not only a security for advances on certain of the contracts referred to in a paragraph in the nature of a recital for the latter was not necessarily repugnant to the aid of construction, and the operative words were wide enough to apply to all the transactions between the parties. 10 — Delivery by instalments—

Tender—Abandonment of excess—Sale of goods—A contract made between the plaintiffs and the defendant stipulated for the delivery to the defendant of 200 bags of Madras Coast castor seed which were to be shipped per steamer and then stated that shipment of 200 bags was to be made in December. On the 12th December 1890 bags arrived by steamer Shahjehan and notice in writing was given to the defendant who requested that the delivery might be postponed owing to his not having grown room. On the 14th December the defendant refused to take the 1890 bags on the ground that he was not bound to take a portion of the 200 bags but only the whole at one time. On the 16th December the defendant tendered the value of 200 bags which was refused and on the same day the plaintiffs resold the 1890 bags. On the 16th December the plaintiffs informed the defendant that 810 bags the balance of the 200 of the December shipment were due on the 18th and they disarrived on the 19th but were refused by the defendant on the same ground as before and they were accordingly resold by the plaintiffs. Held that according to the terms of the contract there was a lawful and proper tender of the December shipment by the plaintiffs and that the defendant having committed a breach of the contract in not accepting the bags the plaintiffs were justified in reselling them at once and suing for damages. *SIMSON v. 11 — Delivery order for goods deliverable monthly—Sub contract—Tender—Repudiation of contract—Damages—The defendant entered into a contract with the Union Mills for the purchase of 90,000 gunny bags at $21.8 per 100 bags delivery from October to March, each month 15,000 bags. Subsequently the defendant contracted to sell to the plaintiffs these 90,000 bags at $24.2 per 100 bags delivery from October to March 15,000 each month buyers to pay difference cash against delivery order on Mills. In August the defendant made out in the plaintiffs favour a delivery order directing the mills to deliver 90,000 bags on receiving payment for the same at $21.8 per 100 bags and on the same day sent to the plaintiffs a bill showing the amount of difference payable to him by them. The plaintiffs refused the delivery order on the ground that it had not been accepted by the mills but on a subsequent tender of the order and bill they offered on the 5th September to pay the amount of difference on receiving a delivery order accepted by the mills. The defendant treated the contract as at end and sold the bags in the market. In a suit for damages—Held (1) at the defendant sold not only a delivery order but the right to obtain from the mills 90,000 bags deliverable in lots of 15,000 per month after payment of the difference and impliedly undertook that the mills would accept the delivery order and deliver the goods in terms thereof when presented that the plaintiffs were entitled to get the delivery order at any reasonable time before the first monthly instalment fell due and further that the defendant was not entitled to repudiate the contract after the plaintiffs offer of the 5th September and having done so was liable in damages. *LANDED v. 12 — Shipment at monthly intervals—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s. 39—The defendant agreed to purchase from the plaintiffs 120 cases of condensed milk which were to be shipped in London and delivered in Madras. The agreement stipulated for shipment in six lots of twenty cases each at monthly intervals but it contained a proviso whereby the plaintiffs were excused from monthly shipments if space in ships sailing for Madras were not available. The second shipment was not made within one month from the date of the first shipment thereupon the defendant repudiated the contract. Held (1) that the interval of time contemplated in the contract was one month more or less regard being had to the time which it might be reasonable to allow to the plaintiffs for finding a steamer available for the required shipment (2) that the plaintiffs having failed to make the second shipment by a steamer of which they might have availed themselves the defendant was justified in rescinding the contract. *OLKART BROTHERS v. 13 — Delivery in whole of November on seven days' notice from buyer—Breach of contract—A contract for delivery by the defendants to the plaintiff of 1,000 bags of ginger stated that 'delivery was to be taken and given in the whole of November on seven days' notice from the buyer. On the 5th November the plaintiff gave notice to the defendants requiring delivery to be given within seven days and again on the 11th that he was prepared to take delivery on the following day. On the 12th the defendants wrote to the plaintiff stating that they would give delivery on the 28th, 29th and 30th November. On the 15th the plaintiff gave notice that he considered the contract at an end. In a suit for damages for non delivery—Held (affirming the decision of the Court below) that the words 'on seven days' notice from the buyer were intended to give the buyer the right of fixing the particular time in November at which the delivery was to commence and that the defendants were therefore bound to commence delivery on the expiration of the seven days' notice. *JUGGERBATH KHAN v. 15 — Breach of contract — Ex a certain ship — By a contract entered into between the plaintiffs and defendant the plaintiffs agreed to sell certain goods ex a specific ship to the defendant the goods to be taken delivery of within forty five days and ten days to be allowed for inspection and claiming allowance for any damaged goods the defendant to take the risk of damage from the date of the contract. The period for taking delivery and for inspection dated from the 13th May. The plaintiffs did not receive the whole of the goods until 16th of June and therefore were not ready to perform their contract by submitting them for inspection within the specified time the defendant did not call upon them to do so. In a suit for breach of the contract by the defendant in not accepting the goods — Held that the plaintiffs not being in a position to complete the contract no cause of action had arisen. Held on appeal that the goods ought to have been ready for inspection within the ten days stipulated and the plaintiffs not having shown that they were ready and willing so to perform the contract had no right of action notwithstanding that the defendant never in fact called on them to deliver the goods for inspection. The words ex a certain ship must be taken to mean that the goods are really landed and not in course of being landed and therefore independently of the question of the necessity on the part of the plaintiffs to show their readiness to perform their part of the contract the defendant was not bound to take goods on board ship in respect of which if the contract were binding upon him he would have been bound to take the risk of any damage or loss to the goods on board ship or in the course of landing. ROBERTSON GLADSTONE & CO & HURST & NELL

16 — Contract for freight — June shipment — Naming probable date of arrival of steamer — Later arrival no breach of contract — Estoppel — Notice of readiness to load — The defendant in April 1891 contracted with the plaintiffs for freight for 3½ tons seed wheat etc. by any first class steamer etc (subject to safe arrival) June shipment. Goods to be alongside in time to be all taken in on or before the second day after notice that steamer is ready for cargo otherwise difference of freight at market rate to be payable on demand as liquidated damages etc. On the 29th May defendant wrote saying it would be glad to know the name and probable date of arrival of the steamer. On the 3rd June the plaintiffs replied declaring the SS County of York against the engagement and adding in a postscript that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant. The SS County of York arrived in Bombay on the 10th June but from unforeseen circumstances had not a berth in the dock and was not ready to load until the 23rd instant. In the meantime on the 15th June the defendant repudiated the contract on the ground that having been led by the plaintiffs to expect that the ship would be ready to load on the 12th instant he had made telegraphic arrangements on that fact and the ship not being ready he was compelled to ship his goods by other steamers in order to fulfill his engagements. The plaintiffs accordingly refiled the freight on defendant's account and brought this suit for the loss incurred in so doing. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed for that nothing had occurred to alter the original contract which gave them the whole of June in which to provide a steamer. The statement made by the plaintiffs on the 3rd of June (in answer to the defendant's enquiries as to the probable date of the arrival of the steamer) that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant was not a promise but a mere expression of opinion. The question of estoppel did not arise. On the 22nd June the plaintiffs gave their shippers amongst others the defendant a notice to the following effect: As the County of York will be in dock tomorrow ready to receive cargo we have to request that your cargo be down not later than Wednesday the 24th instant etc etc. Quere — Whether this was a 'notice that the steamer was ready for cargo' as required by the contract. BERRY CRAIG & CO & MARTIN 1 L R 18 Bom. 599

17 — Custom or usage — qualifying contract — Shipment — Meaning of — On 15th April 1890 the defendant signed a contract (No 3053) to buy from the plaintiffs 25 bales grey dhies. June shipment in four lots with an interval of four weeks. These goods were not supplied as they could not be obtained at the price limited. On 5th September 1890 the defendant gave the plaintiffs an order at an increased limit of price in the full winter terms. Please telegraph your Manchester friends to purchase on my account 20 bales grey dhies relating to No 3053 at an all round advance of 1d per pair on original limits for November. December per pair on original limits in three monthly lots about 8 January shipments in three monthly lots about 8 bales to be shipped in each month. This order was accepted and the goods were shipped as follows: — 6 bales were banded to the carriers (the S and N Railway C) in Manchester on the 5th November 1890 and were shipped at Birkenhead on the 9th 1890 and were shipped at the same time the same December 1890. 6 bales were banded to the same carriers on the 4th December 1890 and were shipped on the 13th December 1890. 10 bales were banded to same carriers on the 23rd December and 1 bale on the 24th December and these 11 bales were shipped on the 6th January 1891. The defendant refused to accept the goods. He contended that the documents of 15th April and 24th September should be read together and that the final contract was for November December January shipments in three with intervals of four weeks. He also admitted that the shipment on the 9th December 1890 was a late shipment and that he was not there before it and that he did not put the goods under the contract. As to the last contents of the plaintiffs' alleged that by the custom of Bombay in the case of contracts made with members of the Native Piece Goods Association the date of the carrier's receipt was to be regarded as the date of shipment and that under such a contract as the one in question delivery to the Railway Company or other inland carrier was equivalent to shipment. This custom it was alleged originated in consequence of the above Association having agreed that all piece goods ordered out by its members should be conveyed to Bombay by certain lines of steamers only and by no others. It was stated that unless such a custom existed it would in many instances be impossible for Bombay merchants to carry out their contracts as no steamers of the correct dates would be available. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at the hearing found that the alleged custom existed and was generally accepted and understood by merchants and dealers in Bombay. On reference to the High Court—Held that the contract finally agreed on was that 20 bales of cotton yarn No 30/3 (i.e. the documents of the 15th April) should be purchased on defendant's account at an all round advance of 1d per pair on the original limits. Such bales to be shipped in the manner and at the times mentioned in the document of the 24th September 1890. SMITH & LUDIA GREILA DAVO. DAB. I L R., 17 Bom 129

18 ——— Sale of goods—Don acceptance of goods—Contract for goods to be ordered from Europe—Performance of contract by offer of goods of same description not ordered out for purchasers but bought by vendors in Bombay—On the 5th August the defendants commissioned the plaintiffs to order out from Europe 500 cwt copper braziers September shipment assorted in the manner set out in the indent signed by the defendants. Free on board Bombay harbour at the rate of £ 3 0 per ton. On the same day the plaintiffs sent a reply to the defendants' order in their usual form partly lithographed and partly written as follows—

We have the pleasure to inform you that we have received a telegram from our Manchester friends and so far as regards the cyphers therein used we learn that they advise the following purchases which will be invoiced to you at your limit subject to confirmation by letter as usual. Order this day hundred hundred of copper braziers at £53 5 per ton free on board Bombay. As a fact however no telegram had been received from the plaintiffs' Manchester friends and the plaintiffs had not learned that they had advised the purchases referred to in their reply. The acceptance of the plaintiffs' offer was really held on the plaintiffs' view of the probabilities of the copper market. The agents in England were unable to carry out the order and it remained unexecuted. On the 26th October the plaintiffs having negotiated with one Nara Ducha to take over from him a September shipment of copper by the SS Merton Hall answering to the defendants' order and for the purpose of fulfilling it wrote to the defendants as follows—

We beg to inform you of the arrival of the SS Merton Hall with hundred packages of goods sold to you as per agreement No 213 and have therefore to request payment of the cash for those goods according to the terms of the agreement. The plaintiffs' negotiations however with Nara Ducha fell through and they were unable to supply the defendants with the goods from the Merton Hall. The defendants on the 30th October wrote through their solicitors to the plaintiffs stating that they believed the goods never came to Bombay and that they considered the contract at an end. The plaintiffs however on the 29th October had succeeded in purchasing a September shipment of goods from one Beg Mahomed corresponding to those ordered by the defendants. They then on the 31st October wrote to the defendants informing them that it was a mistake of their clerk to advise the arrival of the defendants' goods per Merton Hall and handing the defendants' invoices of 100 bundles arrived ex Tula Head. The defendants discovered that the plaintiffs had not ordered out these goods but had purchased them in Bombay and on that ground they refused to accept them. The price of copper had then fallen. The plaintiffs sold the goods by auction and brought this suit against the defendants to recover the difference between the price realized by the sale and the price which by their contract the defendants had agreed to pay. It was admitted by the plaintiffs' witnesses that it was intended at the time the defendants gave their order that the goods should be ordered out from England by the plaintiffs and that this was the invariable course of business of the plaintiffs' firm—the present case forming the only instance to the contrary. Held that the defendants were not bound to accept the goods offered by the plaintiffs and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the amount sued for. An importing firm which accepts a commission to order out goods at a fixed rate and undertakes that they shall be invoiced to the person giving the order at that rate does not (in the absence of proof of usage to the contrary) fulfil his contract by obtaining goods answering to the terms of the order from another firm in Bombay and tendering them to the person giving the order. *BOMBAY UNITED MERCHANTS COMPANY & DOOLAR RAM SAKULCHAND. 19 ——— Contract to deliver goods—

*Suit for non delivery—Agreement exempting from liability in case of loss of carrying ship—Necessity for declaring names of carrying ship to purchaser—Loss of ship W/ at sea—July August shipment—What amounts to—*The defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiff 500 tons of coal per steamer July August shipment. The last clause of the agreement was as follows—In the event of the ship being lost at this contract to be null and void. The coal was put on board the SS Rubens by the defendants at Sunderland on the 30th and 31st August. On the 1st September the Rubens was sunk by collision in dock and remained at the bottom in twenty three feet of water for sixteen hours when she was raised and her cargo discharged. The coal was pronounced unfit for a voyage to Bombay. Extensive repairs to the ship were found necessary and she was useless until the 6th October. The plaintiff sued for damages for non delivery of the coal. The defendants relied on the last clause of the agreement as exempting them from liability. Held that the defendants were not liable. The Rubens was lost for the purpose for which she was required under the contract:—for a voyage in fulfilment of a July August shipment and the defendants having proved that the coal had been duly shipped on board the vessel so lost were exempt under the last clause of the agreement from liability for non delivery. It was argued that until the name of the carrying ship was declared to the plaintiff as purchaser neither the ship nor the coal was assigned to the contract and therefore the loss could not be within the contract. Held that if such a condition was intended it should have been expressed. The appropriation of certain goods to the contract by the vendors (the defendants) the placing them on board the Rubens and doing all in their power to despatch them to Bombay in fulfilment of the contract were enough to entitle them to the protection of the last clause of the agreement. 20. — Contract to sell from 2 500 to 3 500 tons of coal—Breach of contract—Non delivery of coal—Damages.—On the 18th May 1893 the defendants sold to the plaintiffs the entire cargo of coal per steam ship — May shipment and canal amounting to 2 500 to 3 500 tons or thereabouts. The defendants intended a certain steam ship called the Ethelaida which carried a cargo of 3 325 tons of coal to satisfy this contract. This ship however did not lead in May and consequently her cargo did not fulfil the condition of the contract. From the day of making the contract the plaintiffs had been urging the defendants to declare the name of the vessel in which the coal contracted for was to be shipped. On the 14th June the defendants by letter informed the plaintiffs that the vessels chartered for their May shipment had not loaded in May and they offered to cancel the contract. On the same day however and about an hour after the plaintiffs had received this letter and before they had replied to it the defendants sent them another letter as follows — We have now been informed that the boat our coals have been loaded in is the Ethelaida and we now beg to declare it. Correspondence subsequently passed between the parties. On the 15th June the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants as follows — Please inform us finally what you intend in regard to the Ethelaida is declared as bringing coals as per our contract of 18th May please let us know the date of her sailing and the particular date of her arrival in Bombay and also how much coal she has on board. On the following day the defendants replied. The Ethelaida is the boat chartered for the cargo we sold you. We do not positively know whether she commenced to load in May or June. She was expected to load about 3 300 tons. On the 28th June the defendants wrote definitely stating that the Ethelaida did not load in May. The plaintiffs refused her cargo and sent in a statement of their alleged loss calculated upon 3 300 tons the amount stated to be the cargo of the Ethelaida in the defendants letter of the 14th June. Held that the damages must be calculated upon a cargo of 2 500 tons only. The Ethelaida was never incorporated into the contract. The defendants declared her against the contract but after they had informed the plaintiffs that she had not loaded in May the plaintiffs refused her cargo. The contract which the defendants failed to fulfil was a contract to deliver the Ethelaida cargo which they were always ready and willing to deliver. The option rested with the defendants whether they would deliver 2 500 or 3 500 tons or any intermediate quantity and upon no principle could the Court exercise that option for them and declare that they were liable to deliver more than a cargo of 2 000 tons. 21. — Suit for non delivery—Clause exempting from liability in case of loss of carrying ship—Loss of ship—Declaration of it after date of loss—Appropriation of goods after goods lost.—The defendants by a contract dated 10th January 1896 sold 2 500 tons of coal to the plaintiff of the February and March shipment to be delivered in Bombay. No ship was named in the contract which contained the following clause — In the event of the ship being lost this contract shall be null and void. February and March shipments ordinarily arrive in Bombay on or before the 30th April following. All of the coal contracted for was duly delivered by the defendants except 136 tons which still remained to be delivered to the plaintiffs. By a letter dated 20th April 1896 addressed to the plaintiffs the defendants declared the SS Eastby Abbey as the ship carrying the said 1376 tons of coal as remaining due under the contract. There was no evidence of any appropriation of coal on board the Eastby Abbey for the purpose of the above contract prior to this declaration. It subsequently transpired that the Eastby Abbey had run on a reef in the Red Sea on the 10th April and so seriously damaged that being taken to Suva (where such of her cargo as was had not been thrown overboard was a 13) she was found unable to proceed to Bombay and she returned to England for repairs. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for non delivery of 136 tons of coal. The defendants pleaded that the ship having been lost they were exempt from liability under the above clause in the contract. Held that the defendants were liable for the non-delivery of the coal. There having been previously to the declaration of the ship no appropriation of the coal on board it the purpose of the contract the exemption clause did not apply. Semble.—In case of a contract containing such a

22. — Continuing offer—Successive contracts—Reasonable notice—Offer—The plaintiffs were the agents of two mills in Bombay. The defendants were a coal company carrying on business in Bombay by their agents the Bombay Company Limited. The defendants on the 19th of August 1897 signed a memorandum in the form of a letter addressed to the plaintiffs of which the first two clauses were as follows:—The undersigned have this day made a contract with Messrs. Homjee Wadia & Co. for a period of twelve months from 1st September 1897 to 31st August 1898. Sellers to supply them with Bengal Coal Co.'s Deshpurhar from time to time as required by purchasers, reasonable notice to be given of such requirements. The total quantity intended for during the year shall not exceed without seller's consent the maximum average of 3,000 tons per month. Up to the 10th July 1898 the plaintiffs had indicated for 1,202 tons of which 1,000 tons had been delivered. On that date they indicated for 500 tons more. On the 15th July the plaintiffs further indicated for an additional 1,000 tons. The defendants replied offering to deliver 600 tons in August but declining to deliver 1,000 tons. The plaintiffs on the 2nd July gave notice to the defendants that they would require delivery of the balance of 2,048 tons (that is 4,300 minus 1,552 tons already delivered) on or before the 31st August 1898. The defendants subsequently delivered 200 and 500 tons leaving 1,948 tons undelivered. The plaintiffs claimed Rs. 600-13-0 as damages for non-delivery. Held that the memorandum of the 19th August 1897 was not a contract but simply a continuing offer and that each successive order given by the plaintiffs was an acceptance of the offer as to the quantity ordered. The offer of the defendants and each successive order of the plaintiffs constituted a series of contracts. The failure alleged was in compliance with orders given after the defendant's offer was cancelled and withdrawn. Held further that the plaintiffs were not entitled to obtain more than 3,000 tons in any one month with the defendants' consent. Held further that the notice given by the plaintiffs on the 2nd July 1898 to supply 2,048 tons was not a reasonable notice within the meaning of the memorandum of the 19th August 1897. LEWIS COAL CO. v. defendant an indent containing certain terms not contained in the original offer and in particular containing the words "Free Bombay Harbour and Interest." This the defendant refused to sign. The plaintiffs however sent the offer by cable to their home firm and on receipt of a favourable reply communicated this acceptance to the defendant. It is acceptance the defendant said he had returned. The plaintiffs deny that he had done so. Held per JERVIS C.J.—The law on this point is thus formulated in the most authoritative mode by the Contract Act (IX of 1872) s. 7. In order to convert a proposal into a promise the acceptance must be absolute and unqualified. That is to say until there is such an acceptance the stage of negotiation has not been passed and no legal obligation is imposed. Similarly any departure from the terms of the offer or any qualification vitiates the acceptance it accompanies unless it is agreed to by the person from whom the offer comes. In other words an acceptance with a variation is no acceptance; it is simply a counter proposal which must be accepted by the original promisor before a contract is made. Held further that because the acceptance was not shown to have been returned no inference could be drawn that the defendant must have assented to the terms in which it failed to correspond to his offer. It is clear that a person making a proposal cannot impose on the party to whom it is addressed the obligation to refuse it under the penalty of imputed assent or attach to his silence the legal result that he must be deemed to have accepted it. Evidence of previous dealings is admissible only for the purpose of explaining the terms used in a contract and not to impose on a party an obligation as to which the contract is silent or to read into it a liability which would otherwise not exist. It was impossible to find in dealings carried out on the basis of signed indents any clue to the intention of the parties when it only was no indent signed but the defendant refused to sign one. MAHOMED HAJI JIVA v. 24. — Executory contract involving personal considerations—Assignment of contract—Contract consisting of distinct contracts—Separate parts—Seven salt manufacturers the defendants entered into a contract with A to manufacture and store in the factory in the name of and for the benefit of such quantities of salt as he might require them to manufacture each within seven years in compliance of his paying them at the rate of Rs. 180 per cwt. of salt for six months credit after cash payment of 10% and of his paying Government tax and duties and execution of all duties in connection with the salt factory. B was a party with A to the contract though he was not a party to it until then. A and B shared the contract with C. B as a shareholder and C as a partner both bought a salt and the defendants sold it to them at a profit but the defendants were not to be bound by the contract during the next year of its continuance (1887) and praying (1) that all the defendants be directed to deliver to the plaintiffs the salt collected during 1886 (2) that defendants 2, 4 and 7 should be held liable for any damages plaintiffs might suffer through a fall in the price of salt. The Court of first instance having held that the contract contained seven separate and distinct contracts each defendant having contracted with reference to his own pans only decreed (1) that the seven defendants should pay damages at the rate of Rs 12 0 p per garce for the salt collected by each during the years 1886 to 1889 leaving the quantity to be ascertained in the execution of the decree (2) that the defendant should pay the plaintiffs costs. On appeal the District Judge modified the decree by fixing the rate of damages at Rs 4 10 0 for each garce of salt. Held on appeal that A was not competent to assign his interest in the contract to the second plaintiff since the contract was based on personal considerations and that the assignment of it as an executory contract was invalid without the consent of the defendants. Farrow v Wilson L P 4 C P 744 Humble v Hunter 12 Q B 310 Arkansas Valley Melting Company v Heiden Mining Company 127 U S R 379 followed. NAMASIVAYA GURUKAL v KADIR AMMAL I L R., 17 Mad. 163

25 ——— Sale of goods—Special place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter—Assessment of damages—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 49 94 and 231—Bought and sold notes of Purneah indigo seed provided. The seed to be delivered at any place in Bengal in March and April 1891. It was added the place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter. The buyer made mention of this on the 20th March 1891 in a letter to the broker for both parties. This letter specifying Howrah railway station as the place was forwarded to the vendor who replied that he would deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea. Thus the buyer declined. The vendor and the buyer each insisting that the place named by him was the proper one for delivery the buyer refused to accept at the vendor's godowns or at any place other than Howrah station. The vendor remained for a certain time ready and willing to deliver at his godowns at Sulkea and the buyer not accepting delivery at that place the vendor declared the contract cancelled. The buyer then sued him for breach of the contract to deliver at the place mentioned by the buyer. On the question whether the vendor had discharged his liability by readiness and willingness to deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea—Held that the choice of place given originally by the contract to the buyer subject only to the express contract that it must be in Bengal and to the implied one that it must be reasonable had not been converted by the words about mention thereafter into a definite question to be settled by a subsequent agreement. The buyer according to the contract already submitted had the right to fix the place. There was a special promise in the contract as to the delivery and to complete its terms nothing more was required than a mention by the buyer of a reasonable place within Bengal. This had been made by him. The contract therefore did not fall within s. 94 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) dealing with cases where there has been no special promise as to delivery and fixing the place of production as the place for delivery but rather resembled what was contemplated in s. 49. 26 ——— Contract to supply goods at fixed price—Duty imposed on material subsequently to date of contract—Liability to supply goods—Indian Tariff Act (VIII of 1894) s 10—On 2nd November 1894 the defendant contracted to supply the plaintiff with a certain quantity of dhotees made of European or Egyptian yarn at the rate of 2.5 paise each month for a period of one year. In January 1895 an import duty of five per cent was imposed by Government on the yarn. The defendant thereupon declined to supply the dhotees unless the plaintiff paid the duty in addition to the contract price. Held that under s. 10 of Act VIII of 1894 the defendant could call on the plaintiff to pay the duty which he had paid on the yarn that he could add so much to the contract price as would be equivalent to the duty which he himself had paid. The question was whether the dhotees supplied to the plaintiff were actually made out of yarn on which duty had been paid by the defendant. THIRAVALLI JAINNADAS v KALIDAS DALPATRAJ [L L R. 21 Bom 635]

27 ——— Offer of performance—Tender of railway receipts endorsed in blank—Goods not available—Goods subject to demurrage or freight—Duty of seller—P agreed to sell and F to buy certain goods to be delivered to F in April May 1897. The contract of sale contained in April May 1897 the following clauses (10) The goods to be tendered fully 48 hours before the expiration of the present term of 72 hours granted by the railway company in order to enable buyers to weigh sample and inspect the same; and the duty very net to be considered complete until the sample have been refracted and examined and any dispute about quality etc settled. (11) If railway receipt be tendered such to be handed to buyers 48 hours before the goods are liable to demurrage and the present term of 72 hours granted by the railway company. P not having before the 31st May goods of his own to meet the contract arranged with H for certain goods of H to be delivered under receipt to F. On that day certain railway receipts were tendered to F. On that day certain railway receipts which had been endorsed in blank by H in respect of the said goods were tendered to F. F was ready to pay for the goods; but before tendering the price he insisted upon an endorsement of the railway receipts by H to P and by P to himself. P was unable to point out the goods to be delivered under the contract nor could he indicate the warehouse numbers. F refused to procure the endorsements required by F and thereupon F declined to take delivery as proposed though he tendered the price.

exchange for the goods. Held that, F not having had an opportunity of inspecting the goods as provided by the contract the tender made as aforesaid by P was not such an offer of performance of the contract as F was bound to accept. Held also that F was not bound to accept a tender of railway receipts for goods subject (as some of these were) to demurrage nor for goods on which freight had not been paid (as was the case with some of these goods) nor for goods that were not available on the 31st May as in the present case. In order to establish a valid tender of the goods it was for P to show that had F taken the railway receipts the railway company would have been bound to deliver the goods upon production of the receipts and F was under no duty to point out to P that the tender was defective. F's duty under the contract arose when a sufficient tender was made to him and not till then. Failure to justify an alleged breach of contract upon one ground only which is found insufficient does not disentitle the defendant to rely upon other grounds which his rights under the contract entitle him to rely upon. Cowan v Milbarn L R, 2 Exch 230 and Mothcormack v Bank of Bengal I L R 3 Calo, 822 referred to. MOTCHAND & PULCHAND I L R, 26 Calo 142

28 — Tender of railway receipts for goods subject to freight—Railway receipts for goods subject to demurrage—Defective tender—Estoppel.—Under a contract of sale of goods it was provided that if instead of the goods railway receipts for them be tendered they must be handed over to the buyers 48 hours before the goods were liable to demurrage under the present term of 72 hrs granted by the railway company that sellers must be present at the time of delivery to inspect the weighing and sampling and in their default buyers will weigh and sample and sellers must abide by the result. On the last day of delivery the plaintiffs tendered to the defendants certain railway receipts purporting to cover the goods under the contract and blank endorsed by the consignee named in the receipts and demanded payment of the goods they did not offer to give delivery of the goods covered by the receipts. The defendants refused to accept the railway receipts until they were endorsed by the consignee named in them to the plaintiff and by the plaintiff to the defendants. It was subsequently found that freight had not been paid on the receipts and that demurrage was payable on some of the goods but the defendants did not at the time raise any objection on that ground. Held that having regard to the terms of the contract the defendants were not bound to accept the railway receipts or upon their being tendered to pay the price of the goods as demanded. That the plaintiffs had not complied with the terms of the clause relating to delivery by railway receipts and it was open to the defendants to rely upon that objection and they cannot be said to have waived all questions as to freight demurrage and the tendering of railway receipts instead of the goods

29 — Collateral agreement—Contract Act ss 21 60—Mistake of law—Agreement to secure repayment of loan collateral to primary obligation.—By an agreement in writing defendants trustees of a temple in consideration of an advance of money which they represented was required to pay off debts incurred for the benefit of the temple granted to plaintiff a lease of the right to manage the temple lands and plaintiff promised that he would repay himself out of the profits to be derived from the lands and that neither the defendants nor their family property should be made liable for the debt. In a suit by plaintiff against a tenant of the temple lands this lease was held to be void for illegality. Defendants subsequently resumed management and plaintiff sued them to recover the money advanced by him. It was found that the agreement was entered into by both parties under a mistake as to the validity of the lease. Held that assuming a 65 of the Contract Act was not intended to vary the rule that a mistake of law is no ground for relieving a party from his own contract plaintiff was nevertheless entitled to recover on the ground that the agreement which provided for repayment was collateral and had failed. An agreement that an obligation which is contracted shall be discharged in some particular mode is collateral to the primary contract which created the obligation though the two agreements may be mixed up in one contract. KRISHNAN v SANKARA VARMA I L R, 9 Mad. 441

30 — Agreement not to alienate—Mortgage.—Plaintiff sued as managing trustee of a choultry to set aside certain mortgages of the lands in which it was endowed made by the second third and fourth defendants to the sixth and seventh defendants and for an injunction to compel payment of list which had been allowed to fall into arrears contrary to the provisions of the machalka sued upon. The defendants pleaded that the mortgages made were not in violation of the provisions of the machalka. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit. On appeal the Civil Judge considered the provisions — Moreover we are only entitled to enliven the said four villages and to maintain the said choultry with the income therefrom as above stated and we have no right to alienate the said lands by sale etc —fatal to the right to mortgage advanced by the defendants one to five. Accordingly he reversed the decree appealed from. Held by SCOTLAND C.J. that the reasonable construction to be put upon that portion of the ruznama relating to alienation was that the villages were not to be alienated so as to deprive the choultry of the receipt of the portion of the produce fixed by the ruznama for its support that the security of the cultivation of the land and the application of the fixed portion of the produce to the maintenance of the choultry was all that the parties intended to effect, that there was nothing in the record to show that the payment of that fixed portion had been rendered less certain by the transfer of the villages to the mortgagees that consequently the beneficial interest of the plaintiff as trustee under the rana nama was not impaired, and the mortgages were not made in violation of the provisions of the machalka. Per HOLLOWAY J that the right set up was based upon a purely capricious exercise of the plaintiff's will in the effectuation of which he had no conceivable interest that contractual words seeking to create a right of this sort are ineffective to create it; and that consequently the alienations by mortgage were wrongly declared void. KRISTNA MADALI v. 31. ——— Agreement to share costs of litigation to be prosecuted to its furthest limits—Failure on advice to appeal to Privy Council—Plaintiffs having sought to recover from defendants their share of the costs of certain litigation which plaintiffs had set going at the instance of defendant's father who was jointly interested with plaintiffs in certain property in suit but who wanted the means to prosecute the litigation for its recovery and who accordingly executed an ikramamah agreeing to share the costs of the necessary litigation proportionably with plaintiffs provided they furnished the funds for prosecuting that litigation to the furthest limits and the said litigation having terminated adversely to the interests of both plaintiffs and defendants without any appeal having been preferred to the Privy Council and defendants having repudiated all responsibility for costs on the ground of default in prosecution of litigation to the furthest possible limit—Held that as plaintiffs had merely undertaken to furnish the means for carrying on the litigation but had not actually undertaken the conduct of that litigation and as it was not in evidence that defendants had wished to go up to the Privy Council and to this end had made a demand on but had been frustrated by plaintiffs the plaintiffs were entitled to recover proportionate costs in the concerted litigation with costs in the present suit proportioned to the amount thus obtained by them. The lower Courts in this case found that it had not been proved either that the plaintiff had advised or that defendant's father had agreed that there should be an appeal to the Privy Council. SIVANEK MOUNN SHAHA CROWDERY v. aside a lease granted by the widow—Held there is nothing in any statute law which renders such a provision imperative neither as 10 and 15 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) nor any principle underlying them is applicable to it; it is not an unreasonable provision; there was no absence of equity in the arrangement and effect should be given to it. KULDIP SINGH v. 33. ——— Agreement to give refusal of purchase—Contract between purchaser from Hindu widow and reversioners—Breach of contract in leasing to others—W purchased an estate from a Hindu widow. On her death the reversioners brought a suit to set aside the sale and recover possession. Upon this W entered into an ikram with the reversioners in which he agreed on consideration of their desisting from the suit that he would remain in possession as long as he pleased and when he had the occasion to sell the property would give them the refusal. Several years after W entered into negotiations with third parties for the sale of the concern to which the property was annexed but not being able to come to terms with them he broke off the negotiation and the property was subsequently leased to others. Upon this the reversioners sued to have the property conveyed to them. Held that W's promise not to alienate the property coupled with the promise that he would personally retain possession amounted to an undertaking which was violated by what had taken place. Plaintiffs were therefore entitled to the conveyance sought for upon payment of the price. RAM NATH SIV LAKSHMI v. RASH MOUNN MOOKERJEE 24 W R 214

38. — Demurrage—Sale of cargo by consignee—Several purchasers—Contract incorporating the charter party—Liability of one purchaser for delay of all—Contract absolute—On the 2nd June 1899 the defendant entered into two contracts with the plaintiffs the consignees of the cargo each for the purchase of 500 tons of coal per S.S. Dunedin then in harbour. The contracts provided (inter alia) delivery to be taken at a rate of not less than 200 tons per day. All conditions in the charter party to be binding on the purchaser. The charter party stated cargo to be discharged whether permuting at the average rate of not less than 300 tons a working day or to pay demurrage at the rate of £30 per working day or pro rata. Previously to the 2nd of June the rest of the cargo had been sold by the plaintiffs to three other purchasers and the lay days had already partially expired but as regards neither of these facts did the defendants ask nor were they given information. The Dunedin discharged at only three of her first batches and so discharging was able to give delivery of something more than 300 but less than 400 tons a day. Delivery was given to whichever of the four purchasers was the first to come alongside. At the expiration of the lay days (being the days required to discharge the whole cargo at the average rate of 300 tons a day) the cargo had been completely discharged with the exception of 264 tons which remained to be delivered to the defendant. The cargo to be discharged subsequently to 2nd of June would have been discharged within the lay days but for the want of lighters on the part of the purchasers of the cargo generally. It occasionally happened however that a lighter was kept idle waiting for its turn at one of the three batches. The plaintiffs paid one day's demurrage in respect of the delay in discharging the 264 tons and now brought an action to recover the same from the defendant. Held that the defendant was liable. The contract of the defendant (by incorporation of the charter party) to take delivery within the lay days or to pay demurrage being absolute he could only excuse non-performance of his contract by showing it was due either to default of the captain of this ship or of the plaintiffs themselves neither of which had been shown. The plaintiffs were not to blame for any difficulties occurring by reason of there being other purchasers. That was the well known nature of the trade and it was for the defendant if he desired protection in this respect to provide for it in his contract. Neither were the plaintiffs bound to be able to deliver to the defendant at the rate of 400 tons a day under his two contracts. The stipulation in each of the two contracts that delivery should be taken at a rate of not less than 200 tons per diem was not one on which the defendant could insist but was an independent stipulation in favour of the cargo. VOIKART BROTHERS & NUSSEBANY JEHANGIR KHAMBATTI L. 39. — Sale of goods—Delivery—Delivery on Sunday—Custom as to delivery—Where the defendant a European was sued for damages for non-delivery of goods and contended that he was not bound to deliver on Sunday—Held that delivery on Sunday was not unlawful and that in the absence of custom to the contrary the defendant was bound to deliver the goods on that day if they had not already been delivered. LALCHAND BALKISSAN & KERNEN L. 40. — Goods ordered through commission agents—Contract of agency—Contract of sale—Form of action—The defendants traded in Bombay as merchants and commission agents under the style of S D & Co being a branch of a French firm trading in Paris under the same name of which firm also the defendants were members. The Paris firm were agents for certain manufacturers of zinc. The plaintiff a Bombay merchant ordered out 48 casks of zinc sheets through the defendants firm in Bombay by an indent in the following form— I hereby request you to instruct your agents to purchase for me (if possible) the under mentioned goods on my account and risk upon the terms stated below. Such terms inter alia limited the price of the goods and the time within which the shipments were to be made. Later the plaintiff consented to increase his limit of price. The defendants, having communicated with their Paris firm wrote to the plaintiff as follows— We have the pleasure to inform you that our home firm has reported by wire concerning your esteemed order as follows— Placed at your increased limit. Subsequently the plaintiff was informed by the defendants that the manufacturers being full with orders the zinc sheets would not be ready for shipment as soon as had been expected and he was asked whether he agreed to give an extension of time or desired to cancel the indent. Simultaneously the plaintiff wrote that the contract time had been exceeded and that he would buy similar goods in Bombay on the defendants account. Thus the plaintiff did and brought this action to recover the difference in price as damages on account of the defendants having failed to perform their contract for the delivery of 48 casks of zinc sheets. Held that neither the defendants nor their Paris firm had entered into any contract of sale on which they were liable to the plaintiff. 41. — Agreement for permission to quarry—Licence Non-renewal of—Implied condition—By an agreement (in renewal of similar agreements for the two previous years) dated the 3rd September 1888 the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff rent for a piece of hilly ground at the rate of Rs29 per month for one year during which time the defendant was to be allowed to blast stones and carry on the work of quarrying to the extent of seven crow bars, such quarrying to be done at such places as the plaintiff had pointed out or should choose to point out from time to time. The rent to be paid was arrived at on a calculation of Rs17 per crow-bar and was to be payable whether defendant employed the seven crow bars or less. The defendant by the sixth clause of the agreement further undertook as follows:—“As regards the police arrangement and other expenses at the time of blasting stones, and obtaining an order or license etc and as to any other kind of expense, risk and responsibility all these are upon me. I will duly pay you at the rate of Rs29 per month clear until the fixed time. The defendant was a stone contractor and had been employed in this work of quarrying all his life and for the previous two years on this very spot, and was well aware that blasting could not be carried on without a license from the authorities which was revocable at any time, and required renewal annually. At the time of the agreement the defendant was in possession of a license which expired on the 31st December 1888. After that date the authorities refused to renew the license on the ground that the quarry where operations were being carried on was surrounded by houses on all sides and the defendant thereupon refused to continue the payment of the monthly rent of Rs29. The plaintiff accordingly brought this suit in the Small Cause Court for three months’ rent at the above rate. Held looking at the nature of the contract, that it must be taken to have been the intention of the parties to it that the monthly sum of Rs29 should only be payable so long as quarrying was permitted by the authorities and that there was no unconditional contract to pay Rs29 in all events in cl. 6 of the agreement or elsewhere. *Taylor v Caldwell 3 B. & S. 86 32 L. By an agreement in writing dated 15th December 1882 and executed in favour of M. D. and H. D. who were the proprietors of an indigo concern, the defendant R. agreed to sow indigo, taking the seed and land from M. D. and H. D.’s concern, on four bighas of land out of his holding selected, measured, and prepared by M. D. and H. D. or their amah, and when the indigo was fit for weeding “to weed, reseed, and turn it up to the extent necessary according to the directions of the amah of the concern,” and when the indigo was fit for reaping, to “reap and load it on carts according to the directions of the amah of the concern; and if any portion of the said indigo land was in the judgment of the amah of the concern found bad, in lieu thereof to get some other land in his holding measured, and “on the land so measured in Bysack” to “sow Bhabdon crops only which will be reaped in Bhabad. The defendant also agreed not to sow on the land measured any crop that might “cause obstacle to the cultivation of the indigo, and if he did so, “the amah of the concern should be at liberty to destroy such crop, and he should not “oppose the destruction thereof nor sue in the Courts, Civil or Criminal for destruction of the same.” As regards a breach of said condition, it was provided “If I or my heirs or part from the conditions of this indigo engagement directly or indirectly or in any way neglect to cultivate or do not cultivate indigo, I or they shall pay to the above named M. D. and H. D. damages for the same from my or their person and property and shall raise no plea or objection. In 1886, M. D. and H. D. assigned the entire benefit of this agreement to the plaintiff. It was a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for damages on account of his alleged failure to cultivate indigo for the plaintiff’s concern in accordance with the terms of the agreement of the 15th December 1882. Held that the agreement must be construed as one which had been entered into by the defendant with reference to the personal position circumstances and qualifications of M. D. and H. D. and their amah, and that therefore it was not assignable so as to give the assignee a right to sue upon it in his own name as for a breach of contract. TOOMMY v RAMJI CAK I. L. R. 17 Calc. 115 defendant should pay her annually Rs. 20 in lieu of her income from that bazar. Plaintiff also undertook that as long as this annual payment was continued she would not establish any new bazar within two miles of the bazar of the defendant. Subsequently the plaintiff sold the site of her former bazar together with some other land. Held that if the payee it was to be made in consideration of her abolishing the bazar she was not entitled to it after she had parted with the land upon which the bazar stood. That if the payment was in consideration of the plaintiff undertaking not to establish a new bazar within two miles of the defendant's bazar she had disentitled herself to a continuance of this payment from the time when she made it impossible for herself to secure the fulfilment of the condition by parting with the land. SARAT MOHINI DAS v. 44. — Consideration—Compromise of a bond sale claim—Good consideration—Agree ment to lend money on mortgage—Delay in completion of agreement—Subsequent agreement to pay interest from a certain date—Consideration for such agreement—Right to rescind—Time of essence of contract—Suit by lender against borrower—On 31st August 1891 the plaintiff agreed to lend the defendant Rs 30,000 on a mortgage. By the agreement the mortgagor (defendant) was to clear the title and the time fixed for completion of the agreement was eight days from its date. The mortgage was not completed within the stipulated time in consequence of the non production of the title-deeds by prior mortgagors who were to be paid off out of the money to be advanced by the plaintiff. On the 9th September 1891 the plaintiff's solicitors wrote to the defendant reminding him that the time for completion had expired and stating that the plaintiff would require interest to be paid on the money which he had with him lying idle on the defendant's account. On the 24th September 1891 the plaintiff formally tendered the Rs 30,000 to the defendant but as no mortgage deed was then ready for execution the money was not then paid. The plaintiff was always ready and willing to advance the money but in consequence of the defendant's delay he insisted on interest being paid from the 24th September 1891. The title deeds were ultimately produced at the end of November or the beginning of December and on 7th December 1891 the draft mortgage was sent to the defendant for approval. It contained a clause stipulating for payment of interest from 24th September 1891. On the 9th December 1891 the plaintiff had an interview with the defendant. The two points then discussed were (1) what time after due date should be allowed to the defendant (mortgagor) for payment of interest (2) whether interest on the principal sum should run from the 24th September 1891. On the first point the plaintiff gave way allowing defendant fifteen days instead of eight as originally provided. As to the second point he declined to advance the money unless interest was paid from the 24th September 1891. The defendant ultimately agreed to this. The mort gage-deed was duly engrossed with a stipulation for payment of interest from the 24th September 1891 and the 26th January 1892 was fixed as the day for execution. On that day however one of the defendant's daughters who had to execute the deed was absent and the plaintiff refused to advance the money until her signature was obtained. Subsequently the defendant refused to sign the deed on the ground that it contained the clause for payment of interest from 24th September 1891. He contended that he was not liable to pay interest from that date. The plaintiff brought this suit claiming Rs 1,865 12-0 as damages for the defendant's breach of agreement. The lower Court held that although the original agreement of 31st August 1891 mentioned no date from which interest should run the defendant on the 9th December 1891 had agreed to pay it from 24th September 1891 and had made no objection on the point until February 1892. The defendant contended that if such an agreement was made on the 9th December 1891 it was without consideration but the Court held that the plaintiff was at that date at liberty to rescind the agreement altogether and that he had consented not to rescind in consideration of being paid interest from the 24th December 1891. The lower Court accordingly passed a decree for the plaintiff. Seemle—That time was not of the essence of the contract but held that in any case under the circumstances there was consideration for the agreement made by the defendant to pay interest from the 24th September. The plaintiff clearly regarded himself as entitled to rescind and at the defendant's request agreed to forbear to do so if the defendant would consent to pay interest from 24th September 1891. The claim of the right to rescind was undoubtedly a real one and made in good faith and the forbearance to enforce it might well be an inducement to the defendant to agree to the plaintiff's terms and the principle laid down in *Miles v. 56 ——— Averment of readiness and willingness—Covenant dependent or independent—The plaintiff and defendants entered into the following agreement dated 26th January 1881:

Under the bond executed to J M by B on the 9th October 1849 for R1 252 18 the balance left due by him in the matter of the jaggery which he undertook to supply to you R1360 remain due on this date to the exclusion of what has been paid for the amount of principal and interest for this balance you have obtained by purchase the virthi land possessed by B in Sitaparam Agraharam and the half virthi of land of his elder brother. Under such circumstances we hereby agree to pay you out of the said amount R680 within the end of May in the current year and the remaining R680 within the end of May of the ensuing year 1852 and then to get the said deeds of sale endorsed by you and the 1/2 virthi of land put into our possession as purchased by us. We will therefore pay the said amount of R1360 in two instalments and take back this sum along with the deeds of sale endorsed. In a suit for recovery of a sum of money alleged to be due under the agreement—Held that on the true construction of the contract it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to deliver or aver readiness to deliver the land to the defendants. The question whether covenants are dependent or independent or whether a certain act is or is not a condition precedent is entirely one of construction and to be determined in each case by educing the intention of the parties from the language they have used. YOUNG v. MANGALATHILLY RAMAIA 3 Mad. 125

57 ——— Independent covenants—Where defendants sub-rented an alkari farm for one year from 31st July 1864 under a machalka by which the defendants covenanted to pay monthly instalments of rent to plaintiff and plaintiff covenanted to furnish defendants with the accounts of the farm from the month of July 1864 during which period the management was in the hands of plaintiff's agent in an action by plaintiff for rent due to him and the value of arack supplied by him—Held that the covenants were independent one not being a condition precedent to the other and that therefore the non-performance by the plaintiff of the covenant to furnish accounts was not sufficient to justify the entire dismissal of his suit against the defendants there being no obligation on him to allege readiness and willingness to furnish accounts. RAMAIA v. NARAYANASAMY 3 Mad. 339

of R245477 with the defendants bank in Bombay as a loan for a year to bear interest at the rate of four and a half per cent. He was given a receipt for the said sum which stated that the money was repayable here on production of this receipt. Held that the receipt contained the terms of the contract of loan between the plaintiff and the defendants and that the production of the receipt was a condition precedent to the repayment of the money. Dias v HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION 1 L R. 14 Bom, 498 carried by two companies—Plaintiff delivered a certain quantity of jute to the India General Steam Navigation Company at Serajunge for delivery at the Eastern Bengal Railway Company a station at Sealdah and it was arranged by the bill of lading (the contract in the case) that the freight from Serajunge to Sealdah should be payable to the Eastern Bengal Railway Company at Sealdah and it was so paid upon the delivery of the goods. A portion of the jute was not delivered and this suit having been brought against the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the value thereof the Small Cause Court Judge was disposed to dismiss the suit without further enquiry on the ground of want of privity between plaintiff and defendant. Held that it was premature for the Judge to say that the suit could not lie against defendant without proceeding with the further investigation of the case and that although plaintiff might have a remedy against the India General Steam Navigation Company it by no means followed that he had none against the defendant company also. OTJENBRO MOHUN SHAKA v EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY 17 W R., 240

60 ——— Purchase in one name—

Agreement to hold on joint account—In an action by A against B for damages for non acceptance of shares by B alleged to have been bought by him of A it was shown that the shares were bought by C who after the purchase entered into an arrangement with B that the purchase should be on their (B and C) joint account. Held there was no contract between A and B and the suit was dismissed. BARROW v STEWART 1 Ind. 61. ——— Contract entered into by mistake—Power to replace parties in their original positions—He who would disaffirm a contract entered into by mistake must do so within a reasonable time and will not be allowed to do so unless both parties can be replaced in their original position. MUHAMMAD MOHIDIN v OTTAVAL UNMACH 1 Mad., 390

CONTRACT—continued4 REPUDIATION OF CONTRACT—concluded.

62. ——— Delay—Right to have contract set aside—One who repudiates a contract and seeks to have it treated as void is bound to take steps for this purpose at the earliest moment without avoidable delay. Although one of the parties to a contract was induced to enter into it by fraud of the other he is nevertheless bound by the contract until he repudiates it and thus he cannot do when he has allowed that to occur on the footing or in view of the contract, which renders it impossible that the parties should be put in status quo. In such circumstances his proper remedy is by an action for damages. ILLES MOSEIN v AMER BAKSH 22 W R., 529

5 BOUGHT AND SOLD NOTES

63. ——— Evidence of contract—Material variation—C & Co and H & Co were merchants at Calcutta. H & Co sold to C & Co a large quantity of indigo through the medium of a broker who drew up a sold note addressed to H & Co and submitted it to H for his approval when H having objected to a particular word remaining the broker took the sold note to C and informed him of H's objection. C struck his pen through the word, objected to by H placing his initials over that clause, and returned it to the broker who thereupon delivered it so altered to H & Co. The broker delivered to C & Co on the following day a bought note which differed in certain material terms from the sold note. In an action brought by H & Co against C & Co for non performance of the contract contained in the sold note the Supreme Court at Calcutta was of opinion that the sold note alone formed the contract and found for the plaintiff. Held by the Privy Council on appeal (reversing that decision) that the transaction was one of bought and sold notes and that the circumstances attending C's alteration of the sold note and affixing his initials were not sufficient to make that note alone a binding contract and that there being a material variation in the terms of the bought note with the sold note they together did not constitute a binding contract. COWI v PEXTER 3 Moore's L A 448

64. ——— Broker's bought note—A broker's bought note is not of itself evidence of a contract. It is signed by one only of the parties to complete the evidence of the contract there should also be a sold note signed by the other party showing that the buyer had duly accepted his supposed obligations. MACKEY v BIRCHENDRA SINGH [Bourke O C, 354]

65. ——— Material variation in notes—The bought note in a contract for the purchase and sale of silk chuseum was as follows—Bought by your order and for your account the following silk chuseum of Messrs. Jardine & Co. as much as they may supply of November and March bond etc. The sold note was in similar terms but stated that as much "as you can supply was sold. Held that the bought and sold notes did not constitute a contract building Mirasts Jardine Skinner & Co. to supply chussum of either the November or March bond at a 1 as TANVACO & SKINNER 2 Ind. Jur. N. B. 231

68. — *Sold note differing from bought note—Mistake in name of one of the parties to the contract—Oral evidence to show with whom the contract was really made—Specific Relief Act ss 31 34—Damages for breach of contract right of suit for—A contract intended to have been entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant was entered by a mistake on the part of the broker in the sold note as having been made between a third person and the defendant. In a suit brought by the plaintiff on the contract oral evidence was given to show that the contract was really made between the plaintiff and the defendant. The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that the mistake did not mislead the defendant and gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff contingent on the opinion of the High Court as to whether the mistake in the sold note was a bar to the plaintiff's suit for damages on the contract. Held that there was a contract between the parties for breach of which the plaintiff could sue for damages. MARONED BHOY PUDUM 222 & CHITTIRPUT SING I. L. R. 20 Cal. 854

67. — *Contract of sale—Want of assent—Broker's bought and sold notes—To contract through a broker to sell a quantity of paddy at a price stated the plaintiff firm signed the a id note This was taken by the broker to the defendant firm of which a member before signing the bought note wrote in Chinese characters not understood by the vendor a term as to quality This was to the effect that the paddy was to be without yellow grains and not wet A part delivery was made of paddy not answering this description For this the defendant firm made a part payment at a reduced rate. Of the rest they refused to take delivery when tendered because it was not of the quality contracted for. Held that the plaintiff's suit for the balance of the price of the part delivered and for damages for non-acceptance of delivery of the rest failed. If the plaintiffs—neither they nor their broker understanding Chinese—did not assent to the term written by the defendant then there was no contract entered into to buy If on the contrary the plaintiffs had assented to that term then the paddy was not of the quality required by the contract. AN SHAIN SNOX & MOORTHIA CHITTY [I. contract that the plaintiff should have possession of the Government paper when the contract is entered into; it is sufficient if he is in a position and is ready and willing to deliver it at due date. 69. — *Suit for non acceptance of Government paper—Contract Act s 30—Tender—Readiness and willingness—Action for non acceptance—Where a contract for the sale and purchase of Government paper provides for the delivery of the paper on a subsequent date it is not necessary in order to sustain an action against the buyer for non acceptance on the due date that the plaintiff should have taken the Government paper contracted for to the place of business of the defendant and then and there made an actual tender of it. JUGGERNAUTH SEW BUX & RAM DYAL [I. L. R. 9 Cal. 701]

70. — *Sale of shares for future delivery—Readiness and willingness—In a suit to recover damages for the non-acceptance of shares where the vendor had contracted to execute proper transfers and do all other things necessary on his part to transfer the shares and to bear the expense of such transfer—Held on the issue whether the plaintiff was ready and willing to perform his part of the contract that it was sufficient to show that he had in his possession at the time fixed for the performance of the contract on his part such certificates of the shares contracted to be sold as were required by the law and that he tendered the same with a deed of transfer to the purchaser to effect the transfer but that it was the duty of the purchaser himself in such case having accepted the shares to have the transfer made into his name in the books of the company. MAGABHAI HEMCHAND & MANCHA BHAI KALLJANCHAND 3 Bom. 71. — *Obligation to perform—Delivery and acceptance—Readiness and willingness—Where on the face of the contract it did not appear that either party was called upon to act first it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover unless he proved performance of or an effort to perform, his part In the absence of any indication on the part of the plaintiff that he was ready to deliver the defendant is not liable for non acceptance The readiness and willingness on the part of the plaintiff must be substantial something on which the defendant may act not a readiness and will which concealed in the plaintiff's mind. COMMERCIAL BANK & MODOSOODUN CHOWDHRY [I. to secure the profit or ascertain the loss before the Vayda day. The contracts were in the usual mercantile form and were entered into through brokers, the principals not being brought into contact with each other until after the contract was made. S's procedure was also similar. S was a mukadam and guarantee broker to the plaintiffs and he too, entered into these contracts as a speculation intending to settle them before the Vayda day but prepared if forced to do so, to perform them in kind. Held that the contracts entered on were not shown to have been agreements by way of wager. It was a highly speculative mode of doing business, but there is no law against speculation as there is against gambling. Contracts are not wagering contracts, unless it be the intention of both contracting parties, at the time of entering into the contracts, under no circumstances to call for or give delivery from or to, each other. In this case, even the defendant—accusing that he did not know with whom contracts might be made on his behalf by his brokers—must have contemplated the possibility of being called on to give or take delivery. TOD & LAKSHIDAS PURSHOTAM DAS I. L. R. 16 Bom., 441

84. — Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 30—Bombay Act III of 1860—Broker Sued for differences paid in respect of contracts made by him for defendant—Act III of 1860 (Bombay) is still in force and has not been repealed by the Contract Act. Dagabhai v. Lakshmidas I. L. R. 9 Bom. 355 followed. As between the original parties, a promissory note which has for its consideration a debt due on a wagering contract is valid and therefore not binding in the hands of the original payee. Oulds v. Harrowes, 10 Exch., 672 distinguished. In order to constitute a wagering contract neither party should intend to perform the contract itself but only to pay the differences. In order to ascertain the real intentions of the parties, the Court must look at all the surrounding circumstances and will even go behind a written provision of the contract to judge for itself whether such provision was inserted merely for the purpose of concealing the real nature of the transaction. Tod v. Lakshmidas I. L. R. 16 Bom., 441 Eskoor v. Tekatarsebha I. L. R. 17 Mad., 480 and Univ. City Stock Exchange v. Strachan, L. R., 1896 Ap. Ca., 266 referred to. The defendant employed the plaintiff from time to time as a broker to purchase Government paper and shares of the Masekji Petit Spinning and Weaving Company. The plaintiff did so to the extent of many lakhs of rupees. No delivery was given or taken but the differences only between the contract price and the price at the date of settlement (the Vayda day in each month) were paid or received by the defendant. The plaintiff now sued the defendant on two promissory notes given to the plaintiff by the defendant in respect of differences due by him in respect of the contracts thus made on his behalf. The defendant pleaded that he was not liable for the contracts being wagering contracts. It appeared from the evidence that the practice in the lazar (which was followed in this case) was for brokers to enter into such contracts in their own name and not to disclose the principals. The broker became liable to give or take delivery. The defendant stated that he did not know the persons to whom the plaintiff sold or from whom he purchased. He J. (1) on the evidence that the defendant authorised the plaintiff as his broker to contract on his behalf, but in the plaintiff's own name on the understanding that the defendant would indemnify the plaintiff and pay him brokerage in respect of the transactions entered into by him on behalf or for benefit of defendant. Accordingly the plaintiff did enter into contracts in his own name with third parties. The defendant was not directly a party to them nor did his name appear anywhere in the contracts themselves. (2) That the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the losses which he paid to third parties in respect of the contracts made by the plaintiff on the defendant's behalf, and that such losses were a valid consideration pro tanto for the notes sued upon. No doubt so far as the defendant was concerned, all the contracts were merely wagering or gambling transactions, but there was no evidence to show that, so far as the third parties were concerned, they were other than genuine. The plaintiff was not, as between himself and the defendant, the principal in the transactions. He was merely the broker with a personal liability to the third parties. There was nothing to show that as between himself and the third parties the contracts were not perfectly genuine. The non-delivery and payment of differences on hand was a matter of subsequent arrangement. If he was liable to be called upon to receive or make actual delivery then, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary a similar liability rested on the defendant himself whatever might have been the defendant's own intentions. As the contracts between the plaintiff and the third parties were not void, so the contracts between the defendant and the plaintiff to indemnify the plaintiff in respect of these contracts were also valid. The mere fact that the plaintiff knowing the defendant's position and means, must have inferred that he did not mean or intend to perform the contracts in specie was not proper without more sufficient to render the contracts invalid and not binding on the defendant. The inference of the plaintiff would not be proper as a binding agreement. PRITHVI CHETTI & MANEKJI DOSABHOY I. L. R., 22 Bom., 899

A did not perform his contract to sell, and B sued him for damages, amounting to Rs. 104,000 being the difference between the price at which he had agreed to buy and the price at which he had agreed to sell. B denied that the transactions were not

vide contracts made in the ordinary way of business and pleaded that the real contract was only to pay differences as ascertained by the price of the Government paper on the 30th of November and that such a contract, being by way of wager was void under s. 30 of the Contract Act. Held on the evidence that neither party intended bona fide purchases and sales for delivery and that, therefore the contract was void as a wagering contract. Held on appeal that the burden of proof that the agreements were wagers, i.e., that they were not in substance what they were in form lay on A as the party so alleging. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J that it being proved on the evidence that it was the defendant's intention at the time he contracted to sell to pay differences only the plaintiff either knew of this intention or he did not. In the former case the contract was a wager and therefore void and in the latter there was no consensus as to a matter which was of the essence of the contract, and therefore no valid contract. Per BIER J., that a contract is not a wagering contract unless it is the intention of both parties at the time of entering into the contracts to call for or give delivery from or to each other (see Tod v. Lakshmidas Paraholandas 1 L. R. 18 Bom. 441 and Greenwood v. Blane 11 C B 525) and that no such common intention having been proved, the contract was a valid one. *ESKOOT DOSS v. On that day B through his attorneys called upon A to retain the paper contracted to be sold by A to B in respect of that contracted to be sold by B to A and to pay the differences in the prices of the two contracts to B and subsequently sued him for the amount. Held that on the evidence B having admitted that the original contract sued on was for payment of differences only it was a wagering contract and therefore void. Held on appeal—Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR J that the above judgment should be confirmed. Per BIER J., that on the evidence it was not proved that at the time of entering into the original contract the intention of both parties was merely for payment of differences and that consequently the contract was not a wagering contract but a valid one. *VENKATACHELLALA CHETTI v. 88 — Sutta transactions—Suit to recover brokerage in respect of sutta transactions—Bombay Act III of 1865—Plaintiff was employed by defendant to enter into cotton transactions on their behalf at Dholora. The contracts for the sale and purchase of cotton were made on terms contained in a printed form which incorporated the rules framed by the cotton merchants of Dholora. These rules expressly provided for the delivery of cotton in every case and forbade all gambling in differences. In spite of these rules and the express terms of the contracts, the course of dealings was such that none of the contracts were ever completed except by payment of difference between the contract price and the market price in Bombay on the Fanda day. The plaintiff entered into numerous transactions of this kind on the defendant's behalf. He now sued to recover from them the balances due to him on account of brokerage commission and losses incurred in the said transactions. Held that the transactions were a mere gambling for differences, and no suit would lie under Bombay Act III of 1865 to recover any of the items connected with such transactions. In order to determine whether a contract is a wagering contract the Court will not only look at the terms of the written contract but also probe among the surrounding circumstances to find out the true intentions of the parties. *Universal Stock Exchange v. the plaintiff contracted to purchase from the defendant the right to receive the dividend on 50 shares of the Empress Mill at Rs 7 per share the plaintiff being under an impression that the dividend was to be declared on some subsequent day. The plaintiff deposited Rs 100 with the defendant as part payment of the purchase-money. Subsequently it was ascertained that the dividend had been already declared on 17th January 1883 (i.e. four days before the contract) at Rs 5. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to have the contract declared cancelled and sought to recover the deposit of Rs 100 with interest. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a suits or wagering contract rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction to set aside the lower Court's decision. Held that, in the first instance the plaintiff as framed not disclosing any cause of action ought to have been returned for amendment. It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract or should have contained an allegation of fraud on the defendant's part inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact" would not under s. 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) have made the contract voidable. Held also that if the contract was really a wager the deposit could not be recovered under s. 65 of the Contract Act as its nature must from the first have been known to the parties. To an agreement so known to be void s. 65 does not apply. If the contract was in the intention of both parties a wager the suit would be barred by s. 1 of Bombay Act III of 1865 which though it formed a part of Act XXI of 1843 which is repealed by the Contract Act is not being a special Act applicable to the Bombay Presidency itself repealed. It must be read with s. 30 of the Contract Act. Held also that to constitute a wager the transaction between the parties must wholly depend on the risk in contemplation and "neither party must look to anything but the payment of money on the determination of an uncertainty." But if one of the parties has the event in his own hands the transaction is not a wager. If the plaintiff's real contention was that defendant was aware of a declaration of dividends at Rs 5 per share and by keeping plaintiff in ignorance of the facts induced him to enter into a wagering agreement for payment of differences at a contract rate of Rs 7 per share then to a suit for the recovery of the deposit made to the defendant with reference to such an agreement, Bombay Act III of 1865, has no application. Wagering contracts are not illegal. They are simply destitute of legal effect. If fraud was practised on plaintiff the maxim potior est conditio defendentis would not apply. DATTA BHAI TRIBHUVANDAS v. LAKHMECHAND PANACHAND [I. L. R., 9 Bom. 358]

84. ——— Signature—Repudiation—Statute of frauds—The plaintiffs contracted with the defendant for the purchase from him of a certain quantity of hog's lard. The terms of the contract were contained in a letter which was drafted by the plaintiffs and sent to the defendant for signature. The defendant returned the letter un-signed, with two additional clauses. The plaintiffs not being able to agree to one of these clauses had an interview with the defendant when the defendant took the document away with him and subsequently on 17th May returned it signed but with the additional clauses still remaining. The plaintiffs had another interview with the defendant on 5th June during which the additional clause objected to by the plaintiffs was struck out one of the plaintiffs writing the word cancelled against that clause and the defendant putting his initials against the word "cancelled". The plaintiffs then added to the contract the words approved together with Rand C being the initials of their firm. Other alterations had been made in the document and it containing many erasures the plaintiffs on the same day sent a fair copy to the defendant for signature but the defendant wrote repudiating the alleged contract and refusing to sign the document. Held (confirming the decision of the Court below) there was no binding contract between the parties. The signature of the defendant put to the document on 17th May was not a sufficient signature by the party to be charged so as to satisfy the statute of frauds. CHARNICK v SHREORSE 8 B L R 305

85. ——— Signature—To a contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant for the purchase by the defendant of a cargo of salt the plaintiffs after the contract had been signed by the defendant added in the margin Ten days demurrage will be allowed at Rs200 per diem. Held that the addition of the words in the margin did not amount to an alteration within the rule of English law the alteration must be either something which appears to be attested by the signature or something which alters the character of the instrument. EDS v KANTO NATH SHAW I L R 3 Cal. 220

86. ——— Filling up document after signature—Execution of document—Sufficiency of signature—Where a document although blank when signed and put into the hands of one of certain parties is afterwards filled by the consent of those parties with words which had already been agreed upon by them and had in consequence of each consent been already drafted the signature to the fair copy although attached before the words were filled in is just as binding as if it was attached to the document after the words had been written down in it. ABED HOSSEIN v LALLA RAM SURUN (I L R 216)

87. ——— Addition to document—Material alteration—Where a subsequent addition to a document though unauthorized by the executant serves only to state explicitly what is already implied in the document and what the law would infer from it such addition is immaterial and does not vitiate the instrument. Interest at a penal rate should not be awarded if there be no demand for it or for a sum by way of compensation for special damage on the part of the plaintiff. TIKAMDAS JAYAHIRIDAS v GANGA KUM MATHURADAS 11 Bom., 203

88. ——— Alteration of date of bond, Effect of—Sut to enforce altered document—In suits upon two hypothecation bonds executed by different defendants the plaintiffs in the first suit sued for recovery from the defendants personally and in the second suit for recovery from the defendants and also from the property hypothecated, and in each case obtained a decree. The lower Appellate Court reversed both decrees on the ground that the bonds were vitiated by a fraudulent alteration of them in the material part viz the date fixed for payment. Held that the documents might be used as evidence of the debt between the parties and also of the creation of the charge upon the property hypothecated. It lies upon the parties who seek to enforce an altered instrument to show the circumstances under which the alteration took place. RAMASAMY KOX v BRAJANNI ATTAR RAMASAMY KON v SINTHIWATTAN alias CHINNA BHAYANI ATTAR 3 Mad. 247

89. ——— Alteration in bond used on—Materiality of alteration—Fraud—Admissibility on evidence—Sut on a bond the date of which had been altered from 11th September to 20th September while it was in the possession of the plaintiff. Fraud was not proved and the period of limitation reckoned from the 11th September had not expired. Held that the bond was void as such and was not receivable in evidence to prove the debt. CHRISTACHARI v KARIBARAYYA I L R. 9 Mad 399 followed. GOTINDASAMI v KUPPUSAMI (I L R 12 Mad. 236)

102 ——— Material alteration
Effect of—Bond Forgery—Fraud—A person who had a bond executed in his favour by one of three brothers forged the signatures of the other two brothers to the bond and brought a suit upon it in its altered form against the three brothers. The forgery having been established the Court of first instance dismissed the suit as against all the three defendants and this decision was affirmed on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court—Held that the decision was correct as a material alteration in a bond is if fraudulently made sufficient to render the bond void. A party who has the custody of an instrument made for his benefit is bound to preserve it in its original state and any material alteration of it will vitiate the instrument. Where a person brings a suit upon a document which when produced in evidence is found to have been fraudulently altered to the knowledge of the plaintiff no Court ought to allow an amendment to enable him to succeed upon it in its original state. *GOGUN CHUNDER GHOSH v. The alteration of the rate of interest in one of the clauses of a promissory note held to be a material alteration vitiating the note although the clause so altered was a penal clause to which even if unaltered the Court would not give effect. *ODEY CHAND BOODATI v. The defendant admitted in his written statement that he had received a certain portion of the consideration for the bond from the plaintiff. 106 ———

Alteration in material part—Effect of alteration as vitiating document—Vesting of interest by execution of mortgage instrument—By an agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendants' predecessors in title plaintiff undertook to sell and convey certain lands to the purchasers and to allow half the purchase money to remain at interest for three years on security of the lands sold. Plaintiff's mother was alive as also his son who was then a minor. In order to protect the purchasers from any claims by the said mother or son as against the lands agreed to be sold plaintiff further agreed to give the purchasers a bond indemnifying them from any such or other claims. Plaintiff in pursuance of the said agreement duly executed a conveyance of the lands; he also gave the purchasers an indemnity in respect of claims by his mother as against the lands. The purchasers executed a mortgage over the lands in plaintiff's favour in which the indemnity to be furnished by plaintiff was at first referred to in general terms but the document concluded with the words, 'a security should be furnished for this sum on account of the minor only'. The balance of purchase money of the minor only had been paid plaintiff brought a suit for the sale of the mortgaged land and before doing so tendered an indemnity protecting the defendants against any claims that might be made as against the lands by the plaintiff's said minor son. It was found that the words 'for the minor only' had been added to the mortgage instrument after its execution. On its being contended that the alteration was a material one and vitiated the document and that the suit being based on the altered document must fail and that the tender of a general guarantee as originally agreed upon was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue—Held per COLLIER, C.J. and BEN OJ J. (in an order calling for a finding as to whether the alteration had been made with the mortgagor's consent) that the mortgage instrument having provided for security to be given by plaintiff in general terms the addition of the words 'for the minor only' restricted the liability of the property to be given by plaintiff as security to claims made by the said minor son. It diminished the guarantee to be given by plaintiff against claims by the mother or others. It was thus an alteration in a material part of the document and would vitiate it as a basis for the plaintiff's suit unless the plaintiff could show that the alteration had been made with the consent of the mortgagors who executed the document. The finding of the lower Court was that the alteration had been made without the mortgagors' consent. Held SUBRAMANIAM AYYAR, Off. C.J. and MOOR J. (O'FARRELL, J. dissenting) that on the execution of the mortgage instrument any interest in the property comprised therein at once became vested in the plaintiff that such interest was not and could not have been directed from him by the subsequent addition of the words referred to, and that in asking for the sale of the land plaintiff was seeking to enforce not a right resting on the contract or covenant but one arising by operation of law with reference to the vested interest created by the instrument having been executed, that though reference was made in the plaint to the provisions relating to the mortgage instrument in its altered state such reference was not an essential part of plaintiff's cause of action and that the suit was not necessarily based on the altered instrument that the execution of a security bond in terms of the mortgage instrument before it was altered was a condition precedent and the suit was sustainable though no such security had been given before the institution of the suit and that (the question of damages not arising) plaintiff was entitled to a decree on the mortgage instrument which would also provide that he must furnish a proper security bond before an order absolute would be passed. Per O'FAHRELL, J.—That inasmuch as the suit was based not on the transferred right but on the altered document and as no obligation had as yet attached under the unaltered document the suit should be dismissed that the defendants' liability was contingent upon the prior execution by plaintiff of a general guarantee and not of the limited one which he relying on the fraudulent alteration had tendered that where an agreement has as to one of the parties been wholly executed, the altered contract may be given in evidence of the co-extensive obligations incurred by the other party but that here the agreement as far as it related to repayment of the purchase money was executory and contingent upon the fulfilment by the plaintiff of the prior obligation to execute a proper guarantee and that a conditional decree upon a proper security bond being executed could not be given. SUBRAMANIAM AYYAN & KRISHNA AYYAN [I. Immediately after the execution of this agreement the price of rice rose the defendant did not pay within the fifteen days and in the plaint in this suit the price of rice was calculated at 8 annas per para. Held that the bargain was unconscionable. Under the Contract Act s 74 in a case falling within its terms only reasonable compensation could be given which in the present case would be interest at a somewhat high rate. The contract in effect was that if the principal with 12 per cent were not paid on 22nd September double the amount should be payable on the 15th November. transfer—Act IV of 1872 (Contract Act) s 36—In a transaction between two persons where one is so situated as to be under the control and influence of the other the Courts in this country have to see that such other does not unduly and unfairly exercise that influence and control over such person for his own advantage or benefit or for the advantage or benefit of some religious object in which he is interested and will call upon him to give clear and cogent proof that the transaction complained of was such a one as the law would support and recognize. Where a fiduciary or quasi fiduciary relation had existed Courts of Equity have invariably placed the burden of maintaining the transaction upon the party benefited by it requiring him to show that it was of an unconscionable character and one which it ought not to disturb. The exercise of this beneficial jurisdiction is not confined to cases only between guardian and ward attorney and client father and son but the rule thus granted stands upon a general principle applying to all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another. The plaintiff who on the death of the widow of his brother became entitled to the estate of the deceased found himself resisted in his claim by wealthy relatives. He was a man without means. The defendant took him to his house kept him there found him all the money for the purpose of carrying on his litigation with his relatives in which the plaintiff succeeded. What the litigation was for mutation of names in respect of the property was pending in the Revenue Court and while plaintiff was residing with the defendant he executed the deed in favour of the defendant's brother for the nominal consideration of Rs 500 or half the property he claimed and again shortly after the mutation case had terminated in his favour he executed a deed of endowment of the remaining half in favour of a temple founded by the ancestor of the defendant and in which the defendant was interested and the result was that plaintiff was left as poor as he was when he first came into the defendant's hands. Plaintiff sued for cancellation of the deed of endowment on the ground that the same had been obtained from him by the exercise of undue influence and by means of fraud and obtained a decree. On appeal by the defendant it was held that looking at all the facts such a relation between plaintiff and defendant in the course of the year 1885 had been established as to cast upon the latter the obligation of satisfying the Court that the transaction which was given effect to by the deed of endowment was an honest bona fide transaction.

131 — Oppressive conditions in deed—Inadequacy of consideration—Where money lenders dealing with ignorant illiterate peasants made use of the neighbouring position of these peasants who were seeking to raise a sum of money for the purpose of stocking and tilling their lands to impose upon them a contract in the form of a mortgage by which they agreed to pay the principal payment of the half produce and other amounts to sell their land at a gross undervalue and one third of the amount of the mortgage debt which in itself was not more than equal to half the value of the annual produce of the land and to remain liable to the remaining two thirds of that debt with interest and even if no default should occur on their part in payment of a moiety of the annual produce or the performance of their other covenants and notwithstanding full payment of the principal to continue for fifteen years to pay the half produce of the lands to the mortgagees—Held (reversing the decrees of both the Courts below) that the deed of mortgage should only stand as security for the payment of the principal sum of Rs 300 and interest at 9 per cent and in all other respects should be set aside as inequitable fraudulent and grossly oppressive. Held also that if in execution of the reversed decrees the lands had been made over to the mortgagees as purchasers they should be restored to the mortgagors and that the rents profits and produce received by the mortgagees while in possession should be set off on account against the said principal sum and interest and that the balance should be paid by the party against whom the same might be found. Mere inadequacy of consideration unless it be so great as to amount to evidence of fraud is not sufficient ground for setting aside a contract or refusing to decree specific performance of it. But inadequacy of consideration when found in conjunction with any such other circumstances as suppression of true value of property misrepresentation or fraud surprise oppression or urgent necessity for money weakness of understanding or even ignorance is an ingredient which weighs powerfully with a Court of Equity in considering whether it should set aside contracts or refuse to decree specific performance of them. KADARI HANU v. 133 — Parties dealing on unequal terms—Inequitable contract—Assuming that the same principles are applicable here as in the English Court of Chancery the High Court held that although in a class of cases without positive fraud a contract may be set aside unless it is shown to have been made upon adequate consideration yet as a general rule before the defendant is called upon to prove that he has given full value for property sold to him the plaintiff must first make out that the parties to the bargain were dealing on terms so unequal as to render it improper for a Court of Justice to enforce any contract they may have made unless it can be shown that the contract was in fact one which a prudent person with proper advice and assistance might well have made. JUGO BURNEROO TE WAREE v. 136 ——— Unconscionable bargain—Interest—Dharta—Illiterate agriculturist—
 The High Court as a Court of equity possesses the power exercised by the Court of Chancery of granting relief in cases of such unconscionable or grossly unequal and oppressive bargains as no man of ordinary prudence would enter into and which from their nature and the relative positions of the parties raise a presumption of fraud or undue influence. The principles upon which such relief is granted apply to contracts in which exceedingly onerous conditions are imposed by money lenders upon poor and ignorant persons in rural districts. The exercise of such power has not been affected by the repeal of the usury laws. Chesterfield v Janssen 2 Yes 105 O'Rourke v Bolingbroke L R 2 Ap Cas 814 Earl of Aylesford v Morris L R 8 Ch Ap 484 Nevill v Snelling L R 15 Ch D 679 and Beynon v Cook L R 10 Ch Ap 389 referred to. An illiterate Kurmi in the position of a peasant proprietor executed a mortgage deed in favour of a professional money lender to whom he owed Rs 7 by which he agreed to pay interest on that sum at the rate of 24 per cent per annum at compound interest. He further agreed that

dharta or a yearly fine at the rate of one anna per rupee should be allowed to the mortgagee to be calculated by yearly rests. It was also provided that the interest should be paid from the profits of certain malikana land of the mortgagor and that if the interest were not paid for two years the mortgagee should be put in possession of this land. As security for the debt a six pies zamindari share was mortgaged for a term of eleven years. The effect of the stipulation as to dharta was that one anna per rupee would be added at the end of every year not only to the principal mortgage money but also to the interest due and the total would be again regarded as the principal sum for the ensuing year. Ten years after the date of the mortgage the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption on payment of only Rs 7 or such sum as the Court might determine as due to the mortgagee. At that time the accounts made up by the mortgagee showed that the debt of Rs 7 with compound interest had swollen to Rs 73 of which the dharta alone amounted to Rs 11. Held that the stipulation in the deed as to dharta was not of the kind referred to in s. 74 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) and that there was no question of penalty but that looking to the relative positions of the parties and the unconscionable and oppressive nature of the stipulation the benefit thereof should be disallowed to the mortgagee and the mortgagor permitted to redeem on payment of the mortgage money and interest no appeal having been preferred by him from the decree of the first Court making redemption subject to the payment of interest. found that advantage was taken by the plaintiff of the fact that the defendant was being pressed in the tabah for immediate payment of revenue due to induce him to execute the bond charging compound interest at the above mentioned rate notwithstanding that ample security was given by mortgage of landed property. It was also found that although under the terms of the bond the plaintiff had power to enforce the same at any time by bringing to sale the mortgaged property he had wilfully allowed the debt to remain unsatisfied in order that compound interest at a high rate might accumulate. Held that the bargain was a hard and unconscionable one which the Court had undoubted power to refuse to enforce and which under all the circumstances it would be unreasonable and inequitable for a Court of justice to give full effect to and that under the circumstances compound interest should not be allowed. Kamini Sundari Chaudhram v Kali Prasanna Ghose I L R 12 Cal 220 Beynon v Cook L R 10 Ch Ap 389 and Lall v Ram Prasad I L R 9 ALL 74 referred to. 138 ——— Contract to pay expenses of litigation—The result of the English cases regarding hard or unconscionable bargains is that in dealings with expectant heirs, reversioners or remaindermen the fact that the bargain was declined by others as not being sufficiently advantageous does not raise a presumption that it was fair and reasonable and that until the contrary is satisfactorily proved by the party trying to maintain the bargain the Court may presume that a bargain which apparently provides in the opinion of the Court for an unusually high return or for an exceptionally high rate of interest is a hard and unconscionable bargain against which relief should be granted. The doctrine of equity on this subject of such bargains is applicable in England only to dealings with expectant heirs, reversioners or remaindermen. The judgment of the Privy Council in Kamini Sundari Chaudhram v Kali Prasanna Ghose I L R 12 Cal 220 L R 12 I 4 215 does not imply that the doctrine is to be applied in India to cases except where it would have been applied in England or except where the case is in some way analogous to a case of snatching a bargain with an expectant heir, reversioner or remainderman or except there is some fiduciary relationship between the lender and the borrower although there may be no fraud or undue influence or except there is some incapacity such as infancy or effect of his bargain. For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court the obligor agreed to pay the Rs 2000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit; and, at the request of the obligor a plea for the obligee advanced Rs 700 which was applied to the expenses of the appeal. The High Court dismissed the appeal and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council he admitted his liability under the former bond. The Privy Council decreed his appeal and he obtained possession of the property in suit but declined to pay the Rs 20,000 upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time he was without even the means of subsistence that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been allowed to him that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests that there was nothing to show that having regard to the risks of the litigation he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application. Held that although there was nothing to show that the obligor could have obtained an advance on terms more advantageous to himself it was for the obligee to establish to the Court's satisfaction without reasonable doubt that he could not have done so and that this not having been established and the reasonableness and fairness of the bargain not being proved by showing that there had been difficulties in negotiating it or that others had refused it as not sufficiently advantageous to them the Court should hold the bargain to be a hard and unconscionable one which should not be enforced. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the Rs 3,000 actually advanced with simple interest at 10 per cent per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree with costs in proportion and interest at 6 per cent per annum on the Rs 3,000 interest and costs from the date of the decree until payment. *CHUNNI KARAN v. litigation—Agreement opposed to public policy—Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act) s. 23—For the purpose of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the Privy Council from concurrent decrees of the Subordinate Judge and the High Court the plaintiff appellant executed a deed of sale of certain property worth over Rs 6,000 in consideration of the vendees providing the necessary security and moneys. The plaintiff experienced considerable difficulty in procuring the means of appeal. The vendees were not professional money lenders they did not put pressure on the plaintiff but on the contrary he and his agent put pressure on them to agree to the terms of the deed. even the means of subsistence that he fully understood the nature of the deed that his agents negotiated the transaction bona fide and to the best of their powers in his interest that there was no fraud or deception on the part of the vendees and that they performed all that they undertook as regards meeting the expenses of the appeal. Under the deed the plaintiffs were liable to furnish security to the extent of Rs 1,000 and to advance Rs 500 for other necessary expenses and they did in fact furnish such security and advanced sums aggregating Rs 752. The appeal was successful. The appellant having failed to put the vendees in possession of the property conveyed by the deed and recovered by him under the Privy Council's decree the vendees sued him for possession of the property and mesne profits afterwards agreeing that the Court should in lieu thereof award them compensation in money equivalent thereto. Held that although the case was very different from cases in which persons interfered for their own benefit in litigation not their own or in which mukhtars, vakils or persons of that class of professional money lenders taking advantage of the borrower's position sued to enforce a contract obtained by them from him and although the defendant was not entitled to sympathy yet judging by the disproportion between the liability incurred by the plaintiffs under the contract and the reward which they were to obtain in the event of defendant's success it must be concluded either that they did not believe his claim to be well founded and consequently entered though unwillingly into a gambling transaction or if they believed the claim to be well founded that the reward contracted for was excessive and unconscionable and in either case the contract could not be enforced in its terms. Held also that if the doctrine of equity applicable to such cases were applied in favour of the borrower it should also be applied in favour of the lender that as there was no reason to suspect the plaintiff's motives it would be inequitable to relieve the defendant from all liability that it was only fair that he should compensate the plaintiffs for the use of their security bonds from the date when they were deposited in the High Court to the earliest date after the judgment of the Privy Council when the plaintiffs could have obtained them back that simple interest at 12 per cent per annum on the amounts of the bonds for the period would be reasonable compensation for such use that the defendant should also repay the amounts advanced by the plaintiffs for the expenses of the litigation with interest on each advance at 10 per cent from the date on which it was made to the date of the decree in the present case and that he should pay interest on the whole amount thus decreed at 6 per cent from the date of the decree till payment. *CHUNNI KARAN v. 138 — Unconscionable bargain—Interest—Dharta—Illiterate agriculturist— The High Court as a Court of equity possesses the power exercised by the Court of Chancery of granting relief in cases of such unconscionable or grossly unequal and oppressive bargains as no man of ordinary prudence would enter into and which from their nature and the relative positions of the parties raise a presumption of fraud or undue influence. The principles upon which such relief is granted apply to contracts in which exceedingly onerous conditions are imposed by money lenders upon poor and ignorant persons in rural districts. The exercise of such power has not been affected by the repeal of the usury laws. Chesterfield v Janssen 2 Ves 105 O'Rourke v Rolingbrooke L R 2 Ap Cas 814 Earl of Aylesford v Morris L R 8 Ch Ap 491 Devill v Snelling L R 15 Ch D 679 and Beynon v Cook L R 10 Ch Ap 389 referred to. An illiterate Kurmi in the position of a peasant proprietor executed a mortgage-deed in favour of a professional money lender to whom he owed Rs7 by which he agreed to pay interest on that sum at the rate of 24 per cent per annum at compound interest. He further agreed that

dharta or a yearly fine at the rate of one anna per rupee should be allowed to the mortgagee to be calculated by yearly rests. It was also provided that the interest should be paid from the profits of certain malikana land of the mortgagor and that if the interest were not paid for two years the mortgagee should be put in possession of this land. As security for the debt a six pica zamindari share was mortgaged for a term of eleven years. The effect of the stipulation as to dharta was that one anna per rupee would be added at the end of every year not only to the principal mortgage money but also to the interest due and the total would be again regarded as the principal sum for the ensuing year. Ten years after the date of the mortgage the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption on payment of only Rs97 or such sum as the Court might determine as due to the mortgagee. At that time the accounts made up by the mortgagee showed that the debt of Rs97 with compound interest had swollen to Rs73 of which the dharta alone amounted to Rs11. Held that the stipulation in the deed as to dharta was not of the kind referred to in s. 74 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) and that there was no question of penalty but that looking to the relative positions of the parties and the unconscionable and oppressive nature of the stipulation the benefit thereof should be disallowed to the mortgagee and the mortgagor permitted to redeem on payment of the mortgage money and interest no appeal having been preferred by him from the decree of the first Court making redemption subject to the payment of interest. LALLI & I AM PRASAD

It was found by the Civil Judge that the fifteenth defendant's son was engaged to be married to the second plaintiff's daughter and that the marriage was broken off on the part of the fifteenth defendant. Delivery from seller's godown in pile up to the 15th of July next. On the 10th July the vendor tendered the seed. On examination the refraction was found to be above the contract rate. It was agreed that the vendor should reclaim the seed and on the 15th July the purchasers went to take delivery of the seed which was found still to be not sufficiently cleaned. On the 16th July the vendor said that he should require a week longer for that purpose. The purchasers then cancelled the contract. In a suit by the purchasers for breach of contract, it was held (1) that the breach of the contract was with the plaintiff (2) that it was allowed for reclamation commenced from the 10th July; and that as the plaintiff had not succeeded in reclaiming

148 — Difference between articles contracted for and those tendered—Act in form of acceptance—The plaintiffs contracted to supply the defendants with from 200,000 to 300,000 f gunny bags described as No 6 quality size 40 by 25 inches, the defendants to have the option of taking bags of a larger or shorter length at proportionate prices duly giving a first right of choice to the plaintiffs delivery to be taken in August 1890. The defendants, after taking delivery of 11,000 of the bags found that the bags tendered were mixed in size some being longer and some being shorter than the contract size and refused to take delivery of the remainder. In an action for breach of contract in not accepting the bags the Court below found on the evidence that out of 2,000 bags which were examined 100 were short by from a quarter to half an inch but that the bags which were really short were very few out of a large quantity which came up to contract size and held therefore that there had been a substantial performance of the contract on the part of the plaintiffs. On appeal the Court found that the parties did not contemplate any large margin of difference in the size of the bags and that the proportion of those which differed was large enough to justify the defendants in refusing to take delivery and held that the tender of such bags by the plaintiffs was not a substantial performance of the contract. MILLEN & GOSWAMI COMPANY S B L R 459 17 W R 244

149 — Part acceptance of goods by defendant not according to contract—Rate payable for such goods—The defendants contracted to purchase from the plaintiffs 2,000 maunds of fresh clean and good up-country indigo seed guaranteed growth of season 1897 at Rs 11 per maund to be delivered to the defendants agent at Mysore all in February next. In part performance of this contract the plaintiffs delivered and the defendants agent at Mysore accepted 865 maunds of seed no objection as to quality being then taken. But when the remainder of the seed was tendered in February the defendants refused to accept it on the ground that it was not according to contract. At the same time and upon the same grounds they refused to pay the contract price for the seed already accepted and tendered instead the market price at the time of delivery. In an action to recover the contract price of the 865 maunds delivered and damages for loss on resale of the remainder of the seed the Judge of the Court below found on the facts that the seed was not seed of the growth of 1897 as far as it was reasonably possible to procure it; and that though there was evidence to show that seed of the previous season of good quality and in good preservation was occasionally mixed with the new seed and that a seed so mixed had been accepted as a performance of contracts for 1897 yet there was no evidence that under such contracts as the present the seller was by custom at liberty to mix

a seed of two crops so as to bring the sample up to an average quality and further that a custom so directly at variance with the express terms of the contract could not if proved be allowed to prevail. Held also that the defendants had waived any objection to the 865 maunds which must therefore be taken as a good delivery pro tanto under the contract and must be paid for accordingly. Held on appeal (affirming the decision of the Court below) that the plaintiffs had not delivered seed according to the contract but reversing the decision of the Court below that the contract was a contract for the delivery of the entire quantity of 2,000 maunds and that the plaintiffs could only recover for the 865 maunds as on a new contract arising at the time when the seed was accepted such contract being to pay for the seed according to its value and not according to the rate stipulated for the 2,000 maunds. MACFARLANE & CARR S B L R 459 17 W R 244

150 — Endorsement by parties on original contract—Transfer of contract—Action for non acceptance—On the 16th April 1898 the plaintiffs contracted to purchase from F M & Co of Bombay at Rs 18 per ton the entire cargo of coal per Culzean amounting to 900 tons or thereabouts. On 18th April the plaintiffs transferred the contract to the defendants and one Nanabhai Bomanasha and the following endorsement was made:—The contract to be transferred to Messrs Tullockchand and Shapurji and Nanabhai Bomanasha at Rs 20 per ton. For C M B Forbes and Selous W Tennent & Co. Underneath this endorsement the transferees wrote as follows:—Accepted 450 tons at Rs 20 per ton Nanabhai Bomanasha Accepted 450 tons at Rs 20 per ton Tullockchand and Shapurji. The Culzean arrived at Bombay with a cargo of 2,167 tons of coal on board of which it appeared that 1,300 tons had been shipped to the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Company and 867 tons to the order of the shippers F M & Co were agents at Bombay for the shippers. The defendants refused to take delivery of the coal on the ground that the contract transferred to them and Nanabhai Bomanasha was a contract for an entire cargo. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for non acceptance contending that there had been no transfer to defendants and Nanabhai Bomanasha of the original contract but a new several contract for separate portions of the cargo. Held that the joint effect of the endorsement and the original contract was that the defendants agreed to purchase 450 tons part of an entire cargo of 900 tons or thereabouts; that inasmuch as the cargo of the Culzean consisted of 2,167 tons the defendants were not bound to accept any part of such cargo and that the suit was not maintainable. Borrowman v Drayton L R 2 Ex D 15 followed. FORBES & TULLOCKCHAND MACFARLANE I L R, 3 Bom., 388 hundred full pressed bales fully good fair Kishk cotton at Rs 208 8 per candy to be delivered from March 14th to April 1st. On March 21st the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter reminding him of the contract and requesting him to take delivery. On receipt of this letter the defendant put the matter into the hands of F. The plaintiff had then no cotton of the specific kind to deliver nor did the letter refer to any particular bales. At 11 30 o'clock A.M. on March 30th, the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter enclosing a sampling order directed to an employe of Messrs M and S on whose premises the bales referred to in the order were lying. In behalf of the defendant got samples taken of the cotton and examined them but without reference on that day to any standard. He then however conceived doubts as to the quality of the cotton and expressed his doubts to the plaintiff in the evening of that day. On 31st March the plaintiffs sent the defendant a delivery order enclosed in a letter from their solicitors calling on the defendant to attend with his surveyor at 1 P.M. on that day to survey the cotton as otherwise an ex parte survey would be held. This letter reached the defendant at 11 30 o'clock A.M. and was given by him to F at noon of the same day. F applied to M to attend as surveyor but M was unable to do so. The plaintiffs had an ex parte survey held by Messrs C and B at 1 P.M. and they pronounced the cotton samples of which were submitted to them to be fully good fair Kishk cotton. While this survey was going on the defendant was on the Cotton Green but declined to attend saying that F and his surveyor were coming. Shortly afterwards F did come and subsequently wrote a letter to plaintiffs in the defendant's name stating that the cotton was not of the description contracted to be sold by them and asking for a survey. This letter reached the plaintiffs at 2 19 o'clock P.M. After this there was a discussion between plaintiffs and defendant and F. On that afternoon (the 31st March) the plaintiffs' solicitors sent a letter to the defendant stating the result of the survey and requiring him to take delivery. This was answered by a letter of next day (April 1st) from the defendant's solicitors denying that the cotton was of proper quality or that proper notice of the survey had been given alleging that the defendant had that morning attended with his surveyor and asked leave to survey the cotton which had been refused and stating that the contract must be treated as cancelled. The cotton was sold by auction on April 5th. The plaintiffs brought this suit to recover Rs 631 1 11 as damages for non acceptance of the cotton. The defendant contended that there had been no reasonable time allowed by the plaintiffs for the examination of the cotton and that a joint survey should have been held. Held that a joint survey was not necessary under the terms of s. 38 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) and that the defendant having had a period of twenty four hours for inspection had a reasonable opportunity of seeing whether the cotton offered by the plaintiffs was such cotton as the plaintiffs were bound by their contract to deliver. A purchaser of goods is not entitled to continue inspecting and examining the goods offered by the vendor until the expiration of the period for delivery. A reasonable opportunity for such inspection and examination is all that he is entitled to. PETTOSAT MORARI & JAYWADAS PITAMBERDAS

152 — Breach of warranty—

Goods not agreeing with sample—Conduct of parties—Estoppel—In a suit for damages for breach of warranty where the dispute was whether the goods tendered (shellac) were according to the contract it appeared that a sample had been taken by the plaintiffs' surveyor and referred to the selling broker to decide whether the goods from which it had been taken ought to be accepted and he decided that they should be taken at one rupee per maund less than the contract rate which awoke the parties agreed to abide by. The surveyor then went to the godown of the defendants thoroughly examined the and heard shellac and removed it to the godown of the plaintiffs. Held that after this the parties could not be allowed to raise the question whether there had been a breach of that contract and to ask for damages by reason of the goods not being of the quality contracted for. FORNADO & JAYABAIN SOODERS

153 —Alleged breach of warranty by vendor on a sale and delivery of goods—Burden of proof after acceptance following upon an examination by purchaser—Under five contracts for the sale of good Burma cutch to be delivered to a Calcutta firm in Calcutta by the vendors who knew that it was bought for the export market delivery and acceptance followed upon a searching examination of the cutch by the purchasers. The latter having sent advices of this purchase to a New York firm with which they were in partnership parcels of cutch were sold to different buyers in America to whom under such forward contracts the cutch was shipped in separate shipments by the Calcutta firm. On the arrival of the cutch objects it was taken to its quality by the American buyers who refused to take delivery. The Calcutta firm thereupon sued the vendors under the five contracts above mentioned. The burden of proof being upon the plaintiffs who had accepted the cutch after full examination in Calcutta to prove the breach of contract by the vendors by cogent evidence sufficient to rebut the presumption of due performance that arose from such acceptance. Held that this presumption was rebutted in the absence of evidence as to the treatment of the cutch on its re-shipment by the plaintiffs on the voyage from India to America and at the port of arrival. GAY KIM SWEE & J. Madras certain goods of a certain quality subject to survey before shipment at a certain price £ 0 6 Cocanada, delivery in April and May terms full advance and local exchange ½ per cent payable at Madras. This contract was contained in bought and sold notes. It was further agreed that the goods were to be delivered on board any ship P & Co. might direct at the port of Cocanada. P & Co. paid the full amount of the purchase money in January. On the 31st March P & Co. wrote to W & Co. requesting that the goods might be marked in a certain way. On the 18th May W & Co. wrote to P & Co. enclosing a letter from S N & Co. to S A & Co. of Cocanada requesting S N & Co. to hold the goods (which were said to have been purchased by W & Co. from S N & Co. and to be in godown) at the disposal of P & Co. In the letter to P & Co. from W & Co. the goods were also said to be in godown at that date. On the same day P & Co. wrote to S A & Co. enclosing a delivery order for the goods (which P & Co. stated they believed to be in godown) requesting that they might be marked in a particular way. On the 25th May S N & Co. wrote to P & Co. informing them that they held the goods at P & Co.'s disposal. On the 28th May P & Co. received this letter. On the 31st May P & Co. chartered a ship to take on board the said goods and other goods bought by P & Co. from S A & Co. and others and wrote to S A & Co. informing them that the ship would arrive about the 12th June. On the 6th June P & Co. wrote to S N & Co. acknowledging receipt of a letter which stated that only a portion of the goods to be shipped was ready. On the 9th June P & Co. received a letter from S N & Co. stating that all the goods were ready. On the 17th June the ship arrived at Cocanada. On the 21st June S N & Co. stopped payment and ceased to carry on business. No goods were delivered according to the contract. S N & Co. never had the goods to deliver between 18th May and 17th June. In a suit by P & Co. to recover from W & Co. the price paid and damages for breach of contract to deliver the goods it was contended for W & Co. (1) that the transfer of the delivery order of the 18th May amounted to a delivery of the goods. Held that as S N & Co. had neither had possession of the goods to be delivered nor had appropriated any goods to the contract the delivery order was imperoperative. (2) That the acceptance of the delivery order by P & Co. amounted to an agreement that S N & Co. should deliver to P & Co. the goods when ready and that the liability of S N & Co. was substituted for that of W & Co. Held that such an agreement could not be inferred. (3) That as S N & Co. by accepting the delivery order were estopped from denying that they had possession of the goods as against P & Co. S N & Co. were discharged as against W & Co. and therefore P & Co. had no remedy against W & Co. Held (1) that S N & Co. were not discharged as against W & Co. as S A & Co.'s representations were false. (2) that even if S N & Co. were discharged this could not affect P & Co. (4) That as P & Co. had not supplied a ship in May they had failed to perform their part of the contract and could not recover. Held distinguishing Bowes v Shand (L R 2 App Ca 455) and Restary v Sala (L R 4 C P D 239) that the presence of the ship in May was not a condition precedent to P & Co. recovering. (5) That W & Co. had rescinded the contract on the 29th June by refusing to deliver and therefore P & Co. were only entitled to recover the price paid. Held that W & Co. were not entitled to rescind the contract. Held also that P & Co. having paid in advance were entitled to a reasonable time after the 29th June to prepare to purchase other goods and were entitled to the difference between the contract price and the market price on the 1st of July as damages for the breach to deliver. SNOW v BELL.

155 ——— Sale of unascertained goods—Appropriation by vendor—Passing of property—Power of re-sale—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 107—Measure of damages—The contract was for sale by description of 15 bales of grey shirtings (to arrive) at an agreed price. It was found that the 15 bales which were tendered by the plaintiff did answer the description but the defendants refused to accept them alleging that they were wrongly marked. Under the contract of sale the plaintiffs had an express power of re-sale. After giving notice to the defendants they had the goods re-sold at auction and bought them in themselves as the highest bidders. Then they brought an action for the difference between the contract price and the price realized at the re-sale framing the suit as for loss on re-sale and not for damages for breach of the contract. Held the defendants having refused to accept the goods the property in them remained in the vendors (plaintiffs) and the re-sale had no effect whatever. To such a case as this neither s. 107 of the Contract Act nor the proviso for re-sale in the contract itself can have any application. Such power is required when the property in the goods has passed to the purchaser subject to the lien of the vendor for the unpaid purchase money. The plaintiffs were entitled to receive only the difference between the market price of the day and the contract price and that was the true measure of damages. MULL & CO v MAHOMED HOSSAIN.

On notice of the production of the goods being given to the defendant he directed the goods so appropriated to be marked and despatched for shipment according to certain instructions. The plaintiffs carried out these instructions but the goods could not be shipped as the vessels in which they were to be shipped were not available at their usual place. Held the ownership in the goods was transferred to the defendant and the

On arrival the defendant refused to pay for and take delivery of the goods on the ground that they were not the goods contracted for. After notice to the defendant the plaintiffs re-sold the goods and sued to recover the expenses of the re-sale and the difference between the price realized and the contract price with interest. Held that cl 1 of the Indent contract gave the plaintiffs a right to re-sell the goods and sue for the damages mentioned therein. Goods were re-sold at a loss and in a suit to recover such loss it was contended in defence that the property in the goods had not passed to the defendants and that plaintiffs only remedy was by way of damages. Held that a clause such as that contained in the indent came into operation notwithstanding that the property had not passed to the buyers and that plaintiffs were entitled to recover the deficiency arising from the re-sale. BEST v MUHAMMAD SAIT

Calcutta under which E accepted bills to a large amount for C upon C's promise to cover the bills before maturity. In June C ordered the defendant Railway Company to consign all goods despatched from Fyzabad to E's address and empowered E to take delivery of and give receipts for all such goods. In the same month C despatched from Patna in bags supplied by S & Co fifty five tons of poppy seed to Calcutta and sent the railway receipt to E who was therein named as the consignee. One of the terms printed on the receipt stated that goods would only be delivered to the consignee named in the receipt or to his order. In advising E of the despatch of poppy seed C informed him that it had been sold to S & Co and that delivery was to be made through T & Co and E had also seen letters which passed between C and his agents in which the following passages occurred. "Our Calcutta firm will deliver the poppy to T & Co and do your best and hurry off despatches of fifty tons of poppy the rest of the poppy and linseed can go to E." E endorsed the railway receipt to S & Co who paid the freight and carters of E and S & Co together went to the railway station and demanded delivery which the Railway Company at first promised to give but afterwards under an order from C to deliver fifty tons to T & Co and to no other party the rest of the seed to be delivered according to documents. They at T & Co's request delivered the whole fifty five tons to them. In an action by E against the Railway Company for non delivery of the seed to him—Held (per MAXWELL J) E was not agent of the vendor for the delivery of the goods. T & Co had superior title to the goods of which E had notice. Held (per COCKEN C J and MACNAGHTEEN J on appeal) the Railway Company was bound to deliver to E. The property in the goods and the right of possession was in him. He had no authority coupled with an interest which C could not revoke. He had no notice of the title of T & Co which was an equitable right only. EAGLETON v EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY

160 ——— Betrothal—Marriage—Breach of promise of marriage—Reciprocal contingent contract—Damages—Uparyaman—Hala Bhatia caste—The plaintiffs alleged that by a written agreement dated the 18th March 1880 the first defendant and her deceased son L agreed that the second defendant should be given in marriage to the first defendant who was the son of plaintiff No. 1 and that the betrothal of these two persons took place accordingly. The agreement was executed by the said L as eldest male member of his family in the name of his deceased father. In pursuance of this agreement the plaintiffs paid to the first defendant R700 as uparyaman and they presented K with ornaments and clothes of considerable value. The plaintiffs complained that the first defendant subsequently refused to carry out the contract of marriage and had married her daughter K (defendant No 2) to another person. They claimed in this suit to recover the ornaments and clothes, together with the Rs 100 paid to the first defendant as "npariyaman" and Rs 10,000 as damages. The first defendant was sued both in her personal capacity and as heir and legal representative of her son L. The first defendant pleaded that neither she nor the second defendant were bound by the betrothal agreement as they were not parties to it that the contract had been a contingent contract inasmuch as her son L had agreed to give K (defendant No. 2) in marriage to the second plaintiff only on condition that he (L) should obtain in marriage U the daughter of the third plaintiff and that L and U were accordingly betrothed that L had died in 1884 and that the contract had been thereby determined that she had been willing to renew it and had proposed that a younger son of hers (J) should be accepted as the husband of U but that the plaintiffs had declined this offer. In proof of her allegation that the contract was a reciprocal contingent contract the first defendant relied upon the following clause in this agreement—At the time when the marriages are to take place the marriages of the two girls are to be performed together. When you shall give your daughter in marriage I also am at the same time to give my daughter in marriage. Held that the agreement of betrothal was not a reciprocal contingent contract and that the first defendant had committed a breach of the agreement by not giving her daughter A (defendant No. 2) in marriage to the second plaintiff and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from the first defendant the value of the ornaments and the Rs 100 paid by the plaintiffs as npariyaman together with Rs 10,000 damages for the breach of contract. The second defendant being a minor was held not liable and the suit as against her was dismissed. MULJI TRAKESBY & COYTS

161. ——— Building contract—Breach of contract—Power of re-entry—Certificate of archt. held how far conclusive—By a building contract entered into between plaintiff and defendants it was agreed that plaintiff should erect certain premises on behalf of the defendants at the rates specified in the bill of quantities annexed. The agreement provided that defendants should pay to plaintiff at the rate of 90 per cent upon the value of work executed and materials laid down as certified by the architect and that should defendants make default in so doing for a period beyond fourteen days after the amount thereof shall have been certified plaintiff should be at liberty to suspend the works and require payment of all works executed and materials laid down. The agreement further provided that if the contractor should suspend or delay the performance of his part of the contract the defendants might through their architect give notice requiring the works to be proceeded with and in case of default on the part of the contractor for a period of twenty-eight days might enter upon and take possession of the premises. It was further provided that the decision of the architect with respect to the amount state and condition of the works actually executed or in respect to any questions that may arise shall be final. During the continuance of the works disputes arose as to the amount due to the plaintiff although certified by the architect as agreed and in consequence plaintiff refused to continue the work whereupon defendants after giving due notice entered upon the premises. Plaintiff sued for damages in consequence of the defendants having taken possession and for the balance due on the accounts. Held (1) that the defendants committed a breach of the contract by refusing to pay the full amount due under the architect's certificate (2) that the plaintiff thereupon rescinded the contract and that therefore defendants were entitled after due notice to enter and take possession (3) that in the absence of proof of collusion between the architect and the plaintiff the defendants were bound by the architect's certificate as to the amount due to the plaintiff. KUPPUSAMI NAIDU & SMITH & CO

At the date of the execution of the mortgage the Government assessment was Rs 6-8-0 but in 1872 it was enhanced to Rs 129 8 0 and a local fund cess of Rs 4 9 0 imposed in addition. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him the enhanced assessment and the cess. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover inasmuch as the defendant's liability was fixed by the terms of the mortgage which was binding although it had been executed by both parties in the belief that the Government assessment would not be increased. In 1862 J sold the land to A who again sold it to the defendant. The plaintiff as purchaser from the original mortgagors (B and R) of their alleged equity of redemption filed the present suit to redeem the property. Held that as the razinama given by B contained no reservation and as it was accompanied by a transfer of possession it had the effect of a conveyance of all the mortgagor's rights to the mortgagee. 14 ——— Champerty and maintenance—Assignment of shares in action—Illegal consideration on—A bond fide purchase of a share in a claim about to be enforced by a suit is not void under s. 23 of the Indian Contract Act and a suit may after such purchase be properly brought by the vendee and vendors as co-plaintiffs. A and B having a claim against C for Rs 1000 but not being in circumstances themselves to institute a suit for its enforcement A sold fourteen annas or fourteen sixteenths of their claim to D for Rs 1000 and a suit was then instituted by A, B and D against C. C pleaded that the sale to D was void under s. 23 of the Indian Contract Act and that A and B could not sue for two annas only of their entire claim. Held that the sale to D was not void that the suit was properly framed and that even if the sale had been void the suit by A and B was not liable to dismissal. *ABDOOL HAKIM v. 18 ——— Excise Act XXII of 1881 s. 42—License—Sub-lease—Breach of conditions—Consideration forbidden by law—Immoral consideration—Consideration opposed to public policy—The plaintiff obtained from the excise authorities a license to manufacture and sell country liquor each license containing a condition against subletting the benefits of the license. By s. 42 of the Excise Act (XXII of 1881) the violation of any condition of a license granted under the Act is made a punishable offence. The plaintiff sublet the license to defendants who on the 5th of September 1884 executed an agreement to pay to the plaintiff a certain sum of money in which was included the sum of Rs 500 which the defendants had undertaken to pay to plaintiff as rent reserved on the sublease. The plaintiff instituted a suit for recovery of the amount due to him on the agreement and it was decreed by the Court of first instance but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. On second appeal the plaintiff contended on the authority of Gaur Shankar v. Mumta Ali Khan I. L. R. 2 All 411 that his suit had been wrongly dismissed. Held that the subletting of a license to manufacture and sell country liquor having been made punishable as an offence is to be deemed as an act contrary to law within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) and the claim to recover money due on such sublease was therefore not enforceable in a Court of Justice. *Gaur Shankar v. 31 ——— Prohibiting discharge of obligation attacking under decree of Court—A became surety for certain judgment debtors whose property had been attached in execution of a decree but who had agreed with the decree holder to liquidate the amount of the decree by yearly instalments. An agreement between A and the judgment-debtors contained the following conditions: If any of the instalments be paid by the said A the obligors shall not be at liberty to liquidate the remaining instalments either from their own funds or by borrowing money but that A shall continue to pay the instalments as they fall due and shall hold possession of the estate. The judgment debtors afterwards satisfied the decree in full. Held in a suit against them by A that the above condition was void as contrary to public policy as it prohibited the discharge of an obligation which by decree of Court the judgment debtors were ordered to pay. LALL MOHUN v. PRASAD DOORBY 1 N W 137 Ed. 1873 220

32 ——— Agreement to officiate as patil—Illegal contract as opposed to public policy—Act XI of 1843—An agreement between two members of a patil family that they are to officiate in turn is not illegal as being opposed to public policy. The Court will not however compel the actual patil to vacate office under such an agreement as long as his appointment under Act XI of 1843 is unrevoked. RAJU VALAD RAM PATIL v. PAND VALAD MALHI PATIL 6 Bom., A C 243

33 ——— Agreement to remunerate vakil proportionately to the amount recovered—Public policy—Quare—Whether a special agreement entered into by the agent of a Bindu widow acting on behalf of a minor under which the vakil in an appeal he was conducting for her was to receive for his services a stated fee and in case of success a further reward proportional to the amount recovered was one which the Court would enforce. RAO SAHEB V. from the file of the Court. Held that the contract was one against public policy and could not be enforced. BAMANDAS BANERJEE v. HARSHAD SHAW [I B. L. R. S. N. 10 10 W. R. 140]

35 ——— Contract of partnership with overseer in Public Works Department—Fraud—Where an overseer in the Public Works Department who is prohibited by the rules of his office from entering into any trade or contracts with that Department enters into an agreement of partnership for carrying on business under contract with the Department such agreement is a fraud upon the public and is therefore one which a Court of Justice ought to treat as an absolute nullity. SHARODA PERSHAD ROY v. BHOLA NATH BANERJEE [I W. R. 441]

36 ——— Marriage Contract to validate Public policy—Hindu law—A contract entered into by Hindus living in Assam by which it is agreed that upon the happening of a certain event a marriage is to become null and void is contrary to the policy of the law and a suit cannot be maintained upon it. SITARAM v. ANNEEREE HEEHANNE [I B. L. R., 129 20 W. R. 49]

37 ——— Contract by person with license letting house or shop licensed—Beng. Act II of 1866—Contract against public policy—The intention of Bengal Act II of 1866 is that the person who has the license shall keep and dwell in and have the management and control of the shop or place of entertainment. A contract by which he lets the shop and the use of the license for a fixed term receiving rent is contrary to the policy of the law and comes within the rule that a contract which is illegal or is contrary to public policy cannot be enforced. JUDOOYATI SHAWA v. NOBIV CHATTERJEE SHAWA [21 W. R. 239]

38 ——— Husband and wife—Divorce—Promise of marriage—In consideration of advances of money made by N to F a married woman (both being of the Kuntli caste) in order to enable her to obtain a divorce from her husband, F promised to marry N as soon as she should obtain a divorce. N subsequently sued F to recover the advances. Held that the agreement having for its object the divorce of the defendant from her husband and her marriage with the plaintiff was contra bonos mores and therefore void. BAI YILLI v. family property in possession of defendants. The defendant admitted the receipt by them of the document for Rs. 5000 but said by them to plaintiff. A plaintiff alleged that it was given on condition of the withdrawal of a criminal prosecution. It is not that there was no consideration at all and that, at the time of its execution by them, there was no dispute or request between them and plaintiff as to a partition of family property which had been finally settled by the Civil Court at Salem in Original Suit No. 1889 and the decree in which the defendants had received Rs. 1300 and odd from the plaintiff. They denied any division of family property by mediation as also that they agreed to pay Rs. 5000 in consideration of family property in their possession also the validity of A and that it was legally binding upon them. The Court of first instance found (1) that a partition of family property was effected by mediation and the document A was executed to the mediator by defendants on account of family property in defendant's possession (2) that A was valid in law and binding on defendants and gave judgment for plaintiff for the amount sued for. Upon appeal by the first defendant—Held by the High Court that as the decree in original suit No. 2 of 1868 (finally disposed of on appeal by the High Court) settled all the rights of the parties and, as to other matters, the question of this alleged concealment or theft which the Court of first instance found to have falsely asserted there was here, therefore, no res dubia or lis incerta nor could either party believe that there was such. The final judgment of a competent Court in a suit to which the plaintiff was a party had determined the matter. Thus on the facts of the case it seemed impossible to doubt that the note was executed as a consideration for getting rid of the criminal proceedings and that as such a consideration is not only null but void under the decree of the Civil Judge should be reversed. NAMASIVAYA GAURDAN v. maintain the plaintiff and her mother till death—Held by JAMES J. that the document aimed at defeating the right of escheat of the Government and the transaction was against public policy with reference to the decision in Caralt v. Encarta Narayanappa case 8 Moore's F. & 500 but that the plaintiff being par delicto with the defendant could not recover the property. Held by KINDERSLEY J. that as no claim was made by the Crown it was not necessary to decide as to rights which may or may not be claimed by the Crown and that if plaintiff and her mother were not as apparently they were not in the possession of ordinary Hindu law was there was nothing opposed to public policy in their disposal of the property as being the sole owners and competent to dispose of it absolutely. TAMANA SINGH SIVTHIRI ANANDANOK v. MADANAT YARD 22 W. R. 517

42 ———— Agreement to dispose property—Hindu law—Public policy—There is nothing in Hindu law which makes illegal an agreement entered into by expectants to divide a particular property in a certain way on the happening of a particular contingency. Nor is such an agreement contrary to public policy. Withered v. Withered 2 Sim. 189. Harwood v. Tooke 2 Sim. 132. Hale v. White 5 Sim. 524 followed. RAM NINIVURU SINGH v. PRATAP SINGH

the bond Held the consideration for the bond was not unlawful nor was the contract illegal as being one contrary to public policy under s 23 of the Contract Act VISVANATHAN & SAMINATHAN

[I L R 13 Mad, 83]

49 ———— Contract for marriage—Consideration Suit for return of—Marriage brokerage—The plaintiff sued to recover the value of certain ornaments which he had presented to the defendant's daughter on his agreeing to marry her to plaintiff's brother. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant broke the agreement and gave his daughter in marriage to another person. He therefore asked for the restoration of the ornaments but the defendant refused to return them hence the present suit. Held that the suit was maintainable there being nothing in the plaintiff's claim which was either against morality or public policy RAMDHAT & TIMMATA

I L R, 16 Bom, 673

47 ———— Illegal agreement—Agreement against public policy—Guardian and ward—Agreement for marriage by a guardian to give a ward in marriage on payment of a sum of money—The plaintiff stated as her cause of action that a young girl had been left in her charge and had been maintained by her for a number of years that in January 1868 arrangements had been made with a Bhatta to get this girl married and that she (the plaintiff) was to receive R2 500 on the marriage that the defendant had also agreed to pay her (the plaintiff) R2 000 if she would give the girl to him in marriage and that before the marriage ceremony could be performed the defendant had induced the girl to quit the plaintiff's house for immoral purposes. She claimed R2 500 as damages. Held that this alleged agreement on which the suit was brought was immoral and against public policy and that the action was not maintainable DULABI & VALLABDAS PRADJI

48 ———— Agreement to procure marriage in consideration of a money payment—Marriage brokerage—Illegal agreement—Public policy—The defendant was the eldest of three brothers whose mother on her marriage had been put out of the Loyana caste for having married a man belonging to a different caste. The defendant was anxious that he and his brothers should be re-admitted to the caste and in 1864 he entered into an agreement with the plaintiff who was at that time one of the setias of the caste whereby the latter agreed to procure the admission of the plaintiff and his brothers and get them married to girls belonging to the caste. In consideration for these services the defendant was to pay the plaintiff the sum of R5 000 which sum was to become due on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother to a girl of the caste and to be expended in purchasing caste utensils which were to be kept for the use of the caste. The plaintiff alleged that part of this money had been already paid to him and that on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother in 1880

51 ———— Assignment of chose in action Validity of—Void contract—Transfer of mortgage bond for valuable consideration—An assignment of a mortgage-bond for a valuable consideration is not void under s 23 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) as being opposed to public policy BEVAL KANMALI & FAKIRA JIVAN

52 ———— Agreement opposed to public policy—For the purpose of meeting the expenses of a suit for possession of immovable property the plaintiff who was in straitened circumstances agreed with the defendant that the latter in consideration of paying such expenses from the Court of first instance up to the High Court should have half the property and half the means profits with all his costs in the event of success. The suit was brought and was conducted by the plaintiff and the defendant jointly and was decreed by the High Court on appeal and the defendant obtained possession of half the property. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of the half on the ground that the agreement was illegal and void. It appeared that the amount actually spent by the defendant in the former litigation was Rs 368 and that if that suit had failed he would have lost about Rs 600. It was found that the value of the half share of the property was about Rs 1 000. Held that the agreement was unfair unreasonable extortionate and contrary to public policy within the meaning of s 23 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the land in suit on payment of compensation for the advances made by the defendant in the former litigation with interest at 12 per cent per annum Channu Kwar & Rup Singh I L R 11 All 67 and Loke Indar Singh & Rup Singh I L R 11 All 113 referred to HUSAIN BAKSHI & LAKHAT HUSAIN

84—Compounding charge of fraudulent abstraction of documents—English Common Law rule—The plaintiff a resident of Pondicherry held a bond from one of the defendants (the second) for a certain sum of money. This bond the plaintiff charged the said defendant before the French legal authorities with having fraudulently abstracted from his house in Pondicherry and he obtained the arrest and extradition from the British territory of the second defendant as also of his brother the first defendant. The latter on his way to Pondicherry met the plaintiff and a settlement of accounts took place. The fifth sixth seventh and eighth defendants made themselves liable by executing the bond sued on for the sum found due to the plaintiff and took indemnity bonds in themselves from the first defendant the consideration being the agreement of the plaintiff to discontinue further proceedings in the criminal charge. The Court at Pondicherry sanctioned the agreement as a compromise by civil redress and suspended further proceedings in accordance with the law in force in the settlement. Held that the contract was enforceable the facts of the case not showing the compromise to be in its nature prejudicial as being in contravention of public policy under the Government of British India or injurious to the good order and interests of society in regard to the administration of public justice. 86—Transfer of property as compensation for criminal charge—Illegal pressure—Certain parties convicted of a criminal offence in order to avoid apprehension entered into a compromise with complainant who agreed to accept a sum of money as costs and as compensation for the damage he had suffered. They accordingly transferred to him some property in lieu of cash. Held that the transfer was not made under illegal pressure and they could not sue to set it aside. 80 ——— Agreement to withdraw charge for a b of criminal trial—Illegal
The plaintiff and the defendant for possession of a house and premises which he had bought from the latter. The latter was that the sale was made for the purpose of raising money to be given to certain third parties as a bribe to induce them to withdraw a charge of criminal breach of trust which they had preferred against the defendant. The lower appellate Court held that the defence was bad on the ground that there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff was a party to or in any way concerned in the unlawful agreement and gave the plaintiff a decree. Held that the decree was correct as there was no evidence to show either that the plaintiff knew of the agreement to suppress the criminal prosecution or that any money had been paid in pursuance of such unlawful agreement. *1 ALAKH MOHAR v. 70 ——— Criminal breach of trust—Consideration—Guarantee on condition of not taking criminal proceedings—Compounding of felony
A gave to the creditor of B a guarantee for the payment of the debts due to them by B as a consideration for this guarantee the creditor agreed to abstain from taking criminal proceedings against B for criminal breach of trust for fifteen days and by implication agreed to abstain from taking all proceedings altogether if the said debts were paid within that time. Held that such a guarantee was not to be enforced by the creditor. A man to whom a civil debt is due may take securities for that debt from his debtor even though the debtor agrees not to take criminal proceedings and he threatens to prosecute for that if he does not provide the securities. Such a promise however is to be regarded as an undertaking by the promisor to compensate the promisee for past services voluntarily rendered to him for which no consideration as defined in the Contract Act would be necessary. DHIRAJ KUMAR v BIK RAMAN SINGH I L R. 3 All, 787

5. Consideration—Partly legal and partly illegal.—The defendant a Mahomedan husband executed a kabinnama in favour of his wife by which he agreed among other things that he would maintain her and make over to her whatever money he should earn that he would never exercise any violence upon her that he would not take her away from home that it should not be within his power to marry or make any wife without her permission that he would do nothing without her permission and if he did she should be at liberty to divorce him and realize from him the amount of dunnahar (dower) and the mika would then be null and void. The plaintiff sued her husband upon this document, which was registered to recover from him all his earnings amounting to Rs 55 after deducting Rs 10 which she admitted having received from him. The lower Appellate Court held reversing the decision of the Munsif that the agreement had been made subsequently to the marriage and was though registered void for want of consideration. Held on appeal that the agreement being registered came within s 25 of the Contract Act and was not void on the ground that there was no consideration. Although some parts of the agreement might be illegal as being contrary to public policy and therefore void yet those which were legal could be enforced. (See Dyal Singh v Pande I L R. 9 Bom 17). The Court treated the suit as one to enforce that part only of the contract which was legal and considered the plaintiff entitled to recover a fair sum for her maintenance. POOROO BEEB v KEEZ BUKSH

to postpone execution proceedings.—Suit on agreement when execution is barred.—In execution of a decree dated the 28th May 1853 and r which certain persons were jointly liable the 10th February 1852 was fixed for the sale of the debtors property which was then under attachment but on that day all the debtors except one A arranged with the decree holders that the money should be paid by them in instalments. By a decree of the 12th May 1854 that the mortgage the execution proceedings should be struck off the attachment still subsisting and that if

default shall be made execution shall proceed and no objection on the ground that the decree was made in fraud of the creditors shall be made by the debtors. The terms of the arrangement were embodied in a petition for sanction and by the court which thereupon struck off the case. The debtors having made default on the 13th September 1881 the decree holder applied for execution but A who had not agreed to the arrangement objected that the application was barred under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code and the objection was held to be valid. The decree holder then sued to recover the money for which execution had been taken out basing their suit upon the arrangement made by the defendants on the 10th February 1881. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed on proof that there was a contract between the parties in good consideration and that the petition of 10th February 1881 though not a contract giving the plaintiffs a right of suit might be regarded as evidence corroborating other evidence of such a contract. DEVI SINGH v. 7 Consideration—Voluntary alienation or conveyance—Gift—A decree holder instituted a suit against his judgment debtor and the latter's son for a declaration that a gift by the judgment debtor to his son of certain property was fraudulent and that such property was liable to be taken in execution of the decree. Held that such gift having been made by the donor out of natural love and affection for the donee and in order to secure a provision for him and his descendants and therefore for good consideration and having operated and the donor having reserved to himself sufficient property to satisfy the decree the mere fact that the donor reserved to himself no property within the jurisdiction of the Court which made the decree was not a ground for holding that such gift was fraudulent and not made in good faith and for setting it aside and allowing the decree holder to proceed against the property transferred by it. The law relating to voluntary alienations explained. NASIR HUSAIN v. MATA PRASAD

8 Consideration—Agreement without consideration—The plaintiff sued to establish an agreement in writing by which the defendants promised to pay him a commission on articles sold through their agency in a bazar in which they occupied shops in consideration of the plaintiff having expended money in the construction of such bazar. Such money had not been expended by the plaintiff at the request of the defendants nor had it been expended by him for them voluntarily but it had been expended by him voluntarily for third parties. Held that such expenditure was not any consideration for the agreement within the meaning of s. 2 (d) of Act IX of 1872 and the agreement did not fall within cl. (a) s. 25 of that Act and was void for want of consideration. DURGAS PRASAD v. BALDRO

12 Promise to pay a debt barred by limitation on—Judgment debt—The holder of a decree for money dated the 22nd June 1869 applied for execution on the 23rd February 1873. In September 1869 before the decree had been executed the judgment debtor admitting that a certain amount was due under the decree agreed to pay the amount by instalments; and that if default were made the decree should be executed for the whole amount thereof. Default having been made early in 1873 the decree holder applied at once for execution of the decree. On the 5th May 1873 a petition signed by the judgment debtor was preferred on his behalf to the Court executing the decree such petition being in effect as follows: "Execution case No. 116639 of 1873. In this case the decree holder has filed an application for execution of his decree in consequence of a default in payment of instalments; the fact is that the petitioner has failed to pay the instalments simply owing to illness otherwise he has no objection to the decree holder's demand; in future he will not fail to pay instalments; he has written a letter to plaintiff asking him to pardon his lapse of promise and to agree to realize the decree money by the instalments formerly fixed and to stay execution of the decree for the present. The decree holder has granted this request the petitioner therefore prays that this petition and prays that monthly instalments of Rs 100 may be fixed and execution of the decree may be postponed for the present; in case of default by the decree holder will be at liberty to realize the instalments of the decree money with interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum. At the time such petition was preferred execution of the decree was barred by limitation." Held that a debt within the meaning

on the expiry of the five years or sooner determination of the service, they would not carry on within 800 miles from Madras any business carried on by the firm and also covenanted that on such expiry or sooner determination they would whenever requested by the firm so to do return to England. In pursuance of the agreement D and E went to Madras, and entered into the service of the firm. After it had continued for about 2½ years the service was determined by notice from the firm D and E then in violation of their said covenants refused to return to England though requested to do so by the firm and proceeded to set up and carry on on their own account, business of the same kind as that carried on by the firm. Held in a suit by the firm against D and E for damages for breaches of the said covenants and for a perpetual injunction restraining D and E from carrying on in Madras, or within 800 miles from Madras any business carried on by the firm that treating the covenant in restraint of trade as one entered into in England it could not even if valid by the law of England be enforced in India inasmuch as its object was to contravene the law of India (s. 27 of Act IX of 1872). Held further that that covenant would have been void by the law of England because the limit of the restriction was unreasonable and as no narrower limit had been mentioned in the agreement this was not a case where the covenant could have been enforced within a narrower and reasonable limit. Held also that the covenant to return to England, except so far as it operated improperly in restraint of trade was a covenant the breach of which did not in any way cause damage to the firm and therefore such breach did not entitle them to any damages. OAKES & JACKSON I.L.R., 1 Mad 134

5 — Contract in restraint of trade—Public policy—In a suit upon an agreement binding defendants to remain subject to the orders of plaintiff the head of their caste not to carry on their trade with the assistance of any other persons than their own caste and imposing penalties for non performance—Held that it would be contrary to public policy to give effect to such an agreement. MAITREY & SAMINADA I.L.R., 2 Mad. 44

6 — Contract in restraint of trade—Held that a stipulation in a contract prohibiting any sales of goods to others during a particular period of a similar description to those bought under the contract is not a stipulation in restraint of trade under s. 27 of Act IX of 1872. CARLISLE NEPHEWS & CO & PICKNATH BUCKEYAR WELLS [I.L.R. 8 Cal. 809]

8 — Contract in restraint of trade—Contract void for uncertainty—Plaintiff who was a broker agreed to give up an admitted claim to brokerage on 2000 corahs previously disposed of in consideration of defendant who was a commission agent for different kinds of goods, employing him to sell a like quantity of other corahs and all his other goods for the future employing plaintiff also as his broker for the sale of his goods. It was also agreed that if defendant did not sell the second batch of corahs through plaintiff the brokerage on the whole would be payable by defendant. Held that the agreement was not void either as being in restraint of trade or for uncertainty. BURKIN & RAMKISSEY SEAL 23 W.R., 148

9 — Contract in restraint of trade—Construction of contract—A contract under which goods were purchased at a certain rate for the Cuttack market containing a stipulation that if the goods went to Madras, a higher rate should be paid for them is not one in restraint of trade; and where the purchaser sold the goods to a person in Calcutta who in turn resold to another who took them to Madras—Held that the original purchasers were under the terms of the contract, liable to pay at the enhanced rate. PERRY & COOK & DURRICK CHAND I.L.R., 17 Cal., 820

10 — Partial restraint of trade—S. 27 of the Contract Act does away with the distinction observed in the English cases between partial and total restraint of trade and makes all contracts falling within its terms void unless they fall within its exceptions. The section was intended to prevent a partial as well as a total restraint of trade. A and B two ghat serangs entered into a contract with J and five others who carried on the business of dabashes at Chittagong for the purpose of carrying on their respective businesses in unanimity and not injuriously another's trade. The contract which was to last for three years provided inter alia that A and B were to act as ghat serangs only and do no service for ships in any other capacity than J and the other dabashes were to give A five vessels secured by them every year for him to act as ghat serang and that A was only to act as ghat serang, to the said five ships, and with the exception of ships for which he had previously acted as ghat serang he should not act as ghat serang or do any other services for ships belonging to any one else. The contract also contained provision as to the apportionment of the five ships so to be given to A amongst the various dabashes, and amongst such an agreement by J to give A the third ship he should secure. It also contained a provision for the payment of Rs 1000 as damages by any one breaking the contract to the person who should suffer by the breach. In a suit by A against J alleging a breach of the contract by the latter in not giving him the third ship as agreed, and claiming Rs 1000 by way of damages, A pleaded that the contract was void under s. 27 of the Contract Act as being in restraint of trade. Held that the contention was sound and that the suit must be dismissed.

The consideration for the promise by Y to carry on the ship was the agreement by X to give to any other business that of a platerring and that only in respect of his ship and the five agreed to be furnished to him by the defendant. The effect of this agreement was absolutely to restrain X from carrying on the business of a dabbah and to create a partial restraint in his power to carry on the business of a platerring, and whether or not (even had the latter stipulation been illegal) the contract would have been void under the provisions of s. 24 of the Act by reason of part of the consideration being the under-taking by X absolutely to refrain from carrying on the business of a dabbah it was void for both reasons under the provisions of s. 27 and X was not entitled to recover any damages under it. SUN ALI DUBASHI v. ABDUL ALI I L R. 19 Cal., 765

11. — Contract in restraint of trade—Disability of contract—One having a license for the manufacture of salt entered into a contract with a firm of merchants whereby it was provided that he should not manufacture salt in excess of the quantity which the firm at the commencement of each manufacturing season should require him to manufacture and that all salt manufactured by him should be sold to the firm for a fixed price. The agreement was to be in force for a period of five years. In a suit by the merchants for an injunction restraining him, the licensee from selling his salt to others, — Held that whether or not the first of these clauses was invalid under s. 27 of the Contract Act it was separable from the second clause which was not bad as being in restraint of trade. MACKENZIE v. 12. — Contract in restraint of trade—The defendant obtained a license to sell salt in the salt factory at Krishnapatnam and he executed an agreement by which he was to manufacture salt in the said factory as long as the excise system should be in force and deliver the same to the plaintiffs for sale and the plaintiffs were to give him a fixed price for it. Held that the agreement as far as it restrained the sale of salt to others than the plaintiffs was bad. RAJAYATTA v. SUBBAYYA I L R. 13 Mad. 475

13. — Agreement to share profits of trade—Restraint of trade—Four persons each of whom owned a gunning factory entered into an agreement which (inter alia) provided that they should charge a uniform rate of Rs 80 per paila for gunning cotton that of this sum Rs 50 should be treated as the actual cost of gunning and that the remaining Rs 30 should be carried to a common fund to be divided each year between the parties to the agreement in proportion to the number of gunning machines which each of them possessed. The agreement was to be in force for four years. The first parties had carried out the agreement but the defendant although he had carried the Rs 30 to a separate account, refused to pay the plaintiff his share of the sum. He also refused to pay the other two parties their shares. The accounts had been duly made up showing the sums which the defendant under the agreement had to pay both to the plaintiff and the two other parties to the agreement. The plaintiff sued the defendant for his share. The defendant contended that the agreement was in restraint of trade and was therefore not enforceable. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his share from the defendant. The only agreement sought to be enforced in this suit was the agreement to divide the profits. That was a lawful agreement founded upon consideration (viz. the mutual agreement to share each others' profits) and it might be enforced. Per FARRAN C.J.—I am inclined to agree with the lower Appellate Court that the stipulation that the parties to the agreement are bound to charge at the rate of Rs 80 per paila for gunning cotton is a stipulation in restraint of trade. Per CANDY J.—I am not satisfied that the agreement in question was, as a fact in restraint of trade and further to accurately quote the words of s. 27 of the Contract Act I am not satisfied that it was an agreement by which any one was restrained from exercising a lawful trade. HARBHAI MANEKJI v. SHARAFJI LARJI I L R. 23 Bom. 861

14. — Contract for personal service—Contract not to practise as physician—Restraint of trade—A agreed on certain terms to become assistant for three years to B who was a physician and surgeon practising at Zanzibar. The letter which stated the terms which B offered and which (as the Court found) A accepted contained the words the ordinary clause against practising must be drawn up. At the end of a year a disagreement took place and A ceased to act as B's assistant and began to practise in Zanzibar on his own account. B sued for an injunction to restrain him. Held that this was not a contract in restraint of trade and that B was entitled to an injunction restraining A from practising in Zanzibar on his own account during the period of three years. CHARLES WORTH v. The contract contained no provision for making the submission to arbitration a rule of Court so that 9 & 10 Will III c. 15 and 3 & 4 Will IV c. 42 s. 39 did not apply. Matter of dispute arising the defendants refused to appoint an arbitrator and an award was made by arbitrators appointed by the plaintiffs. Previous to the making of the award the plaintiffs under the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854 had the submission to arbitration made a rule of the Court of Common Pleas. In a suit in which the plaintiffs claim was for damages awarded by the arbitrators and incurred by the plaintiffs in respect of the breach of the contract—Held the award was invalid. The making the submission a rule of Court has not the effect of depriving a party of his right to revoke at any time before the award the authority of arbitrators whom he has appointed still less could it have any effect to prevent him from declining to appoint an arbitrator. Held also the contract was not within the scope of a 23 Act IX of 1872. To make an agreement conform to except 1 of that section the jurisdiction of the Courts must be excluded in all respects except the matter which is the result of the arbitrators award. Agreements which exclude the jurisdiction of the Courts until an award is made as in Scott v Avery 2 Jur. N S 815 5 H L C 811 are within that exception and are not illegal. Quare—Whether it was intended by that exception to authorize this Court to entertain a suit for specific performance of an agreement to refer to arbitration S 23 Act IX of 1872 does not forbid an action for damages for the breach of such an agreement. KOEGLER v CORINGA OIL COMPANY

[I. L. R. 1 Cal. 42]

Held on appeal that the contract was not one of the nature referred to in a 23 Act IX of 1872. That section only refers to contracts which wholly or partially prohibit the parties absolutely from having recourse to a Court of Law. The first exception in that section applies only to a class of contracts where the parties have agreed that no action shall be brought until some question of amount has first been decided by the arbitrators. Semble—A suit will not lie to enforce an agreement to refer to arbitration even in the case referred to in the first exception to a 23 of Act IX of 1872. CORINGA OIL COMPANY v KOEGLER

2. — Agreement not to appeal—Void agreement—Where in consideration of A giving B time to satisfy a decree against him held by A B agreed not to appeal against the decree and did appeal—Held that the agreement was not prohibited by a 23 of Act IX of 1872 and that the Appellate Court was bound by the rules of justice, equity and good conscience to give effect to it and to refuse to allow B to proceed with the appeal which he had instituted in contravention of it. ANANT DAS v ASHUTOSH & Co

5. — Agreement to refer to manager questions arising under agreement—Tramways Company—Agreement with conductor—Manager Power of—Jurisdiction of Courts of Justice—The plaintiff became conductor of the Calcutta Tramways Company in accordance with an agreement which amongst other things, provided that the Company will retain a sum of money deposited by the conductor together with all his wages for the current month as security for the discharge of his duties and in case of any breach by him of the rules the manager of the company shall be the sole judge as to the right of the Company to retain the whole or any part of the deposit and wages and his certificate in writing in respect of the amount to be retained and the cause of such retention shall be binding and conclusive evidence between the parties in all Courts of Justice. This alleged agreement to refer was in the following terms:—"To Bhai Dasa Morari and Dwarakadas Damodar We the undersigned two persons give in writing to you as follows—We used to reside and act in the house together in peace and harmony only a few days ago in consequence of a disagreement amongst the women I resided separately. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872)—continued

1. — Right to rescind—Refusal to perform—Time of essence of contract—Suit for damages for non delivery—S 39 of the Contract Act only enacts what was the law in England and in India before the Act was passed—viz that where a party to contract refuses altogether to perform or is disabled from performing his part of it the other party has a right to rescind. In a suit for damages for the non delivery of linseed upon a contract the terms of which as to payment were cash on delivery part delivery had been made by the defendants and a sum of Rs 1000 had been paid on account by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then made a claim against the defendants for excess refraction and the defendants thereupon refused to deliver the remainder of the linseed unless the plaintiffs paid the full amount owing for the portion that had been delivered. The plaintiffs declined to accept these terms and the defendants thereupon cancelled the contract. Held that there was not such a refusal on the part of the plaintiffs to perform their part of the contract as to entitle the defendants to rescind under s 39 of the Contract Act. *SOOLTAN CHAND v. Under the terms of the mortgage deed B was to pay Rs 500 of the advance to C in discharge of a previous mortgage executed by A in favour of C. Of the balance of Rs 500 B was to retain Rs 200 in payment of a previous debt of A due to him and the balance of Rs 300 was to be paid to A. B paid the said Rs 100 retained the Rs 200 but neglected to pay the said Rs 500 to C who sued A and recovered the debt by attachment and sale of A's moveable property. After eight years from the date of the mortgage B brought a suit to recover the interest due under the mortgage on Rs 300 only. Held that under s 39 of the Contract Act A was entitled to cancel the contract of mortgage owing to B's conduct but that he was bound to give up the benefit he had received viz Rs 300, and pay interest thereon up to the date of cancellation. B was not entitled to treat the original mortgage as a mortgage in force with all its stipulations for Rs 500 instead of Rs 300 and on that view to sue for interest alone. SUBBA RAO v. DEVI SHETTY

The defendants were to be paid at the rate of Rs 26 per head and the ship Mobile was to receive the pilgrims on the 3rd May 1888. The Sura arrived in Bombay on the 1st May with about 600 pilgrims on board and on the 2nd May the plaintiffs gave notice to the defendants that 500 of them were ready to go on board the Mobile on the next day in accordance with the contract. The defendants refused to receive the pilgrims on board the Mobile on the ground that they had come to Bombay in the Sura and that during the voyage of that ship to Bombay there had been an outbreak of small pox on board that the 500 pilgrims had been in close contact with those who had been suffering from the disease and that on the 3rd May fresh cases were occurring among the pilgrims brought from Singapore. They pleaded that under these circumstances they were bound to ship and carry the 500 pilgrims in violation (1) that it was an implied term in the contract that the 500 pilgrims should be free from small pox or other dangerous disease and (2)

that the performance of the contract had under the circumstances become unlawful (s 269 of the Penal Code and s 56 of the Contract Act) Held that the defendants were bound to carry out the contract. In the absence of proof, that a term providing that the pilgrims should be free from small pox was to be supplied by the usage of the pilgrim carrying trade there could be no reason for implying it. The possibility that some of the 500 pilgrims might have the germs of the disease in them owing to their exposure to infection might make carrying them more expensive and onerous but it was a contingency which from the very nature of the trade must have been known to the defendants and if they wished to provide a remedy they should have done so by express terms. Held also that the performance of the contract had not become unlawful. The risk of disease was not greater than would necessarily be incurred in every crowded emigrant ship. But even if special precautions were desirable under the circumstance it was for the defendants who had entered into an absolute agreement to have taken them. BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v PURATTING COMPANY

2 ——— and s 83—Location—Contract Location of—Satisfaction of contract—The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of Rs 1,300 from the defendant on a fact that after the due date of the bond an arrangement was come to between the plaintiff and the defendant by which the plaintiff agreed to accept in satisfaction of what was due to him at the time of the arrangement Rs 400 in cash and a fresh bond for Rs 700 payable by instalments and it was further found that the plaintiff never in fact agreed to accept the naked promise of the defendant to pay the Rs 400 and to give the bond for Rs 700. The defendant did not pay the Rs 400 or give the bond but pleaded that there had been a novation of the original contract by reason of the subvention of the agreement and that the suit being based on the original contract could not be maintained, and he relied on the provisions of ss 62 and 63 of the Contract Act in support of his contention. Held that neither section had any bearing on the case and that upon the breach by the defendant of the terms which he had made and upon the non performance by him of the satisfaction which he had promised to give the parties were relegated to their rights and habilitated under the original contract and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to the relief he claimed. Held further that s 6 of the Contract Act is merely a legislative expression of the common law and the provisions thereof do not apply to a case where there has been a breach of the original contract before the subsequent agreement is come to. MOYONUR KOVAL v. 2 — Mortgage—Power of sale—But to set aside sale under power of sale—Promise by mortgagee to postpone sale—The plaintiff mortgaged certain property to the first defendant on 28th December 1895. By the mortgage deed the mortgage debt was made repayable on the 28th December 1896. On the 12th May 1897 the first defendant sold it by auction under the power of sale contained in the mortgage deed and the second defendant was the purchaser. The plaintiff now sued to set aside the sale and he allowed to redeem alleging that on the day before the sale the first defendant had orally promised and agreed to postpone the sale for four days and that the second defendant had notice of this fact before he purchased the property. Held that the said promise or agreement if made by the mortgagee was not an extension of time for the performance of the plaintiff's (mortgagor's) promise to him which was to pay the mortgage debt on the 28th December 1896 but was an agreement to refrain from exercising for a stated period the right of sale arising from non performance and therefore s 63 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) did not apply. THIRUAK GAYADHAN RANADE v. He became bound to pay that which he had retained in payment of his land the date of the decree giving the date of the failure of an existing consideration within the meaning of art 87 of the Limitation Act 1877. 1 ———— Payment for which another person is liable—S 69 of Act IX of 1872 was intended to include cases not only of personal liability but all liabilities to payment for which owners of land are indirectly liable when such liabilities are imposed upon lands held by them. That section must be held to include such a case as a sub-lessee paying rent to a superior landlord for which the intermediate lessee is liable under a covenant. MOTHOORANATH CRUTTOOPADHYA v KRISTOKUMAR GHOSH

2 ———— Money paid under compulsion of law—Voluntary payment—A mortgagee of two separate properties became by purchase the owner of the equity of redemption of one of them and of this property the value was so proportioned to his payments that the mortgage debt was in effect satisfied. This mortgagee however, obtained a decree and order in execution for the sale of the other property on which his mortgage was the second. Of the latter property the plaintiffs who also represented the first mortgagee had become purchasers and they filed objections to the sale. These were disallowed and they thereupon paid into Court money sufficient to satisfy the decree in order to prevent the sale. Held that this was not a voluntary payment nor a payment of money equitably due but one made under compulsion of law i.e. under pressure of the execution proceedings. And held that this might be recovered in a suit for a money decree the remedy not being confined to the execution proceedings. DULICHAND v RAMKISHEN SINGH

3 ———— Reimbursement of person paying money due by another in payment of which he is interested—Purchase of mortgaged property—M and R conveyed certain property to S by a deed of sale in which the vendors asserted themselves to be in possession of the property and no mention was made of the property being mortgaged. There was nothing to show that the purchaser purchased a mere equity of redemption nor that he was aware of the mortgage. Before S obtained possession of the property the mortgagee sued to enforce his lien and obtained a decree and attached the property in execution and it was advertised for sale. S satisfied the decree which was equal in amount to the purchase money and brought a suit to obtain possession of the property. The Court of first instance decreed the claim conditionally on the payment of the purchase money to the defendants but the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree being of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to an unconditional decree and its decree was affirmed in special appeal. MAHA ALI v MAHOMED SAIB KHAN

On its being contended that defendant was under no obligation to provide for the expenses of his brother's daughter's marriage—Held that defendant was liable the marriage having been properly performed. Held further that the suit was maintainable though it had been brought by the mother of the bride and not by the bride herself. Sembis—That the matter was within the meaning of s 69 of the Indian Contract Act interested in making the payment which had given rise to the action. 1. ——— Illegal collect on of cess—

Bom. Act III of 1869 s. 8—Suit to recover cess fraudulently levied— The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wasta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869 s. 8. The defendant contended that in consequence of a demand from Government he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated and was therefore entitled under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not a person interested in the payment of the money made by him to Government within the meaning of s. 69 of the Contract Act assuming that a portion of that sum was demanded by Government in respect of the plaintiffs' wasta lands and that they were bound by law to pay it to Government. Held further that the defendant did not lawfully make the payment within the meaning of s. 70 of the Act inasmuch as he did so fraudulently and dishonestly. *DESAI HIMATSING v. (Bom.) Act VII of 1863 ss. 2 & 6—Inamdar—Suit for contribution— The plaintiff was the jaghirdar of a village in which the defendant held certain land as inamdar on the annual payment of a certain quit rent. The plaintiff's jaghir was in point of time subsequent to the defendant's inam. Ever since the time of the jaghir the ancestors of the defendant (and after them the defendant himself) paid the quit-rent to the successors of the plaintiff and after them to the plaintiff himself. In 1869 the summary settlement was introduced into the village under B. mby

Act VII of 1863. Under s. 9 of that Act a notice was served upon the plaintiff by the Collector in respect of the village and he accepted the settlement provided in ss. 2 and 6 of the Act. Government, accordingly, granted the village to him at the summary settlement of two annas in the rupee of the full assessment. No notice was served upon the defendant under the Act nor did the plaintiff inform the defendant of the notice which the plaintiff had received in respect of the village. The certificate issued by the Collector to the plaintiff previously to the grant of the sanad regarding the settlement contained the following passage:—Before the villages (Vasu and Sanya) were granted in jaghir lands were held by patta moudars over which the jaghirdar has no right. They are entered in the sanad only for the purpose of receiving the settlement and paying it over to the Sarkar. In 1877 the plaintiff sued the defendant for the amount of three years' summary settlement which he (plaintiff) had paid to Government on account of the defendant's land. Held that ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) did not apply to the case. *KAMALUDDIN v. A failed to pay the amount of C's decree, and B therefore sued him for the balance of the purchase money and obtained a decree. In the meantime C had the property attached in execution of his decree against B. A thereupon paid the amount of C's decree. B subsequently took out execution of his decree against A for the balance of the purchase money and A paid the amount of the decree. A then sued B to recover the amount which he had paid in satisfaction of C's decree against B. Held that A was entitled under s. 70 of the Contract Act 1872 to recover such amount, B having enjoyed the benefit of the payment and the same not having been intended to be gratuitous. Scoble— That the case came within the provisions of s. 69 of the Contract Act and of the principle laid down in *Deutschland v. 6 ————— Meaning of lawfully —

Mortgage—Decree enforcing hypothecation—Satisfaction of decree by person not subject to legal obligation thereunder—Suit for contribution brought by 3rd person against judgment debtor—Gratuitous payment—The widow of D a separated Hindu hypothecated certain immovable property which had belonged to her husband. The immediate reversioners to D's estate were his nephew S and the three sons of his brother O. After the widow's death the mortgagee put his bond in suit unloading as defendants S two of S's four sons and the three sons of O. Only the three last mentioned persons resisted the suit and the mortgagee obtained a decree directing the sale of the mortgaged property in satisfaction of his claim. From the operation of this decree S was wholly exempted and his sons were made liable only to pay their own costs. Before any sale in execution of the decree could take place the sons of S paid the amount of the decree into Court thus saving the property from sale. They subsequently sued the sons of O for contribution in respect of this payment. It was found that at the time when the payment was made S was a member of a joint Hindu family with the defendants and that his sons the plaintiffs had at that time no interest in the property by transfer from him. Held that at the time of the payment the plaintiffs could not properly be regarded as in the position of co-mortgagors with the defendants as to have an equitable lien upon the property they had saved from sale that it was not a case of a payment which the defendants were bound to make in which the plaintiffs were interested within the meaning of s 69 of the Contract Act; and that therefore the fiction of an implied request by the defendants to the plaintiff to make the payment could not be imported into the case and the plaintiffs were not entitled to contribution. Held also that there was no such relationship between the parties as would create or justify the inference of any right in the plaintiffs to look to the defendants for compensation so as to make s 70 of the Contract Act applicable and that if the plaintiffs as mere volunteers chose to pay the money not for the defendants but for themselves they could not claim the benefits of that section. The principle of the decision in Panchari Singh v. Ali Ahmed I L R 4 All 53 has been recognized and provided for in the Transfer of Property Act. By the use of the word lawfully in s 70 of the Contract Act the Legislature had in contemplation cases in which a person held such a relation to another as either directly to create or reasonably to justify the inference that by a suit done for another person the person bringing the suit was entitled to look to the person to whom the money was due for whom it was done. JAN TALIB KHAN v. K eventually established her title to the property obtained possession and recovered the rents from the tenants and B was obliged to refund the same. Subsequently B sued K to recover the sum which he had paid on account of revenue. Held that the claim did not fall within the provisions of ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act and the fact that the plaintiff had been a loser by his wrongful act or that the defendant had been benefited by the payment he made would give him no right of action against her. TINKU CHARI v. In such suit it was contended that the payments were merely voluntary and that the plaintiff could not recover them. Held that the plaintiff was interested in making the payments and was therefore entitled to recover under s 69 of the Contract Act. Held further that s 70 of the Contract Act applied to the case inasmuch as the word does in that section included payments of money and also that the plaintiff was entitled to recover under s 9 of the revenue sale law as he believed in good faith that his interest would be endangered by a sale taking place. The liability of a landlord under s 9 of the revenue sale law to recoup a person paying Government revenue for him does not depend upon the question of whether the money was originally deposited or not but accrues upon its being credited in payment of the arrears. SMITH v. It was afterwards decided, in a suit between the parties that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any share in the patta and that the defendants were entitled to the whole sixteen annas thereof. Subsequently to this decision the defendants in paying up the arrears of revenue due on the patta took the benefit of the payment made by the plaintiffs on the 8th of March 1876 and paid in only as much as together with the previous payment made up the whole arrears. In pursuance of this agreement B paid a sum of money to A but upon discovering that the alleged will was not a will at all sued to recover back the money so paid by her. Re sale Notice of Right of unpaid vendors—No nominal damages—The defendant purchased from the plaintiffs a cargo of Watson's Hartley steam coal at Rs 21 per ton to arrive by ship Grecian but on its arrival the defendant on being called upon to do so refused to take delivery on the ground that the usual certificate that the coal was what it was stated to be did not accompany the cargo. The plaintiffs thereupon gave notice to the defendant that unless delivery were taken the coal would be sold on his account and at his risk, and on the defendant repeating his refusal to take delivery the plaintiffs caused the coal to be sold and it was purchased in the name of M & Co for Rs 13 per ton.
In a suit which was stated in the plaint to be for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs on the re-sale the Court found that the plaintiffs themselves were the real purchasers and that the sale had taken place without proper notice and under the circumstances was invalid.
Held both in the lower Court and on appeal that the plaintiffs had by the way in which they had dealt with the coal rendered themselves accountable to the defendant in respect thereof and that notwithstanding the defendant had committed a breach of the contract in refusing to take delivery of the coal the plaintiffs were bound to give an account of the coal and prove that they had sustained a loss on the re-sale and on their omission to do so they were not entitled to recover any damages. Held on appeal per MARBY J
that the plaintiffs were not entitled to put aside the sale as invalid and treat the case as one for damages for breach of contract. Under the circumstances they were not entitled to even nominal damages. The mere shipment on board the Grecian
did not pass the property in the coal to the defendant
under s 77 of Act IX of 1872. Per POTTER J— Whether by virtue of the contract and the subsequent appropriation and shipment the property in the coal passed or did not pass to the defendant within the meaning of s 84 or s 83 of Act IX of 1872 even if the sale were invalid the plaintiffs were not entitled to suing their conduct in dealing with the coal and the concealment of their interest in the purchase and in the absence of satisfactory evidence of what ultimately became of the coal to recover any damages. HUGHAN V

*Penalty—Suit by a joint proprietor for arrears of rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s 29 (b)—Kabuliat executed
prior to—Covenant for a higher rate—Enhancement of rent—Bengal Rent Act (VIII of 1869) s 5—In a kabuliat executed in 1881, it was stipulated that upon the expiry of the term of seven years fixed therein a fresh lease should be executed that should the defendant cultivate the lands without executing a fresh kabuliat he would pay rent at the rate of Rs 4
higha (a rate much higher than that fixed for the term).
No fresh kabuliat was executed on expiry of the term
and the plaintiff a part proprietor collecting rent separately brought this suit for arrears of rent at the new rate of Rs 4. The defendant objected inter alia that he plaintiff being a part proprietor, was not entitled to sue for enhanced rent and that the stipulation for the higher rate was a mere threat and not intended to be carried out. The first Court gave a decree at an enhanced rate or an addition of two annas
in the rupee in terms of s 29 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. On appeal the Subordinate Judge dismissed the whole suit on the ground that the suit being one for enhanced rent and the plaintiff a part proprietor the suit did not lie. Held that the Bengal
Tenancy Act having been executed before the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed, the present case did not come within the operation of that Act and the plaintiff although a part proprietor could bring this suit. But
though a part proprietor could bring this suit But
Chunder Chakrabarty v Girdhar Dutt I L R

Ghose JJ (PRINCEP J dissenting)—That the additional rent was intended to be enforceable only on default to execute a fresh kabuliat and the so-called agreement to pay at the enhanced rate of Rs 4 was in the nature of a penalty. Held by PRINCEP J—That the plea that the rate of Rs 4 was a penalty was not taken by the defendant in his written statement, and in any case the stipulation did not come within the purview of s 74 of the Indian Contract Act and the suit was not for compensation for breach of contract but for rent at a rate which the defendant has agreed to pay from a certain time. Held also, that s 29 (d) of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no retrospective effect and does not apply to the present kabuliat which was executed before the passing of that Act. That a Bengal Act VIII of 1869 did not bar an agreement
by occupancy raiyat to pay whatever rate he pleased.

1. — s 78—Government currency note Theft of—A Government currency note was stolen from A and cashed by B in good faith for C. On the conviction of C for theft the Magistrate ordered the note to be given to B. Appeal of the Sessions Judge who was of opinion that he was not competent to interfere as a Court of Appeal under s. 419 of the Criminal Procedure Code but submitted the case for the orders of the High Court. Held that the provisions of s. 78 of the Contract Act did not apply as the change of a currency note for money is not a contract of sale and that as the note came honestly into the hands of B the order of the Magistrate was right. EMPEROR v. JOHANNES MOCHI I.L.R. 3 Cal. 379

2. — Government currency note Goods—A Government currency note is not goods within the meaning of the Contract Act. IN THE MATTER OF MITCHELL I.C.L.R. 339

1. — s 78—Sale of goods—Ascertained goods—Transfer of ownership—Contract Act s 86—Breach of warranty—Ordinary diligence—A contracted with B to sell him 975 maunds of rice the whole contents of a certain golah at Kallygunge (near which place B resided) at a certain rate. B paid to A certain earnest money and agreed to remove the whole of the rice after weighing on or before a certain date. B transferred his contract to C who through his servant took delivery from A of 130 maunds paying to A Rs. 1000 but subsequently refused to take delivery of the residue as he alleged it to be of inferior quality to that contracted for. The golah was accidentally burnt and the residue of the rice destroyed. In a suit by A to recover from B the balance of the purchase money (after deducting the payments made) under the contract—Held that the sale was complete and the ownership with the risk of loss in the rice sold passed to B under ss. 8 and 86 of the Contract Act because the contract was for ascertained goods for which B had paid earnest money and taken part delivery and that it was not open to B to rescind the sale on alleging and proving a breach of warranty on the part of A unless he could bring the case within the provisions of s. 19; but that he was precluded from so doing because he might have discovered the inferiority of the quality of the rice by using ordinary diligence. SHOSHI MOHUN PAL CHOWDHURY v. B & Co. took delivery of and paid for only one bale but rejected the others. M & R brought a suit for the price of the four bales rejected. Held that the property in the goods did not pass to the defendant by the terms of the contract nor was the delivery that was taken by him of the one bale a delivery of part of the goods within the meaning of ss. 78 and 93 of the Contract Act. The suit therefore did not lie. Held also that the question whether the defendant was entitled to refuse the goods—in other words whether the goods were according to the contract or not—was one that was unnecessary for the purposes of the present suit but it would have been otherwise if the suit were one for damages on the ground of the defendant's refusal to accept the goods. A purchaser's right to reject goods by reason of their not answering the description in the contract may be independent of the question whether the property in the goods has passed to him or not. MITCHELL REID & Co. v. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872)—continued

1 ———— except 1—Possession of goods by person other than owner—Title conveyed by vendor to vendee—The plaintiff let to D a piano on hire on the following terms—At Rs30 per month if duly paid for and kept three years shall then become the property of hirer. These terms were embodied in a voucher which was signed by D. The monthly hire was not regularly paid and the plaintiffs sued for and obtained a decree for a portion of the hire up to May 1873. Subsequently in that month D sold the piano to the defendant who obtained delivery of it in June. In a suit by the plaintiff in trover for conversion of the piano the judge found that the defendant acted in good faith. Held that the possession acquired by D was not possession by consent of the owner within the meaning of s 108 of Act IX of 1872 except 1 and that he did not by sale to the defendant transfer the ownership in the piano to him. Except 1 of s 108 does not apply where there is only a qualified possession such as a hire of goods has or where the possession is for a specific purpose. GREENWOOD v. HOLQUETTE 12 B L R 42 20 W R, 467

2 ———— Possession with consent of owner—Bailment—Bailee—Sale by bailee of goods bailed—Title of vendee—The general rule laid down by s 108 of the Contract Act that no seller can give to a buyer a better title than he has himself is qualified by except 1 to that section. But the possession contemplated by that exception does not extend to every case of detention of chattels with the owner's consent. The exception has particular relation to the cases of persons allowed by owners to have the indicia of property or possession under such circumstances as may naturally induce others to regard them as owners and constituting some degree of negligence or defect of precaution imputable to the true owners. Where, however, the detention of a chattel is allowed for a particular limited purpose there is not a possession such as is required by the exception. In the case of a gratuitous bailment of a chattel the possession remains constructively with the owner. S left with C a buffalo and a calf to be taken care of during his absence from home. C sold the animals to M. S sued to recover them. Held that the bailment by S to C was a gratuitous one or else a mere custody by C for S that S was therefore at the time of sale in constructive possession of the animals and C could not transfer to M an ownership that he had not himself. SHANKAR MURLIDHAR v. 1. — Custody of servant—Possession—Pledge of goods—A servant entrusted by his mistress with the custody of goods pawned them during her absence. The mistress sued in trover for the goods. Held that the custody of the servant was not "possession" within the meaning of s. 178 of the Contract Act and that if he was to be regarded as having taken the goods into his possession for the purpose of pawning them the case came within the second proviso to that section and that accordingly the action would lie. HIDDOMOYE DABEE DABEE v SITTARAM, HIDDOMOYE DABEE DABEE v SOOBUL DAS MULLICK

G having thus obtained the jewellery took it to K at his residence which was out of the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, and pledged the jewellery to K for Rs. 6,000. In a suit brought against G and K to recover the jewellery or its value G did not appear and K alone defended the suit. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the jewellery from K under s. 178 of the Contract Act G having obtained it from the plaintiff by an offence or fraud within the meaning of that section. KARTICK CHURN SETHY v GOPALKISHORE PAULIT

[I. L. R. 3 Cal. 264]

3. — Pledge—Husband and wife—Possession required for valid pledge—The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant the value of certain ornaments pledged with the defendant by the plaintiff's deceased wife. The plaintiff and his wife had lived together and the latter with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff had charge of the jewel-case containing the ornaments in question which however belonged exclusively to the plaintiff. Without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff his wife pledged these ornaments with the defendant as security for the repayment of certain promissory notes passed by her in favour of the defendant. After her death the defendant claimed payment of the promissory notes from the plaintiff. The plaintiff refused to pay and sued the defendant for the value of the ornaments. Held that the plaintiff's wife had not in the beginning, nor did she subsequently acquire such possession as would validate the pledge by virtue of the provisions of s. 178 of the Contract Act. To create a pledge under that section the pledgor must be in juridical possession of the goods merely in fact will not suffice. SEAGER v HUEMA HESSA

1 CO SHARERS LIABILITY OF

1 Liability under decree for costs—Division of liability—A suit having been brought before a Subordinate Judge against co sharers in a joint property for contribution on account of costs levied from plaintiffs in a suit which had been preferred by all the co-sharers (plaintiffs and defendants) together a decree was given ordering the defendants to contribute per capita in equal shares. On application made to the Subordinate Judge's successor a review was granted and additional evidence called for as to the respective shares of the parties in the property. Held that the parties were liable for contribution according to their respective interests in the property and not simply per capita MURRAY ALI v. TITUZUL HOSSAIN 18 W R., 78

2 Allegation and proof of specific liability—In a suit for contribution where a joint decree cannot be passed the specific liability of each co-sharer must be not only alleged but clearly established PITAMBER CHITKARBUTTY v. BHUTIA NATH PALLET 16 W R., 63

3 Unequal distribution in execution of decree—Proportional liability—In execution of a decree for an enhanced rent amount the hold rs of a jote jumma, the landlord put up for sale and caused to be sold a taluk which was also the joint property of the same parties. One of these parties accordingly sued others of them on the ground that his share of the property sold exceeded the lands occupied by him in the jote jumma, and asked the Court to give him a joint and several decree against all the defendants for the entire amount of the difference. Held that plaintiff could not be entitled to such a decree but should have asked that the defendants might be directed to contribute to him in proportion to their respective shares if his claim was well founded. But as defendants allowed that although plaintiff held that small quantity it was compensated for in other ways it was a plain suit to show that he did not derive from or by virtue of his share in the jote jumma a profit or interest

sued the mortgagor and the plaintiff for the mortgage money claiming to recover it by the sale of the portion of such estate purchased by the plaintiff. Having obtained a decree the mortgagee caused a portion of such portion to be sold in the execution of the decree. In order to save the remainder of such portion from sale in the execution of the decree the plaintiff satisfied the judgment debt. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for contribution. Held that assuming that the mortgagee by not including the defendants in his suit upon the mortgage bond had put it out of his power to proceed at law by another suit on the basis of the same bond against the properties in the possession of the defendants as purchasers it did not follow that the plaintiff's equitable right to recover a fair contribution from the defendants on the ground of his having paid the whole debt due to the mortgagee was thereby invalidated. JAGAT NARAIN v. 28 — Joint mortgage—Purchase of share in mortgage at sale in execution—T and D in May 1867 jointly mortgaged their respective two liswas shares of a certain village. In August 1877 the mortgagee sued to recover the mortgage money by the sale of the mortgaged property and obtained a decree. Before this decree was executed T obtained a decree against D in execution of which his two liswas share was put up for sale on the 20th June 1878 and was purchased by A. Subsequently the mortgagee applied for execution of his decree and D's two liswas share were attached and advertised for sale in execution thereof. In order to save such share from sale A on the 20th June 1878 satisfied the mortgage decree. He then sued P Debtor's representative to recover half the amount he had paid by the sale of D's two liswas. Held that *inasmuch as when A discharged the whole amount of the mortgage debt he not only became entitled to a contribution of half such amount from P but inasmuch as the rights of the mortgagee were satisfied as to the two liswas share of D by the decree as claimed TANCHAM SINGH ALI AHMAD

He afterwards issued execution of the other moiety against C and compelled him to pay. C now sued B for recovery of the proportion of the amount paid by him to A but which according to the valuation of the respective properties should have fallen into the share of B. Held that the debt due upon the mortgage bond was a general burden upon the two properties, for which no portion of those two properties was more liable than the other. Held also that, as between the plaintiff and defendant the liability was not joint but several in proportion to the respective values of the properties and that the plaintiff having been compelled to pay money for which the property of the defendant was legally liable was entitled to recover the amount from the defendant. BULAN CHANDRA MADAK v. In the case no suit for contribution will lie. If it did lie in the former suit it would not pay of wrong in that case but would be a joint debt claim of right and not a claim of equity that they had a right to what they did then and may have a right of contribution in the future.

In each case the Court should enquire what share they each took in the transaction because according to circumstances one or more of them might be excused altogether or in part from contributing—as for instance one of them might have acted as a servant and by the command of the others; or the others might have been the only persons benefited by the wrongful act; in which case those who were benefited or who ordered the servant to do the act would not be entitled to contribution. S. 23 of Act XV of 1877 does not apply to a case in which the persons to whom a right of suit is assigned after the institution of the suit obtains leave to carry on the suit. *SUGUR SINGH v. 52. — Unintentional wrong-doer

Ignorance of illegal act—An objection to the attachment and sale of certain immovable property raised by one who claimed to have purchased the same at a sale in execution of a prior decree was disallowed on the ground that under the prior decree the rights of one only of the present judgment debtors had been sold and purchased by the objector. In accordance with this order two-thirds of the property under attachment were sold and the objector thereupon brought a regular suit for a declaration of his right as a purchaser of the whole property in execution of the prior decree. To this suit he impleaded as defendants the decree-holder and the judgment debtors. The suit was decreed and in the result the decree-holder alone was compelled to pay the whole of the costs. Subsequently he brought a suit for contribution in respect of these costs making defendants to the suit (i) B one of his co-defendants in the previous suit personally and as heir of A who was another of these co-defendants, (ii) N and (iii) S these two having sued in the character of heirs of A. Held that inasmuch as the rule preventing one wrong doer from claiming contribution against another was confined to cases where the person seeking relief must be presumed to have known that he was acting illegally and in this case there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff in attaching and advertising the property for sale in execution of his decree knew he was doing an illegal act but the inferences were all the other way he was fully entitled in law to maintain the suit and to recover from the defendants the proportionate amount of the costs which he had to pay for them. *Meerjweather v. That suit was decreed with costs the whole of which were realized from G. In a suit for contribution brought by G against S and A the lower Appellate Court found that G S and A had conspired in setting up a false defence in the former suit in order to defeat P's claim. CONVERSION—concluded

1 ——— Stolen notes—Two notes are stolen from A which B (not a bona fide holder for valuable consideration) tenders to C in payment for certain articles. C not knowing B refuses to deal with him whereupon B brings D who is known to C and the purchase is made by him. Held that the part which D performed in the transaction amounted to a conversion of the notes to his own use and that he is liable to A. KISSORMOHUN ROY v. RAJIBAR SEN 1 Hyde 283

2 ——— Appropriation of goods as to which there is dispute—Delivery to party with out title—K received into his godown certain goods belonging to the plaintiff and in charge of his servant, concerning which there was a dispute between the plaintiff's agent and B of which circumstances K was aware and he advanced money to B on the security of such goods which were subsequently delivered to B and sold by him with the acknowledgment of K and notwithstanding the plaintiff's servant objected to it delivered them to the purchaser. Held that K was liable for damages at the instance of the plaintiff in an action for conversion of the goods. ANANT DAS v. KELLY

[I N W Part 7 p 107 Ed 1873 194]

3 ——— Trespass on land—Conversion of moveables lying on land—Civil Procedure Code s. 47—Defendants having forcibly taken possession of plaintiff's land upon which was (1) standing timber and (2) logs of timber lying stored on the ground, plaintiff had in a prior suit recovered possession and damages. Subsequently to the institution of such prior suit defendants (1) cut and removed certain standing trees and (2) removed the logs which lay stored on the ground. Upon plaintiff bringing a second suit to recover damages on both grounds, objection was raised as to the logs that a claim for their value might have been included in the former suit since their conversion was effected when the plaintiff was dispossessed of the land upon which they lay and that under s. 43 no claim could now be made in respect of them. Held that a trespass on a piece of land is by itself no proof of any conversion of moveables lying upon the land at the time that the trespass takes place that notwithstanding plaintiff's eviction from the land possession of the timber lying stored upon it should be presumed to have continued in him in the absence of proof of any act on the part of the defendant with special reference to such timber and showing unequivocally that the plaintiff was entirely deprived of the use of them and that conversion of the logs was not effected by the trespass, but only by their removal subsequently to the institution of the previous suit. MORI v. a Hindu marriage ceremony with S a Brahman girl of eight years of age in 1850. The marriage was never consummated nor was the consummation ceremony performed. In 1851 A K was converted to Christianity. S refused to live with him because he was an outcaste and in 1857 S renounced all claims on him or his estate. In 1859 A K went through a Christian form of marriage with M. In 1881 A K died intestate and possession was taken of his estate by the Administrator General. S claimed the estate from the Administrator General. Her suit was dismissed on the ground that A K having died an outcaste and degraded and his degradation not atoned for under Hindu law no right of inheritance remained to her. Before judgment was delivered S died and the suit abated. In a suit filed by the Administrator General to have the estate administered by the Court the claimants were (1) the father of A K (2) the brother of A K undivided from his father and (3) the executor of M. Held that S was the wife of A K when he went through the form of marriage with M and that but for the fact that S had relinquished her rights S would have been entitled on the death of A K to such portion of his estate as the law assigned to her as his widow. Held also that under a 35 of the Indian Succession Act 1865 the father of A K was entitled to the whole of the estate. ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF MADRAS v. ANANDA CHARI. I L R 9 Mad. 468

In 1873 no partition having been made A died. Held that J did not take the whole estate on the death of A by survivorship. TELLES v. SALDANHA. [I L R 10 Mad 80]

5 ——— Native Christians—Change of religion—Law applicable to converts—Succession—Inheritance—Where in consequence of the conversion of a person from one form of religion to another the question arises as to the law to be applied to such person that question is to be determined not by ascertaining the law which was applicable to such person prior to the conversion but by ascertaining the law or custom of the class to which such person attached himself after conversion and by which he preferred that his succession should be governed. LASTIMOS v. GOVILVES. [I L R 23 Bom 539]

6 ——— Hindus becoming Mahomedans—Succession of property—Held that the question as to succession of property between parties who though originally Hindus subsequently embraced the Mahomedan religion and professed that religion for successive generations must be disposed of under the Mahomedan law and the plea of usage opposed to Mahomedan law must not be recognized. SUMMIST KHAN v. KADIR DAD KHAN. [Agra F R 39 Ed 1874 29]

1 ——— Hindu convert to Christianity—Law governing converts—Hindu law—Upon the conversion of a Hindu to Christianity the Hindu law ceases to have any continuing obligatory force upon the convert. He may renounce the old law by which he was bound, as he has renounced the old religion or if he thinks fit he may abide by the old law notwithstanding he has renounced the old religion. The profession of Christianity releases the convert from the trammels of Hindu law but it does not of necessity involve any change of the rights or relations of the convert in matters with which Christianity has no concern such as his rights and interests in and his powers over property. The convert though not bound as to such matters either by the Hindu law or by any positive law may by his course of conduct after his conversion have shown by what law he intended to be governed as to these matters. 8 ——— Converts from Hindu to Mahomedan religion—Custom as to inheritance—The general presumption arising from the intimate connection between law and religion in the Mahomedan faith is that the Mahomedan law governs converts from the Hindu religion to Mahomedanism. But a well established custom in the case of such converts to follow their old Hindu law of inheritance would override that general presumption and a usage establishing a special rule of inheritance as regards a special kind of property would be given the force of law even though it be at variance with both Hindu and Mahomedan laws *MAHOMED SIDICK v. 9 ——— Sunni Borak Mahomedans—Conversion Effect of—Hindu converts to Mahomedanism Custom and usage of—Inheritance among such converts—Native Christians—Law applied to Native Christians prior to Indian Succession Act (X of 1865)—Burden of proof—The Sunni Borak Mahomedan community of the Dhandhuka Taluka in Gujarat are governed by the Hindu law in matters of succession and inheritance. Held therefore that in this community a widow is entitled to succeed to her husband's estate to the exclusion of a daughter or a step daughter. As to the law governing Hindu converts to Mahomedanism the following principles may now be regarded as settled—(1) Mahomedan law generally governs converts to that faith from Hinduism; but (2) a well established custom of such converts following the Hindu law of inheritance would override the general presumption (3) This custom should be confined strictly to cases of succession and inheritance (4) If any particular custom of succession be alleged which is at variance with the general law applicable to these communities the burden of proof lies on the party alleging such special custom. If evidence is given as to the general prevalence of Hindu rules of succession in a Mahomedan community in preference to the rules of Mahomedan law the burden of proof is discharged and it then rests with the party disputing the particular Hindu usage in question to show that it is excluded from the sphere of the proved general usage of the community. Among Native Christians certain classes strictly retain the old Hindu usages others retain these usages in a modified form and others again wholly abandon them. Before the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) the Christian convert could elect to attach himself to any one of these particular classes and he would be governed by the usage of the class to which he so attached himself. Abraham v. Abraham 9 Moo I A 195 These same principles are applied to the case of Hindu converts to Mahomedanism such as Abojas and Cutchi Memons BAI HAJI v. BAI SANTOK

But although that is a good ground for questioning the propriety of a prosecution it is not a ground for questioning the legality of a conviction. QUEEN v AGHEET LALL

17 W R. Cr. 48

24 ——— Irregularity in criminal proceedings—Presjudging defence—Upon the single charge of wrongful confinement preferred under s. 347 of the Penal Code before a Joint Magistrate the prisoners raised a defence justifying the confinement on the ground that the persons confined had been caught by them under circumstances which led to the belief that they had committed house breaking by night with intent to commit theft. Enquiry having been made the Magistrate convicted the prisoner not only for wrongful confinement, but disbelieving the defence for fabrication of false evidence and for bringing a false charge. The prisoners were tried by the Sessions Judge and found guilty on all three charges at one and the same time. Held that the conviction on the last two charges was illegal as by adding the additional charges the Magistrate had really prejudged the defence to the first charge. Where the Court without having first heard the evidence for the prosecution examines the witnesses for the defence he commits an irregularity but if the prisoners are not materially prejudged thereby the conviction will not be set aside. IN THE MATTER OF TURIBULLAH

Act XX of 1847 s 12—The plaintiff a bookseller in 1884 brought out a new and annotated edition of a certain well known Sanskrit work on religious observances entitled Vartra having for that purpose obtained the assistance of Pundits who recast and rearranged the work introduced various passages from other old Sanskrit books on the same subject and added foot notes. In 1885 the plaintiff registered the copyright of this work. In 1886 the defendants printed and published an edition of the same work,
the text of which was identical with that of the plaintiff's work which moreover contained the same additional passages and the same foot notes at the same places with many slight differences. Held that the plaintiff's work was such a new arrangement of old matter as to be an original work and entitled to protection and that as the defendants had not gone to independent sources for their material but had pirated the plaintiff's work they must be restrained by injunction. Held also that an account of the net profits made by the defendants by the sale of the plaintiff's book could be ordered notwithstanding the provisions of a 12 of Act XX of 1847 as the result of the account would be to give to the plaintiff
what he could have claimed as damages under that

18 ——— Ground for setting aside conviction.—Police Act V of 1861 s 29—Offence under Penal Code—That the facts proved would also constitute an offence under a section of the Penal Code seems to be no reason for quashing a conviction under the special law Act V of 1861 QUEEN v KASSIMUDDIN 8 W R Cr 55

19 ——— Subsequent evidence.—A valid conviction arrived at by a Magistrate who had jurisdiction in the matter cannot be set aside simply because subsequent to the trial and conviction, fresh evidence has been discovered which may tend to convict the accused of an offence other than that for which he was convicted QUEEN v PANDITAYAL MAHARA 21 W R Cr 47

20 ——— Conviction under sanction obtained after trial.—Want of jurisdiction—A conviction having been set aside as arrived at without jurisdiction no sanction to the prosecution having been obtained from the Court against which the offence was committed formal sanction was obtained the accused re-arrested and without being called upon to plead ordered to undergo the sentence previously passed Held that the whole of these proceedings were illegal IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF EDOO KHANSAMAH 24 W R. 21. ——— Irregular proceedings of Magistrate—Illegal conviction under Stamp Act—Conviction and sentence for an offence under the Stamp Act (XXXI of 1860 s 26) reversed on reference by the Sessions Judge as the proceedings of the Magistrate who tried the case were highly irregular REG v DEVSANVAT DIN SHIVRAM SANVAT 3 Bom. 22. ——— Irregular proceedings by Magistrate—A conviction and sentence for criminal breach of trust as a public servant reversed owing to irregularities in the preliminary enquiries and irregular procedure as to the examination of the prisoner in the Court of Session. Rejection of the prisoner in the Court of Session. 3 Bom Cr 51

23 ——— Dispute between civil suitors—Improper prosecution—Illegal conviction—As a general rule one of two parties to an impending suit ought not to put the Criminal Law in motion as against the other in matters connected with the suit or if he does so the hearing of the criminal case ought to be postponed until the suit is concluded But although that is a good ground for questioning the propriety of a prosecution it is not a ground for questioning the legality of a conviction QUEEN v AGHEET LALL 17 W R Cr 46

24 ——— Irregularity in criminal proceedings—Prejudging defence—Upon the single charge of wrongful confinement preferred under a 342 of the Penal Code before a Joint Magistrate the prisoners raised a defence justifying the confinement on the ground that the persons confined had been caught by them under circumstances which led to the belief that they had committed house breaking by night with intent to commit theft. Enquiry having been made the Magistrate committed the prisoner not only for wrongful confinement but disbelieving the defence for fabrication false evidence and for bringing a false charge. The prisoners were tried by the Sessions Judge and found guilty on all three charges at one and the same time. Held that the conviction on the last two charges was illegal as by adding the additional charges the Magistrate had really prejudged the defence to the first charge. Where the Court without examining the witness evidence for the prosecution examines the witness evidence for the defence he commits an irregularity but if the prisoners are not materially prejudiced thereby the conviction will not be set aside IN THE MATTER OF TURIBULLAH 4 C L R. 338

1 ——— Infringement of copyright—Fe dease—Where there is no original matter in the work the strongest evidence of servile imitation and piracy must be afforded before an action for an infringement of copyright can be successful. Ross v. SAC & THACKER & CO 1 Hyde 9

2 ——— Annotated edition of an ancient religious work—Originality—Colourable imitation—Injunction—Damages—Account—Act VI of 1847 s 12—The plaintiff a bookseller in 1834 brought out a new and annotated edition of a certain well known Sanskrit work on religious observances entitled Vitray having for that purpose obtained the assistance of Pundits who re-cast and re-arranged the work introduced various passages from other old Sanskrit books on the same subject and added foot notes. In 1880 the plaintiff registered the copyright of this work. In 1886 the defendants printed and published an edition of the same work the text of which was identical with that of the plaintiff's work which moreover contained the same additional passages and the same foot notes at the same places with many slight differences. Held that the plaintiff's work was such a new arrangement of old matter as to be an original work and entitled to protection and that as the defendants had not gone to independent sources for their material but had pirated the plaintiff's work they must be restrained by injunction. Held also that an account of the net profits made by the defendants by the sale of the plaintiff's book could be ordered notwithstanding the provisions of a 12 of Act XX of 1847 as the result of the account would be to give to the plaintiff what he could have claimed as damages under that section. *GANGAYISHTH SRIKISHOR DAS v. 4. ——— Translation—Jurisdiction—Cause of action—Stat 6 s 61 c 45—Act XX of 1847 s 8—Order for books sent from Bombay to Delhi—Registration of copyright—Notice of disputed proprietorship—The plaintiffs were publishers in London. The defendant carried on a printing and publishing business at Delhi. Between the years 1849 and 1891 the defendant translated certain English works (e.g. Tidhamter's Misarur, Barward Smith's Algebra etc.) into the Urdu language for the use of native students and sold and distributed copies of such translations in various parts of India. The plaintiffs alleged that they were the proprietors of the copyright in the said books and they sued in 1894 for an account of their ownership and that the said printed and sold by the defendant were an infringement of the said copyright and for an injunction. It appeared that in June 1891 the plaintiff's agent who was then in India instructed a Bombay firm of 9 to order copies of the said translations from the defendant. A letter was accordingly sent by S to the defendant at Delhi requesting him to send the books to Bombay by value payable post which the defendant did and he received payment for them from the post office at Delhi. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction and he denied that he had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright. Held that no part of the plaintiffs' cause of action arose in Bombay and that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction. The act of S in paying for and receiving the goods formed no part of the defendant's offence which was completed when he posted the books at Delhi. The English Copyright Act (Stat 5 & 6 Vic c 45) extends to all parts of India. Having regard to s 15 of that Act it is clear that a person who infringes copyright must be sued if he offends in India not only within the limits of that country but also in that part of India in which the offence has been committed. See also s 13 of the Indian Act XX of 1847. Held also that translations are not copies and that the defendant by translating the books had not infringed the plaintiffs' copyright. The plaintiffs had registered themselves as the proprietors of the copyright of the books in question both in London and in India. The defendant had not given notice of his intention to dispute the plaintiffs' copyright as required by s 8 of Act XX of 1847. Held that the plaintiffs' copyright in the book had been established. MACVILLAN & SHANMUGA ULAMA M ZAKA

5 — Form of registration — Selection of poems Copyright in — Infringement of copyright by publication of copy before registration — Assignment of copyright previous to registration — Limitation of suits for infringement of copyright — Stat 5 & 6 Vic c 45 — The plaintiffs the partners of a firm M & Co were the proprietors registered under 5 & 6 Vic c 45 of the copyright of a selection of songs and poems composed by numerous well known authors which was prepared by one P and originally published in 1861 since the original publication the book ran through several editions one of which was published in the year 1881. The book was registered under the provisions of the above statute on the 8th February 1889 the name of both the publisher and proprietor being entered in the register as M & Co. the firm's address being given and the date of the first publication was entered as the 19th July 1861. The poems contained in the book were arranged by P not in the nomenclature order of their production but in gradation of feeling and subject and at the end of the book were given some notes critical and explanatory. On the 15th January 1899 the defendant published at Calcutta a book containing the same selection of poems and songs as was contained in P's book. The arrangement however of the defendants book differed from P's in that the poems of each author were placed together and in order of their composition. The poems the defendant printed for sale which were contained in the work by the original author but which were omitted by

P and in another poem one line. In many places there were differences of reading in the two books and in more of punctuation. In the defendant's book some of the titles to the poems which had been assigned thereto by P and not by the original authors appeared as well as good many of P's notes some with acknowledgment and some without. With each poem the defendant gave a mass of notes critical and explanatory and he also prefixed to the poems of each author a biographical notice. The suit was instituted on the 27th February 1890 and the plaintiffs complained that the publication of defendant's book constituted a breach of their copyright and prayed for the usual relief by way of injunction and damages. They contended that although the copyright in the works of the original authors had long lapsed, they were entitled to the copyright in the selection made by P. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that there could be no copyright in such a selection; that if any existed the defendant's book did not infringe it; that the plaintiffs' book being registered as first published in 1861 and the infringement charged being in respect of the edition of 1889 and there being no evidence to show that the same selection was contained in the latter as in the former edition the plaintiffs were not entitled to the relief prayed for; that the author of the plaintiffs' book being P in whom the copyright would prima facie be and the property being registered as in the plaintiffs' firm the registry was bad as the assignment of the copyright to the plaintiffs was not shown; that the registration was also bad as the entry merely contained the name and address of the plaintiffs' firm and not the individual names and addresses of the partners of the firm; that the publication of the defendant's book having been before the date of registration the suit would not lie; and that the suit was barred by the special limitation provided by s 26 of the Stat 5 & 6 Vic c 45. Held that such a selection could be the subject matter of copyright; the true principle applicable to such cases being that one person is not at liberty to use or avail himself of the labour which another has been at for the purpose of producing his work or in other words his property. Held further that the defendant's book constituted a piracy of the plaintiffs' book and had infringed their copyright and that they were entitled to the relief they sought. Held also that in the absence of any evidence to the contrary it was reasonable to assume that successive issues of a book of this kind and of the same name are substantially the same book; that it was unnecessary that the registry should show an assignment of the copyright by P to the plaintiffs. Held in re Dicks L.R. 10 CA D 217 followed; that the registration was not bad by reason of the name and address of the partners of the firm not being given; Law v. Routledge *33 L.J. These lands were subject to simple mortgages executed in 1873 upon which decrees were obtained in 1884 and had been sold in execution of these decrees in 1887. The co-sharer lumberdar having obtained a decree in a Court of revenue against the mortgagors under s 83 (g) of the N W P Rent Act (XII of 1881) for recovery of the arrears of revenue paid by him sought to execute that decree under s 177 of the Act by sale of the lands which had been sold in 1887 and thereupon the auction purchaser at that sale objected under a 178 and the objection having been overruled brought a suit as authorized by s 181 in a Civil Court to establish his title to the lands and to have them protected from sale in execution of the Court of Revenue decree. This suit was decreed and the decree not having been appealed against became final. Subsequently the co-sharer lumberdar brought a suit in the Civil Court in which he claimed a decree for enforcement of lien by sale of the land for the amount of the Court of Revenue decree and for a declaration that the said lien which is on account of Government be declared preferential to the mortgages of 1873 the decrees thereon of 1884 and the sales under those decrees of 1887. He claimed this lien not only in respect of the arrears of Government revenue paid but also in respect of future interest. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD J dissenting)—(1) That the Legislature had not given or recognized in the North Western Provinces any such right of charge or lien in favour of a person paying Government revenue as was claimed here or provided any means by which such a charge could be enforced and that any such charge would be at variance with the policy and intention of the Government as disclosed in its legislative enactments. 22. *Limitation Act 1877 arts 99 and 132—Suit to recover assessment paid by a co owner of property from other co owners—In 1868 the uncle of the plaintiff brought a suit (No 176 of 1868) against five members of the undivided family to which the defendants in the present suit belonged and obtained a money decree in execution of that decree he attached and sold certain land in which all the members of the defendants' family were interested. At the sale he purchased the land himself and was put into possession. In 1873 he began to pay the assessment upon the whole property. Subsequent litigation took place between him and the defendants family pending which the plaintiff separated from his uncle and obtained the property in question as his share. The result of that litigation was a decree by the High Court on the 23rd September 1879 declaring that the plaintiff's uncle was only entitled to the interest of the five members of the family who had been defendants in his suit (No 176 of 1868) in execution of the decree in which the property had been sold. The plaintiff brought the present suit in 1883 against the other members of the family to recover their proportionate share of the assessment for the years 1875–1878 during which period he had paid the whole assessment. He prayed for a sale of their interest in the land. Both the lower Courts held that the payment of assessment did not create a charge on the property and that the plaintiff having omitted to sue within three years from the date of the payment made by him the present suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court—Held confirming the lower Court a decree that the suit was barred. The plaintiff paid the assessment as full owner of the property and it was entirely by his own action that the defendants had been excluded from the property and did not pay their quotas of the assessment. Under those circumstances the payments could be regarded as salvage payments so as to make them a charge according to equity justice and good conscience upon the shares of the other co-owners. *Achut Ramchandra Lal & Hari Kanti I L R, 11 Bom. 313

*Use of joint property as between co-owners—Rights amongst themselves of co-sharers of joint property where there is a profitable use by one of them without others being excluded—Ferry worked by one of the co owners of land—Property does not cease to be joint merely because it is used so as to produce more profit to one of the joint owners who has incurred expenditure for that purpose than to the others where the latter are not excluded. Joint property being used consistently with the continuance of the joint ownership and possession without exclusion of the co sharers who do not join in the work there is no encroachment on the rights of any of them as regards common enjoyment so as to give ground for a suit. The defendant a co sharer in village lands without claiming to restrain competition acted upon the right that a ferry may be established in India by a person on his own property taking toll from strangers and that he may acquire such a right by grant or user over the property of others whether a co sharer with them or not. He used property that he owned jointly with the plaintiffs his co-sharers excluding none of them. As no grant was ever made to him he could only have set up an exclusive right by showing that he had either dispossessed them or had had adverse possession for twelve years or that he had used the ferry for twelve years as of right. The question however of any exclusive right in the defendant had not arisen. For the parties being co owners the defendant could not make use of the joint property in a way quite consistent with the continuance of the joint ownership and joint possession. Watson & Co v Ramchand Dutt I L R 19 Calc 10 I L R 17 I A 110 distinguished in regard to the exclusion of co sharers which there took place and referred to as to continuance to be exercised by Courts in interfering with the enjoyment of joint estates as between their co owners. *Lachmizwar Singh & Manowar Hossain I L R 19 Calc 253 I L R 19 I A 48

Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief claimed and that the claim for joint possession without partition was maintainable. *Watson & Co v Ram Chand Dutt I

The other co-sharer remained entitled to claim that this possession was held partly for him. The present suit was brought upon two agreements purporting to have been made in 1870 between the two co-sharers while proceedings to obtain the above decrees were pending to the effect that whereas both had claims against the talukdar, one only was to sue him the other paying half of the costs and being entitled to receive half of what might be decreed. The Judicial Committee upon the evidence concluded that the Appellate Court attributing too much to certain omissions and acts on the plaintiff's part which were more or less explained had erred in reversing the decree of the first Court which maintained the agreements depriving the plaintiff of his costs in that Court only MUHAMMAD YUSUF v MUHAMMAD HUSAIN

27 ———— Altering property without consent of co-sharers—Growing indigo—Several persons jointly held lands which were not divided by metes and bounds but in specified shares. One of the sharers held a lease out to a third party or interest in the lands. The leasees sowed indigo on the joint lands. The other sharers brought a suit to restrain the lessee of their co-sharer from growing indigo on the land. It was held that a co-sharer cannot use the joint lands so as to alter the condition of the property as regards the other sharers' interests without their consent. That indigo as a crop being valueless for joint use is a detriment the lease must be restrained from growing it with out the consent of all the proprietors. C. VIDYARATHI SINGH

29 ———— Cultivation of indigo by one co-sharer without consent of others—Injunction as between co-sharers—Practice of the English Courts in granting injunctions—Applicability of—W while in possession of an entire mouzah as ghadar had under an arrangement with the proprietors built factories and cultivated indigo by reclaiming a quantity of waste land. On the expiration of his lease W who still held a portion of the mouzah in 1874 from a 2 anna co-sharer continued to cultivate indigo on the khas lands as before and disregarding the opposition of the 14-anna co-sharers claimed an exclusive title to do so. The 14-anna co-sharers thereupon brought a suit against W for a permanent injunction prohibiting the defendant from sowing indigo upon the khas lands with out the plaintiffs' consent and also for a general injunction to prohibit the defendant from throwing any obstacles in the way of plaintiffs holding permanent possession of the lands. The Court below granted an injunction prohibiting the defendant from growing indigo on the khas lands without the consent of the plaintiffs. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction but having regard to the circumstances under which the defendant cultivated the lands it was necessary to vary the injunction granted by the Court below by making it an injunction restraining the defendant from excluding by any means the plaintiffs from their enjoyment of the khas lands in the lands. I AM CHAND DUTT v WATSON & CO [I L R 15 Calc 314]

But held on appeal to the Privy Council (reversing the above decision) that the resistance being made by the co-sharer in occupation simply with the object of protecting himself in the profitable use of the land in good husbandry and not in denial of the other's title such resistance was no ground for proceeding on the part of the other to obtain a decree for joint possession or for damages; nor would grant an injunction be the proper remedy. As the Courts in Bengal in cases where no specific rule exists are to act according to justice equity and good conscience on its being found that where land was held in common between the parties one of them was in fact acting in part of the land which was not actually used by the other it would not have been consistent with this rule to restrain the former from proceeding with his proper cultivation but to make compensation at a proper rate in respect of the exclusive use by and benefit of the one who alone was carrying on cultivation.

In January 1881 plaintiff sued to prevent the defendant from growing indigo on the land and for khas possession on the ground that the lease of A's share having expired the defendant was not entitled to retain the land for the purpose of growing indigo under the lease given by B. Held that the plaintiff having by his own act become the owner of both shares he could not as owner of one share exercise a right which he was precluded from exercising as owner of the other share and that the suit should have been dismissed. HOLLOWAY v MUDDUN MOHUN LALL undivided property of a joint Hindu family is entitled to claim joint possession of a portion of the property and need not sue for a partition. Where it appeared that the parties to the suit each held parcels of the undivided family property in exclusive possession and the plaintiff asked to be put in joint possession with the defendant—Held that he was entitled to a decree for joint possession. A coparcener is entitled to a joint benefit in every part of the undivided estate. RAMOHANDBA KASHI PATKAR v. DAMODHAR TRIMBAK PATKAR I. L. R. 20 Bom. 487

67. — Joint tenant—Partition—A joint tenant is not entitled to khas possession of any portion of a joint and undivided property without a batwara. HUREE DYAL GOHLO MOJUMBAR v. GOBIND CHUNDER PAL [17 W. R. 387]

68. — Arrangement as to occupation of joint property—Suit for profits of portion allotted to another—An arrangement came to between the joint owners of land not being a joint Hindu family by which some parts of the property were to be exclusively in the possession of one or other of them as sufficient to bar one of them from suing for the profits derived from any portion allotted to the exclusive possession of any other. ODDOR TABA CHOWDHURANEE v. KHAJA ABANOOZLAH [22 W. R. 180]

69. — Arrangement for exclusive possession of one co-sharer—When one co-sharer of a joint family is allowed by the other members of the family to have separate and exclusive possession of family property for a long period of years—such for instance as would give him a right on a batwara taking place to insist on having the land which he has enjoyed allotted to him—the other co-sharers must be taken to have knowingly given him the opportunity of creating subordinate rights or allowing such rights to grow up and they cannot be permitted afterwards without showing that they have been deceived in the matter suddenly to start up and repudiate such subordinate rights. JOTUN ROR v. BHECHUK MEAN 20 W. R. 288

70. — Liability for rent of some shareholders taking exclusive possession of house—The co-sharers in a house who continued to occupy the whole house to the exclusion of one co-sharer after notice that he would charge them rent for a share of the house were declared just as liable to pay rent to the co-sharer as they would be for rents of any other species of property. CHUD DEBKANT ROR v. GORENEN DEBIA 6 W. R. 17

71. — Exclusive use of portion of property—Effect of an rights of the others—By tacit agreement co-parceners in a joint property may have temporarily an exclusive use of different portions of it without prejudice to the common rights of all or to the right of each or any of them to enforce at pleasure a partition of the whole. YUSAF ALI KHAN v. 72. ——— Adverse use of land by co-sharer—Held that the defendants as joint proprietors with the plaintiff could not by the use of the land with the tacit assent of the plaintiff create a right contrary to his interest nor would their use of it before they became co-proprietors operate to create any such right. JAHANORY DEO NARAIN SINGH v UMBICA PERSHAD NARAIN SINGH [17 W R. 74]

73. ——— Exclusive possession by one co-sharer—Adverse possession—Exclusive possession by A of property which originally had been admittedly joint does not per se amount to adverse possession as against A's co-sharers. The Court should further ascertain whether A's exclusive possession was due to his title being really a separate one from the plaintiffs and could not be accounted for by the fact of some arrangement having been come to at a previous time between the parties. ASAD ALI KHAN v AKBAR ALI KHAN 1 C L R. 364

74. ——— Possession by one co-sharer—Adverse possession—The circumstances of a case may show that mere occupation and enjoyment by one co-sharer does not per se constitute an adverse possession as against the other co-sharer. In this case the exclusive possession of one was held not to be adverse to the other. ASAD ALI KHAN v AKBAR ALI KHAN 1 C L R. 364 followed. BARODA SUNDARI DEVI v ANSODA SUNDARI DEVI [3 C W N. 774]

75. ——— Adverse possession—Proof of intention to set up adverse possession—When one co-sharer sets up as against another adverse possession of land which had previously been waste but at some former time had been occupied and then been admittedly held jointly it is for him to show that he has held possession in such a way as to give distinct notice to his other co-sharers of his intention to set up a title adverse to them. RAKHAL DAS BUNDOPADHYA v INDU MOYEE DEBI [1 C L R. 155]

(d) LEASES BY ONE CO-SHARER

80. ——— Lease by co-sharer of his own share—Enjoyment of share of by lessee—An undivided shareholder is not prohibited by law from granting a lease of his share to a third person; all that the other co-proprietor can insist upon is that the lessee should be prevented from dealing with the subject of the lease in any way different from that in which the lessor his co-proprietor could deal with it. A joint shareholder or any lessee of a joint shareholder is at liberty to contract with the rights of the zamindar for any lawful purpose even without the consent of the other co-proprietors. MACDONALD v LALA SHIB DIAL SINGH PAURRY 21 W R. 17

81. ——— Long possession under lease—Acquiescence—Presumption of authority—Long possession under an authentic pottah from one sharer without interference or disturbance from the others legally warrants the inference that the grantor had authority to bind his co-sharers. HINDU v ARADHUN MUNDUL 10 W R. 389

82. ——— Right of ejectment—Where land is held jointly and there is no partition one part-owner cannot insist on the ejectment of a person who has been holding under the other part owner for 16 or 17 years. DISASTRA KURMOKE v JUGGURUNDU KURMOKE [14 W R. 183]

83. ——— Right of lessee of one co-sharer to hold possession without consent of others—Right of ejectment—In a suit by a co-sharer for ejectment of a lessee who was holding over after the expiration of his lease at the end of 15 years after the expiration of his lease at the end of 15 years and after sufficient notice the defendant pleaded a pottah from the plaintiff's shareholder under which he was entitled to remain to the end of 1257. Held that as defendant's occupation and enjoyment of the land to the end of the year 1257 had been by virtue and under the authority of two separate leases granted by each shareholder each co-extensive with his share only and as that granted by the plaintiff had expired in 1257 the defendant had not had exclusive enjoyment of the property as tenant by virtue of the other lease. And though the other co-sharer had granted a new lease when the first lease expired in 1270 yet as the plaintiff refused to do so and had ever since treated the defendant as a trespasser the defendant had no right of occupation so far as regarded the plaintiff's share. HANMOTO v ERODIA NENDU SINGH 20 W R. 70

140—Joint property—Form of suit—Parties—If joint property is let to a tenant at an entire rent, the rent is due in its entirety to all the co-sharers and all are bound to sue for it. No one co-sharer can sue to recover the amount of his share separately whether the other co-sharers are made parties or not. But if the land demised ceased to be ijmah and different portions of it became the property of different owners any one of the owners may sue for so much of the rent as he considers himself entitled to making the other owners parties to the suit. Where co-sharers of ijmah land let to a tenant at an entire rent brought a suit against their tenant to recover their proportionate shares of the rent and made the other co-sharers defendants avowedly for the purpose of obtaining an adjudication of their title as between themselves and the defendants other than the tenant—Held that as the area of the property had not been divided as the rent had always been paid in its entirety and as the title of all the co-sharers remained ijmah the suit would not lie. ANANDA CHURN POY & KALLY COOMAR POY I L R. 4 Calc. 89 2 C L R. 404

To this suit she made her co-sharers defendants. The defendants alleged that she had not received and was not entitled to receive the rent from the tenant but the lower Courts found these facts in her favour and gave her a decree. It was objected on special appeal that the suit would not lie inasmuch as the plaintiff being one of several co-sharers was not competent to sue alone for her share of the rent. Held that under the circumstances and the co-sharers having been made defendants the suit was maintainable. DOORGA CHURN SURMA & JAMTA DASSEE 12 B L R. *Arrangement for separate payment of rents—Evidence of arrangement—Parties—Suits for arrears of rent—Suit for kabulat—Cancellation of lease—Where it has been arranged between the co-sharers of an estate and their tenant that he shall pay each co-sharer his proportionate share of the entire rent each co-sharer may bring a separate suit against the tenant for such proportionate share. In the absence of such an arrangement no such suit can be maintained. Such an arrangement may be evidenced either by direct proof or by usage from which its existence may be presumed and is perfectly consistent with the continuance of the original lease of the entire tenure. But an arrangement of this nature will not enable one co-sharer to sue the tenant for a kabulat for a co-sharer who claims a kabulat is bound of the request of the tenant to give him a pottah upon the same terms and the grant and acceptance of a finding lease of any separate share cannot exist contemporaneously with an original lease of the entire tenure. he had applied the rent due under the pottah towards the liquidation of debts due under bonds in P's name but for which the joint family were liable The first Court dismissed the suit on the preliminary issue that it was in substance a suit for a specific share of the rent by some culy of the co sharers and that there being no agreement by the tenant to pay the co sharers their respective shares of the rent separately such a suit would not lie Held (upholding the order of the lower Appellate Court) that the order of the first Court was wrong The suit as framed, was necessarily a suit in the alternative and as the plaintiffs were necessarily not aware whether any portion of P's share of the rent was due or not but believing that none was due they could only claim their share asking to have the plaintiff amended so as to include the whole rent due if it should appear that anything was due to P and that bring the suit within this rule that in the absence of special agreement between a tenant and co sharers to pay their rateable proportion of the rent a suit by one of the co sharers must be for the entire rent due making his co sharers defendants if they refuse to join as plaintiffs The prayer of the plaintiff fully provided for this and the suit should have been tried on its merits and the plaintiff amended if the facts proved showed that any rent remained unpaid and due to P as asked for by the plaintiffs PERGASH LAL v. A ten annas share was allotted to one (the present plaintiff) a four annas share to another and a two-annas share to a third. The talukddars continued to hold the entire property and paid the rent apportioned by law severally to each of the parties entitled. In 1861 the owner of the two annas share obtained a decree against the talukddars for enhancement of the rent of his share. In the present suit against the same talukddars the defendants contended that the rent of their talukh had not been changed for a period of more than twenty years before suit. Held that the decree in the suit of 1861 had the effect of enhancing the rent payable for the whole talukh (that the plaintiff could avail herself of that decree although she was not a party to it) SARAT SONDARY DABZA & ANAND MOHUN SURMA GRUTTACK I L R 5 Calc 273 4 C L R 448

6 ——— Appeal—Appeal irregularly brought after time has been granted to apply to original Court—Certain objections were taken in an execution proceeding and the Judge before whom the objections were heard passed an order disposing of the objections save as to two which he decided he had no jurisdiction to entertain. The objector then made a special application to the Judge to obtain time to make an application with reference to these objections to the Court from which the decree had been transferred, and accordingly time was granted him to do so. But, instead of applying the objector preferred an appeal to the High Court against the order of the Judge disposing of the objections. The lower Court dismissed the suit. The plaintiff then presented a petition to the High Court praying that the order of the Judge remanding the suit might be set aside under the provisions of s. 50 Act XVIII of 1861 on the ground that as the value of the property in suit was admittedly more than Rs 1000 the Judge had exceeded his powers in hearing the appeal. The High Court held that it had no power under s. 55 of Act XVIII of 1861 to entertain the application as it was open to the petitioner to present an appeal against the order of the Judge remanding the suit and that he must proceed by way of appeal. The plaintiff having appealed the order of the Judge was set aside but it was held that by reason of his laches the plaintiff was disentitled to his costs. TUKER ALI & SAADAT ALI

Civil Procedure Code (1859) s 222—Costs of partition charged under that section on shares of parties in partition suit—Mortgage by one sharer of undivided shares—Liability for costs of partition of mortgagees not party to partition suit—Application in suit by person not party to suit—Remedy by supplemental suit—Procedure—K S and K B were joint owners of certain properties. In 1886 K S mortgaged his undivided share to S C in consideration of a loan advanced by S C to him. In 1897 K S brought a suit to which S C was not made a party against K B for partition and on 27th April 1898 obtained a decree under which a commission of partition was issued. In the course of the suit both K S and K B died—K B on 2nd September 1899 and K S on 30th March 1902—and by orders of Court their sons were put on the record in place of their respective fathers. The return to the commission of partition was made on 24th February 1903 and on 20th July 1903 and order was made confirming the return and under a 222 of the Civil Procedure Code charging the costs of suit and of the commission of partition to the shares of the plaintiffs and defendants respectively in the suit. Meanwhile in July 1899 S C brought a suit on his mortgage and obtained a decree dated 5th August 1899 for an account and sale and in that suit a final order for sale was made on 6th January 1891 which however was only filed on 19th August 1893. Under that order the property was advertised for sale the return to the commission of partition being set out in the abstract of title as part of the title and the property to be sold being described as a divided moiety. In an application made both in the partition and mortgage suits by the defendants in the partition suit for an order for sale of a portion of their share of the property in order to pay the costs of the suit and of the partition and other debts and liabilities for which they were liable—Held that the mortgagee having had the benefit of the partition, and having accepted and approved of it as part of his title as shown by the proceedings for sale was though not a party to the partition suit bound by the equities attaching to the mortgaged property as incidents of the partition. He was therefore liable in respect of a proportionate share of the charge for costs of the partition created by the order of Court made in that suit under s 222 of the Civil Procedure Code and such proportionate share of those costs should be deducted in priority out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property. The defendants in the partition suit however not being parties to the mortgage suit such an order could not be properly made at their instance but they should enforce the charge for costs against the mortgagee by supplemental suit and the Court stayed the sale of the property for a reasonable time to give the parties an opportunity of moving for stay of the sale in any such suit as might be instituted.

In his written statement the defendant denied that the plaintiffs' windows were ancient and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the light and air as an easement. At the time of filing his written statement the defendant paid into Court the sum of Rs 200 which in his written statement he stated was more than sufficient to compensate the plaintiffs for any damages they might sustain and which he (defendant) paid in without prejudice to his contentions but for the sake of peace and to avoid litigation. At the hearing the plaintiffs abandoned their claim for an injunction but insisted that they were entitled to more than Rs 200 as damages. The Court found that the plaintiffs' windows were ancient but that the Rs 200 paid into Court were sufficient damages. It therefore ordered that the defendant should pay all the plaintiffs' costs up to the date at which the Rs 200 were paid into Court and as to their subsequent costs that the defendant should pay three-fourths of the plaintiffs' subsequent costs and the plaintiffs should pay to the defendant one-fourth of the defendant's subsequent costs. The Court offered to simplify its order by directing the defendant to pay all the costs of the plaintiffs up to the date of paying the Rs 200 into Court and half the plaintiffs' taxed costs subsequent to that date. The defendant appeared contending that under s 373 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act No 14 of 188) the plaintiffs should have been ordered to pay all the defendant's costs subsequent to the payment into Court. Held that the suit was not one to recover a debt or damages and therefore s 373 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply. That being so the Judge had full discretion under s 220 of the Civil Procedure Code to apportion the costs and the Court of Appeal would not interfere with that discretion. Held also that in cases not being suits to recover a debt or damages where money is paid into Court the principle underlying s 373 of the Civil Procedure Code ought to regulate the discretion of the Court in directing the payment of costs. The purchaser of the alienated property appealed to the High Court and the decree was set aside on the ground that the suit was misconceived and was not one under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code and the judgment concluded by saying merely that the appeal is allowed with costs without specifying any names of parties by whom the costs were to be paid. The decree when drawn up and signed named the two plaintiffs and the 42 other persons as respondents and directed the costs to be paid by the plaintiffs respondents. Held in an application for amendment of the decree that since the 42 persons did not themselves join as parties as provided for under s. 32 of the Code and were not parties to the suit in the sense that they had any voice or control in the conduct of it they were not party respondents though they might fall under the category of persons interested under s. 30 and so might be bound by the decision. At the time of its institution Act XV of 1862 was applicable by s 22 of which Act a plaintiff was deprived in a suit cognizable by the Small Cause Court of his costs if he obtained a decree for less than Rs 2000 unless the Judge who tried it certified it was a fit case to be tried in the High Court. 136 ———— Administrator
General's Act II of 1874 s. 35—Plaintiff succeeding as to part of claim only—In April 1885 A entered into an agreement in writing with B whereby
 he agreed to act as the manager of B's zamindaris and other landed properties for three years on certain terms therein mentioned. The agreement was duly registered. On the 15th of June 1882 B sued
 the Administrator General of Bengal as administrator of A's estate to recover certain sums of money set forth in detail in the plaint as having been received by A and not accounted for stating that they had been misappropriated by A Held that, under the special terms of the Administrator General's Act II of 1874 the plaintiff (having succeeded as to part of his claim only) was not entitled to any costs as against A's estate but was liable to pay costs on the portion of his claim which was disallowed. HAR-

for an injunction or damages for obstruction by the defendant of the plaintiff's light and air, the defendant paid Rs200 into Court. The first Court granted an injunction but on appeal the decree was varied and an injunction refused but Rs500 damages given to the plaintiff. On the question of costs it was argued for the defendant (appellant) that he should be given his costs of appeal as he had the promise of a thing aside the money in s 12 of the Court Court. (I L R. 11 Bom 272)

155 ——— Vexatious litigation—Successful party ordered to pay costs—The Court departed from the general rule that a successful party is entitled to his costs in a case where the appellant had manifestly acted vexatiously towards the respondent and as a protest against frivolous litigation, ordered the appellant to pay the respondent's costs. GYANEE RAM v PALPE RAM 2 N W, 73

156 ——— Will—Costs of opposing will by heirs of deceased—The heirs of a deceased person have a right to insist upon an adverse will being proved in solemn form by the attesting witnesses and ought not to be saddled with the adverse party's costs when occasioned by such opposition as they were entitled to offer. MADHONKEE DOSS v HUNTER PERSHAD MUNDUL 24 W R 25

157 ——— Withdrawal of suit—Omission to obtain leave to bring another—Civil Procedure Code ss 97 and 157—The High Court has no power under the Civil Procedure Code to award costs to the defendant when the plaintiff withdraws not having asked leave to do so with liberty to bring another suit for the same matter. BRASSER TIKETTER GADA PILLAI 1 Mad 247

158 ——— Order for costs made in absence of and without notice to plaintiff—The plaintiffs on the day fixed for hearing asked for permission to withdraw a suit which was granted ex parte. Before the order was drawn up the defendants pleaded hearing that the suit had been withdrawn applied for their costs. The application was allowed and the order was prepared costs being awarded to the defendants. Held that as the defendants had been summoned the lower Court should neither have passed an order allowing the suit to be withdrawn without notice to the defendants nor should it without notice to the plaintiffs have passed an order charging costs was obtained by them against J C S and another on the ground that he was the real plaintiff and S B D only a nominal one. It appeared that S B D had no means of her own but lived in the house of J C S who could explain neither the circumstances or why she was named as plaintiff. Next stated that the plaintiff's next friend was unnecessary—J stability of next friend for costs—Adoption of suit by plaintiff—Costs of solicitor of next friend where suit unnecessary—Solicitor's lien on estate recovered or preserved by suit—Preservation of estate from future risk—Appointment of receiver—Insane executrix—Act 11 of 1874 s 85—The plaintiff who was a minor sued by her next friend (her husband) for the administration of her father Parshotam Rampy. The defendants in the suit were the plaintiff's mother Nanbai who was the widow and executrix of Parshotam Rampy and one Burjorji who had been appointed by Nanbai to act for her during her absence on pilgrimage. The plaintiff alleged that Nanbai was insane and unfit to manage the estate and that Burjorji was mismanaging and wasting it. A receiver was appointed shortly after the filing of the suit. At the hearing the suit was dismissed as against Burjorji and the Court ordered that his costs should be paid by the plaintiff's next friend, being of opinion that he was the real actor in the suit and that it would be unfair to make the plaintiff's estate bear the costs of proceedings in which she had no real voice. The Court was further of opinion that at the time the suit was filed Nanbai was not of unsound mind but that she had subsequently become insane. The usual accounts were ordered to be taken against Nanbai. The result of taking these accounts was that her administration of the estate as executrix was found to be unimpeachable and in December 1883 the Court made an order directing that the next friend should pay the costs of the infant plaintiff. The next friend became insolvent and his solicitors (the respondents) obtained an order from the Judge in chambers that the receiver should pay their costs out of the estate in his hands. The plaintiff appealed. The respondents contended that the plaintiff had adopted the suit and that they had a lien for their costs—at any rate so far as they were incurred for the recovery and preservation of the estate. Held that the respondents were not entitled to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff had done no overt act in bringing her adoption of the suit and the fact that she remained passive was consistent with her disapproval of it as the decree did not immediately affect her or require her to take action until the death of her mother Nanbai. Held also that the property in the hands of the receiver could not be held to have been recovered by means of the suit as it appeared that the investments were of a perfectly legitimate nature; that there was no cause for alarm with respect to the safety of the property and that the suit so far as it was based on alleged danger to the estate was quite unavailing. It was argued for the respondents that the appointment of a receiver preserved the estate from future risk arising from the fact that the executrix Nanbai was of unsound mind. Held that the mere fact that the appointment of a receiver

180 ——— Administrators—the costs of the suit

Act II of 1874, s. 18 and s. 35—Costs—Administrators—claims to property in possession of Administrator General under order of Court—Costs of Administrator General in a suit to recover such property how paid—Expenses of taking care of such property incurred by Administrator General—The plaintiff and defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 were the daughters of one S who died in Bombay on the 9th November 1855. Shortly after the death of S the plaintiff went to Delhi leaving certain ornaments and other valuables belonging to her locked up in a box which also contained certain property which had belonged to her mother S. The box remained in the house in which the plaintiff had resided with S. The key of the box was taken by the plaintiff to Delhi. During the plaintiff's absence one of her sisters (defendant No. 3) presented a petition to the High Court alleging that all the property in the said box belonged to her deceased mother S and was in danger of being misappropriated by the plaintiff. Upon these allegations the Court, on the 16th January 1856 made an order under s. 18 of Act II of 1874, directing the Administrator General to take possession of the property of S and hold the same subject to the further order of the Court. Pursuant to this order the Administrator General took possession of the box and all its contents. The plaintiff admitting that some of the ornaments in the box had belonged to the estate of S sued to recover the remainder of the ornaments therein which she alleged belonged to herself and which she specified in a separate list. Defendant No. 3 denied her claim and contended that all the property belonged to the estate of S. The other sisters of the plaintiff (defendants Nos. 2, 4 and 5) admitted the plaintiff's claim. The Court held that the plaintiff had proved her claim and directed that her property should be delivered over to her by the Administrator General. Held as to costs that the Administrator General was in the position of an interpleading plaintiff and that he was entitled in the first instance to recover his costs from the losing claimant (defendant No. 3). Failing recovery from defendant No. 3 he was entitled to be paid his costs out of the estate of S and if and in so far as that estate proved insufficient he was entitled to recover them out of the property which was the subject matter of the suit. Held also that the costs of the Administrator General included the expenses incurred by him in taking care of the property entrusted to him by the order of the Court such expenses to be apportioned according to the amounts respectively belonging to the estate of S and to the plaintiff and to be paid accordingly out of the said estate and out of the property of the plaintiff. *AMBA JAY v. There were no assets of the partnership. The plaintiff now took out a summons calling on R as son and legal representative of H to show cause why he should not pay the said costs or why in default the estate of H in his hands should not be attached. R objected that he was no party to this suit when the decree was made and neither he nor his father's estate in his hands was bound by it. Held that the summons must be dismissed. The decree so far as it purported to affect the estate of H was not a valid decree inasmuch as the person or persons beneficially interested in the estate were not then before the Court. *LOUPON v. taxed even after payment—See also on of High Court—In a suit relating to a charitable trust the decree directed that the costs of all parties thereto who taxed should be paid out of the trust fund. Certain bills of costs were subsequently furnished to the trustees by the attorneys. Two of the trustees thought the bills reasonable and agreed that they should be paid. The third trustee objected to the amount of the bills as exorbitant, and decreed that they should be taxed. Notwithstanding his protest however the other trustees paid the bills without taxation. He thereupon took out a summons calling upon his co-trustees and the attorney to show cause why the bills should not be taxed and why they should not refund any sum which had been overpaid. Held that the dissenting trustee was entitled to have the bills taxed although they had been paid and that the High Court had jurisdiction to order taxation to be made. JINHOY MENSCHERI JINHOY v. The attorneys of the defendants accordingly brought in their bill of costs and in taxation it was contended that they should be allowed out of the charity funds all the sums which the taxing master certified they should pay their attorneys. Held that where the taxing master decided that certain items allowed against the defendants should not come out of the charity funds his decision could not be disturbed. It does not follow that because a charge is proper to be allowed between an attorney and client that the client if a trustee should be allowed that charge out of the trust funds. ADVOCATE GENERAL OF BOMBAY v. taxed even after payment—Jurisdiction of High Court—In a suit relating to a charitable trust the decree directed that the costs of all parties thereto when taxed should be paid out of the trust fund. Certain bills of costs were subsequently furnished to the trustees by the attorney. Two of the trustees thought the bills reasonable and agreed that they should be paid. The third trustee objected to the amount of the bills as exorbitant, and desired that they should be taxed. Notwithstanding his protest however the other trustees paid the bills without taxation. He thereupon took out a summons calling upon his co-trustees and the attorney to show cause why the bills should not be taxed and why they should not refund any sum which had been overpaid. Held that the dissenting trustee was entitled to have the bills taxed although they had been paid and that the High Court had jurisdiction to order taxation to be made. JIMNOT MRSCHERJI JIMNOT v. 176 ——— Suit relating to charitable institution or endowment—Defendants' costs as between attorney and client ordered out of the charity estate—Charges allocated and disallowed as against estate—Discretion of taxing master—Trustee—In a suit brought by the Advocates General at the instance of relatives for the purpose of removing the defendants from the position of directors of a Mahomedan mosque and for administration of the property of the mosque etc. the decree ordered that the defendants should have their costs taxed as between attorney and client out of the charity funds. The attorneys of the defendants accordingly brought in their bill of costs and in taxation it was contended that they should be allowed out of the charity funds all the sums which the taxing master certified they had paid their attorneys. Held that where the taxing master decided that certain items allowed against the defendants should not come out of the charity funds his decision could not be disturbed. It does not follow that because a charge is proper to be allowed between an attorney and client that the client if a trustee should be allowed that charge out of the trust funds. ADVOCATE GENERAL OF BOMBAY v. On taxation of costs of the purchaser the other parties objected to the costs of two counsel on behalf of the purchaser being allowed. Held that having regard to the allegations made the taxing officer exercised a right discretion in allowing the costs of two counsel. IN THE MATTER OF DEER NURSING DUTT

The plaintiff's counsel conducted a case as prosecutor, he may instruct counsel who shall be entitled to appear under s. 7, Ch. XI of the High Court rules and the Public Prosecutor may thereupon avail himself of the services of counsel under s. 90. The effect of s. 235 of the Code read with ss. 59 and 60 is to make every case tried by the Court of Session a case falling within the provisions of s. 60—that is to say the Public Prosecutor may always avail himself of the services of counsel for a private individual and in so doing he does not deprive himself of the management of the case. Ex parte statement of counsel not made on oath if objected to—Per MACLEAY C.J. and MACPHERSON and HILL J.J., on appeal from STANLEY J.—Counsel assumes a general authority an apparent authority which must be taken to continue until notice has been given to the other side by the client that it has been determined to settle and compromise the suit in which he is actually retained as counsel. Where the compromise however extends to collateral matters to matters quite outside the scope of the particular case in which counsel is engaged in order to bind his client it must be shown that he had given his client special authority to compromise upon the terms upon which the compromise was effected, and the other side cannot avail themselves of the position that they did not know that it had not been given. They are not entitled to assume as in the case of an apparent authority that it was given and was existing. Where counsel under a misapprehension of his client's instructions and believing himself to have authority acts in fact without it he cannot bind his client. HUNDO LAL BOSE v. NISTARINI DASSI

the hands of the Collector as manager of the Court of Wards on the allegations that she had placed the property in the hands of the Court some years previously because she was not at that time in a position to manage it herself but that she was now capable of managing it, and desired to get it back. The suit was dismissed and the plaintiff appealed on the ground inter alia that inasmuch as she was not a "disqualified proprietor" within the meaning of Act XIX of 1873 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Act) the Court of Wards had no jurisdiction to take the property and that its possession was merely the result of an arrangement to which she was a consenting party and which she now desired to terminate. Held that with reference to the provisions of Act XIX of 1873 and Act VIII of 1879 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Acts) the suit as brought was not maintainable inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiff had obtained the previous sanction of the local Government to the release of the property from the superintendence of the Court of Wards as required by s. 20 of the latter Act. Held also that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal entirely to change the nature of the grounds upon which she alleged herself to be entitled to claim relief and that hence she could not now raise the plea that the Court of Wards in taking the property under its management had acted without jurisdiction. The expression "local Government" in ss. 194 and 195 of Act XIX of 1873 and s. 20 of Act VIII of 1879 means the Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces. MASRKA BIRI v. On application made under Act XXI of 1860 the Judge on 28th March 1872 found the adoption good, and appointed one T to be guardian of the minor D and directed the estate to be placed under the management of the Court of Wards. If a judgment creditor of T failing to execute his decree against the estate of B brought a suit to have it declared that T was to be inherited all B's property and that B was entitled to have that property attached to the satisfaction of his decree. The only defect was that H manager under the Court of Wards had not been appointed. The Subordinate Judge gave plaintiff a decree but it was not legally adopted as a suit. The suit was adjourned. Held that the

Judge had no power to make any such order as that of the 28th March 1872 in regard to the Court of Wards. What he had power to do under Act XL of 1858 s. 12 was to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate, and it would then have become the duty of the Collector to appoint a manager and a guardian in the same manner etc. as if the minor's property and person were subject to the Court of Wards. Held that the minor's interests were not properly represented before the Subordinate Judge whose decree therefore could not stand so as to affect the minor and that the minor must be made a party strictly in the manner prescribed by Bengal Act IV of 1870, s. 69. ABDOOL HYS v. sanction of the Court of Wards—An order which was passed during his minority is not binding upon a person whose estate is under the management of the Court of Wards, if the proceeding in which it was passed was not instituted by the manager with the sanction of the Court of Wards, i.e. of the Commissioner to whom the Court of Wards delegated its authority to grant such sanction. I AM CHAKRAVARTY & LALIT SINGH

2. Bengal Act III of 1881
s. 7—Suit on behalf of ward by manager without sanction of the Court of Wards—Effect of—Sanction after appeal—Effect of—In the absence of some order by the Court of Wards authorizing the bringing of a suit, a suit instituted by a manager on behalf of a ward must be dismissed. A suit was instituted in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Dacca on behalf of a ward by his manager without the order or sanction of the Court of Wards and proceeded to judgment without any such order or sanction. The suit was partially decreed; and the manager appealed to the District Judge for that portion of the claim which had been dismissed by the Court of first instance. At the hearing of the appeal an application was filed on behalf of the appellant accompanied by a letter giving sanction to the institution of the suit, the appeal and other proceedings connected therewith, with retrospective effect from the date of its institution. The Judge dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held having regard to s. 55 of the Court of Wards Act, 1879 as amended by s. 7 of Bengal Act III of 1881 the lower Appellate Court was right in dismissing the suit. Held also that the sanction given after appeal did not have a retrospective effect. *DINESH CHUNDER ROY & GOLAM MOHAPPA. 3. Suit rejected when filed on behalf of a minor under the Court of Wards without sanction of that authority to proceed with it—Where under s. 55 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879) the manager of an estate authorized the plaintiff in order to save limitation to institute a suit on behalf of the Court of Wards, which refused afterwards to sanction the proceeding with the suit—Held that the Judge rightly ordered that the suit be rejected as inadmissible under the above section of being prosecuted. BISWAS ROY & BHOSHI SIKAR LSWAR ROY

the hands of the Collector as manager of the Court of Wards on the allegations that she had placed the property in the hands of the Court some years previously, because she was not at that time in a position to manage it herself but that she was now capable of managing it and desired to get it back. The suit was dismissed and the plaintiff appealed on the ground inter alia that inasmuch as she was not a disqualified proprietor within the meaning of Act XIX of 1873 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Act) the Court of Wards had no jurisdiction to take the property and that its possession was merely the result of an arrangement to which she was a consenting party and which she now desired to terminate. Held that with reference to the provisions of Act XIX of 1873 and Act VIII of 1879 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Act) the suit as brought was not maintainable inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiff had obtained the previous sanction of the local Government to the release of the property from the superintendence of the Court of Wards as required by s. 20 of the latter Act. Held also that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal entirely to change the nature of the grounds upon which she alleged herself to be entitled to claim relief and that hence she could not now raise the plea that the Court of Wards in taking the property under its management had acted without jurisdiction. The expression local Government' in ss. 101 and 102 of Act XIX of 1873 and s. 20 of Act VIII of 1879 means the Lieutenant-Governor of the North Western Provinces. MASUMA BIRI v. 18. Deng Act IV of 1870—Death of minor—Right of suit—Held with reference as well to s. 79 Bengal Act IV of 1870 as to the justice and equity of the case that the power of the Court of Wards to represent the estate or bring a suit on behalf of a minor does not cease with the death of the minor. SOOMNATH KOOBA v. COURT OF WARDS 17 W R. 580

19. Minor—Irregular procedure—On 27th July 1871 a disqualified proprietor B signed a duly attested document, declaring, he had adopted a boy by name D the next day D signing a declaration of his approval of the adoption. Before sanction of the Lieutenant Governor could be obtained under Bengal Act IV of 1870 s. 74, B died, and the sanction was subsequently refused on the ground of B's death. On application made under Act XXII of 1860 the Judge on 28th March 1872 found the adoption good, and appointed one F to be guardian of the minor D and directed the estate to be placed under the management of the Court of Wards. A judgment creditor of F failing to execute his decree against the estate of B brought a suit to have it declared that B was not liable for the property and that F was entitled to have that property attached and sold in satisfaction of his decree. The only defence was that B was not the manager of the Court of Wards. The defendant J in the plaintiff's decree held that D was not the legally adopted son of B. The case was appealed from. Held that the COURT OF WARDS—concluded.

Judge had no power to make any such order as that of the 28th March 1872 in regard to the Court of Wards. What he had power to do under Act XI of 1858 s. 12 was to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate and it would then have become the duty of the Collector to appoint a manager and a guardian in the same manner etc. as if the minor's property and person were subject to the Court of Wards. Held that the minor's interests were not properly represented before the Subordinate Judge whose decree therefore could not stand so as to affect the minor and that the minor must be made a party strictly in the manner prescribed by Bengal Act IV of 1870, s. 69. ABDOOL HEE v. MITTERHILL SIKON 23 W R. 348

20. Sale for arrears of rent—Power of Collector—Tenure created under Court of Wards—Previously existing tenure—The provisions of s. 75 of Bengal Act IV of 1850 apply only to tenures created by the Collector during the time the estate has been in the hands of the Court of Wards, and not to tenures created previously. A Collector therefore has no power to sell for arrears of rent a tenure created before he took charge of the estate without previously obtaining a decree for such arrears in the regular way. COLLECTOR OF CHITTAGONG v. s. 20 and so 51-55—Collector on behalf of ward when manager of his estate has been appointed—The word "suit" as used in s. 51-55 of Bengal Act IX of 1870 is not limited to what is usually called a regular suit but covers miscellaneous proceedings in a suit, such as an application for execution of a decree in which the ward for the first time seeks to have the carriage of litigation instituted by his predecessor in title. When it appeared that a manager of a minor's property had been appointed by the Court of Wards under the provisions of s. 20 of Bengal Act IX of 1870 and during the absence of such manager on leave an application was made on behalf of the minor by the Collector of the district for execution of a decree—Held that the office of manager in the court was vacant because the manager died and could not be re-appointed s. 51 of the Act did not enable the Collector to appear on behalf of the minor. ROOFTANDRO NARAIN MITT v. Accordingly in a suit for setting aside a summary attachment under Bombay Act I of 1866 placed by the Collector on land held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years the value was held to be five times the assessment and the stamp duty calculated upon it irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. COLLECTOR OF THANA v. 5. — and s. 12—Finality of taxing officer's decision as to Court fee—Finality—Meaning of—Duty of Court Fee Act officer.—The word final in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act has the same meaning as in s. 12 though it is applied to a different subject. The cases in which it has been held that notwithstanding the use of this word in s. 12 an appeal lies from a decision as to the category in which the relief sought by a plaintiff or appellant falls do not mean that decisions which the section declares to be final are nevertheless appealable but that the question of category is not a question relating to valuation and therefore is not declared by the section to be final. In both s. 5 and s. 12 final is used in its ordinary legal sense of unappealable. A decision under s. 5 of the Act is not open to appeal, revision or review and is final for all purposes and no means have been provided or suggested by the Legislature for questioning it. The officer mentioned in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act is not bound to advise parties as to the stamp required under the Act or to give them notice that they have not sufficiently stamped documents which the Act requires to be stamped before presentation. BALKARAN RAI v. 3 ——— Declaratory decree—Consequential relief—Court fees—In a suit for a declaration of proprietary right in respect of a house in which the removal of an attachment of such house in the execution of a decree was sought the plaintiff did not, as s. 7 of the Court Fees Act directs state
in his plaint the amount at which he valued the
relief sought nor did the Court of first instance
cause him to supply this defect. On appeal by the plaintiff from the decree of the Court of first instance dismissing his suit the lower Appellate Court demanded from the plaintiff Court fees in respect of his plaint and memorandum of appeal computed on the market value of such house the plaintiff
having only paid in respect of those documents
respectively the Court fees payable in a suit for a declaration of right where no consequential relief
is prayed. Held that the market value of the property could not be taken by the lower Appellate Court to be the value of the relief sought as the plaintiff did not seek possession of the property and that as the valuation of the relief sought rested with the plaintiff and not the Court and as in this instance the declaration of right claimed necessarily carried with
it the consequential relief sought of which the
value was merely nominal further Court fees could

3. Suits are efficiently valued—Order for payment of additional Court fees—Power of Court to enlarge time for payment—Held that it is competent to a Court which has made an order under s. 10 cl. ii of Act VII of 1870 for the payment of an additional Court fee to enlarge either before or after its expiration the time limited for the payment of such additional fee. Bodas Naray v. 4. Court fee—Procedure—Second appeal—appeal to lower Appellate Court by respondent is High Court insufficiently stamped—Where it was discovered in second appeal in the High Court that the respondent when appellant in the lower Appellate Court had not paid a sufficient Court fee on his memorandum of appeal in that Court, and up to the date of the hearing of the appeal in the High Court though called upon to do so, had not made good the deficiency it was held that the proper procedure was not to dismiss the respondent's appeal to the lower Appellate Court under s. 10 of the Court Fees Act, but to stay the issuing of the decree if any of the High Court in favour of the respondent until such time as the additional Court-fee due by him might be paid. NARAIN SINGH v. CHATURANUS SINGH I. L. R. 20 All. 362

5. *Order requiring additional Court fee on claim passed subsequent to decree—Decree prepared so as to give effect to subsequent order—Civil Procedure Code ss. 54, 56, 58A—Court Fees Act ss. 12 and 28—A Judge after disposing of an appeal on the 1st March 1883 again took it up and on the 21st March 1883 directed the appellant to pay additional Court-fees on her memorandum of appeal. On the 2nd May 1883 the appellant paid the additional Court-fees under protest and a decree was then prepared bearing date the 1st March 1883 but it referred to and carried into effect the subsequent order of the 21st March and the 2nd May. Per MAHMOOD J. that as soon as the Judge had passed the decree of the 1st March 1883 he ceased to have any power over it and was not competent to introduce new matter not dealt with by the judgment; that the order of the 21st March and the deposit of the 2nd May whether right or wrong were not proceedings to which effect could be given in the antecedent decree of the 1st March 1883; and that the decree was ultra vires to that extent and was therefore liable to correction in second appeal under s. 58A of the Civil Procedure Code. The powers conferred by ss. 64 (a) and (c) and 55 read with s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code or by s. 12 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) read with cl. (ii) of s. 10 are intended to be exercised before the disposal of the case and not after it has been decided finally so far as the Court is concerned.*

The powers conferred by s. 28 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court fees relates and even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree. Per OLDFIELD J.—That the Court had power to make the order it did inasmuch as the collection of Court fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which could be said to have ceased with its determination; and the provisions of the Court Fees Act fixed no time within which the presiding Judge could exercise his power of ordering documents to be stamped and seemed on the other hand to contemplate the exercise of that power at any time subsequent to the receipt filing or use of a document and to make the validity of the document and the proceedings relative thereto dependent on the document being properly stamped. MAHADEVI RAM KISHOR DAS I. L. R. 7 All. 528

1. Interest accruing on decrees in suit for money lent—The Court Fees Act (No. VII of 1870) s. 11 is not applicable to interest accruing upon a decree in a suit which is neither for mesne profits, nor for immovable property nor for an account but simply an action for money lent. KRISHNABAY v. ANTAJI VIRUPAKSHA

[12 Bom. 227]

2. Execution of part of decrees—Payment of full amount of Court fees not necessary for such part execution—Construction of Act—Court Fees Act s. 17—The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of a house and for mesne profits. In the same suit he also claimed certain account books and documents from the defendant. In paying Court fees he estimated the mesne profits at Rs 151 and paid on that amount. He obtained a decree and the amount of mesne profits awarded to him was Rs 349 13 3. The decree further directed that possession of the house should be given to him and that the books and documents should be handed over to him. He now applied for execution of that part of the decree which directed the delivery of the house and of the account books and other documents. The defendant contended that under s. 11 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) the plaintiff was not entitled to execution of any part of the decree until he paid the proper Court fees on the sum awarded as mesne profits viz. Rs 349 13 3. Held that the plaintiff might obtain execution of that part of the decree which ordered delivery of the house and books and documents without paying the fees payable on the amount awarded for mesne profits. Ss. 11 and s. 17 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) ought to be similarly construed and the language of the latter section which deals with multifarious suits shows that for the purposes of the stamp revenue such suits are deemed to be a collection of distinct suits relating to the several causes of action combined in them. In applying s. 11 to such suits in

3 ——— Suit for possession and mere profits—Costs of Civil Procedure (1852) s. 212—Assessment of mere profits—Dismissal of suit—Application for execution of decree—Where upon the application of the decree-holder the Court executing the decree has assessed the amount of mere profits but the necessary Court fees have not been deposited within the time fixed by the Court as provided by s. 11 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) the suit that is the claim in respect of those mere profits must be dismissed; after such dismissal an application for execution of the decree for mere profits can be entertained as no such decree is in existence. The writ suit in the last part of para. 2 of s. 11 of the Court Fees Act does not mean the entire suit; it means the claim in respect of the mere profits. KUNAL KISHAN SINGH v. GOOK NARI (I. L. Exemption from probate duty—Joint family—
Conveyance to four members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as tenants in common—Survivorship—The deceased who was a member of a joint Hindu family governed by Mitakshara law left a will of which he appointed his brothers the executors and trustees. The brothers as executors applied for probate but claimed exemption
from the payment of probate duty on the ground that the property was joint ancestral property which would pass by survivorship. The petition stated that in the lifetime of the testator he and his brothers out of the income of the ancestral estate purchased 52 in the Corporation of Calcutta some plots of land which were conveyed to them as tenants in common; that the effect of this was to vest an undivided one-fourth share in the testator which on his death would pass not to the remaining coparceners under the rule of survivorship but to his legal representatives; and that in order that effect might be given to the rule of survivorship it was necessary to obtain probate. Held that the property though conveyed to the brothers as tenants in common vested in them as trustees for the benefit of all the coparceners and consequently was not liable to duty. In

—s 19D—Act XIII of 1875, s. 6—Exemption from probate duty—Joint family—Conveyance to four members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as tenants in common—Survivorship—The deceased who was a member of a joint Hindu family governed by Mitakshara law left a will of which he appointed his brothers the executors and trustees. The brothers as executors applied for probate but claimed exemption from the payment of probate duty on the ground that the property was joint ancestral property which would pass by survivorship. The petition stated that in the lifetime of the testator he and his brothers out of the income of the ancestral estate purchased from the Corporation of Calcutta some plots of land which were conveyed to them as tenants in common that the effect of this was to vest an undivided one-fourth share in the testator which on his death would pass not to the remaining coparceners under the rule of survivorship but to his legal representatives; and that in order that effect might be given to the rule of survivorship it was necessary to obtain probate. Held that the property though conveyed to the brothers as tenants in common vested in them as trustees for the benefit of all the coparceners and consequently was not liable to duty. IN THE GOODS OF POTURULL AUGURWALLAH

The plaintiff's mother died pending the determination of the objection having devised her property to the plaintiffs. They succeeded to the same and certain other property which also had been transferred to their mother in lieu of her dower-debt having been also attached in execution of the same decree the plaintiffs objected to the attachment. The Court executing the decree passed orders disallowing both objections. Upon these allegations the plaintiffs claimed to set aside both orders. They paid with reference to cl 1 art 17 sch II of the Court Fees Act 1870 a Court-fee of Rs 10 on their plaint but the Court of first instance held that this was not sufficient and that the Court fee should be calculated on the amount of the decree in execution of which the property had been attached. Held that looking at the nature of the reliefs sought cl 1 art 17 sch II of the Court Fees Act 1870 was applicable and that a Rs 10 stamp in respect of each order sought to be set aside was payable. Daya hand Nemchand v Hem hand Dharamchand I L R. 4 Bom 515 and Gulzari Mal v Jadav Rai I L R. 2 All. 63 followed. FATIMA BLOOM v SUKH RAM [I L R. 6 All. 341]*

4. — Suits brought to set aside or restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 245—Summary decision—Limitation of Acts—art 15 (1877 art 13)—Interpretation of Acts—Valuation of suits—Suits brought to set aside or to restore an attachment upon a house in pursuance of the permission given in s 246 of the Civil Procedure Code may be regarded either as suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed so as to fall within s 1 cl 4 art. (c) of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), or as suits to obtain or set aside a summary decision or order in which case the stamp duty payable would be that prescribed by art 17 cl 1 sch. II of the Court Fees Act. The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment it is the duty of the Courts to treat such suits as belonging to the latter class (it being the more favourable for the suitors) and to impose fees accordingly. Decisions under s 240 of Act VIII of 1859 as to the removal or retention of attachments are summary decisions or orders within the meaning of art 17 cl 1 sch. II of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). The words summary decision or order in this clause of the Court Fees Act mean decision or order not made in a regular suit or appeal. The construction which has been given to these words or nearly similar words in the Limitation Acts (e.g. Act IX of 1871 sch. II art 15 and Act XV of 1877 sch. II art 13) affords no guide to their construction in the Court Fees Act. When Acts are in pari materia they may be treated as forming a Code and may be read together; but when this is not so the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another. The valuation of suits for the purpose of jurisdiction for the fiscal purpose is distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of Court-fees. Therefore Court Fees Acts which are fiscal enactments are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction. Mohideen Jaischand v Dadabhai Perisayee, 11 Bom. 155 explained. Parlaty Tamoy v Dholapa Rayla [I. A suit praying for such a declaration as the above and also for a positive order in the nature of a mandatory injunction for the production of the defendants' books and property in their hands or a suit praying for such a declaration as the above and also for a positive decree for an account to be taken by the Court and for the production of the books and property would range under s 7 cl 4 art (c) of Act VII of 1870 as being a suit to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed and also within art (d) of the same section as being a suit to obtain an injunction and a suit of the third species described above would fall under art (f) of the same clause as being a suit for accounts. Quare—Whether in the case of a suit for a declaration of the right of the plaintiff to an account and to inspection of the defendants' books and for a mandatory injunction for the production of these books or of a suit for such a declaration and for a positive decree for the taking of an account by the Court and the production of the defendants' books the plaintiff would by virtue of s 17 of Act VII of 1870 require a pari stamp under arts (d) and (f) of cl 4 s 7 or be sufficiently covered by the stamp under art. After some time the pony had eventually been purchased by the accused from a vendor from Gopinath. The Magistrate found on the evidence that there had been no sale under Act I of 1871 and convicted the accused of criminal breach of trust and sentenced him under s. 406 of the Penal Code. Held the conviction was illegal. During that period he supplied wood to the value of Rs 234 but the prosecutor alleged that most of that was to be set off against balance to the debit of the prisoner for the year before and that the value of the firewood was as a fact only Rs 34. The prisoner was charged with criminal breach of trust as a servant. The defence was that he had purchased wood and made advances on that account but this defence was proved to be false. The Magistrate convicted him but the Judge held it was merely a failure to account and acquitted the prisoner. Held the prisoner was guilty of criminal breach of trust. WATSON v. GOLAN KHAN

13 — Partner—Master and servant—The accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of the value of goods which had been entrusted to him to sell. It was urged before the High Court that the conviction could not be sustained, as the accused was a partner with the prosecutor. Held by JACKSON J. that the finding of the Magistrate and Sessions Judge on the evidence was to the effect that the prisoner was not a partner but a servant that such finding could not be interfered with by the High Court as a Court of revision unless there was a mistake of law; that the finding was correct in law that the defence of the prisoner could not be taken to mean to say that he was a partner but merely that he held a small share in the profits and that such claim did not make him a partner an agent's remuneration being a share in the profits not constituting the agent a partner. Held by KEMP and MITTER JJ. (releasing the prisoner) that though the allowance of a portion of the profits or goods does not destroy the relation of master and servant the accused in this case distinctly pleaded he was a partner and not only that he was entitled to a share in the profits that the lower Courts did not specifically decide that the accused was a servant and that the prosecutor's remedy was a civil suit for an account. IN THE MATTER OF LALL CHAND ROY [9 W R, Cr, 37]

14 — Public servant—Penal Code s. 409—A village shroff whose duty it was to assist in collecting the public revenue received grain from rayats and gave receipts as if for money received by virtue of a private arrangement. Held that he could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust by a public servant under s. 409 of the Penal Code as he was not authorized to receive the public revenue in kind, and the party who delivered the grain did not thereby discharge himself from liability for the revenue. ANONYMOUS 4 Mad, Ap, 83

19 ——— Master and servant—Servant entrusted with moneys for payment to tradesman of account settled with master for a specific sum—Gratuity of tradesman to servant—Right of master to benefit of gratuity—Act XLV of 1860 ss 400-409—When a master entrusts his servant with money for the payment of an open account, i.e. an account of which the items have never been checked or settled and the tradesman makes the servant a present and the transaction amounts to a taxation of the bill and a reduction of the price by the servant the latter obtains the reduction for his master's benefit the money in his hands always remains the master's property and if he appropriates it he commits criminal breach of trust. But where the master himself has settled the account with the tradesman for a specific sum and sends the servant with money and the servant after making the payment accepts a present from the tradesman in that case the servant does not commit criminal breach of trust inasmuch as the money is given to him by a person whom he believes to have a right to give it though it may be that according to the strict equitable doctrines of the Court of Chancery he is bound to account to the master for them *see Hay's case In re Canadian Oil Works Corporation L. 20 ——— Penal Code s 408—Criminal breach of trust by a servant—Criminal misappropriation—An accused person who was in the service of zamindars and whose duty it was to pay into the Collectorate Government revenue due in respect of their estates immediately before the due date of a list received from them a certain sum of money with no specific instruction as to its application. On receipt of that money he paid a portion only of it into the Collectorate on account of the revenue and having done so he then altered the challan given back to him showing the amount actually paid and made it appear that a much larger amount had been paid in than was the fact. This challan he sent to his employer for the purpose of showing the application of the money. He was charged (amongst other offences) with criminal breach of trust as a servant (s 408 of the Penal Code) in respect of the difference between the amount actually paid into the treasury and the amount shown to have been paid in by the altered challan. The accused was convicted on all the charges. It was contended that the charge under s 408 was not sustainable inasmuch as the money was not alleged to have been sent to the accused for the specific purpose of paying the Government revenue and that the accounts between him and his employers had not been adjusted and that it was not shown whether at the date of the alleged breach of trust the accused was indebted to his employer or the reverse. Held that as the money was sent to the accused immediately before the list day and the challan was sent to the employers showing in its altered state the amount really payable as revenue which nearly covered the whole amount remitted it was reasonable to infer that the accused was aware of the implied purpose for which the money was remitted and as he deposited a very much smaller amount than that remitted and tried to pass off the altered challan as genuine there was a dishonest misappropriation of the difference sufficient to constitute the offence under s 408 *LOHIT MOHAN SARKAR v. 21 ——— Penal Code s 409—Rice condemned and ordered to be destroyed—Property according to the Penal Code—Sale of the same by municipal inspector—A certain consignment of rice lay unclaimed at the Kidderpore Docks and was advertised for sale by auction by the Port Commissioners. Before it was put up to auction the rice was found to be in a rotten condition. It was condemned and with the consent of the Port Commissioners acted by the officers of the Health Department of the Corporation of Calcutta and ordered to be destroyed. Held that assuming that the rice was entrusted by the Superintendent of the Health Department to the accused (who were inspectors employed in that department) for the purpose of destruction and that the accused instead of destroying the rice sold the same to a third party and retained the proceeds of such sale they did not commit the offence of criminal breach of trust as public servants. Semle—The accused committed no offence punishable under the Penal Code though they may have been guilty of infringing a departmental rule. *EMPERESS v. (1872, s. 466)—Acts done by public servant—Sanction on its procedure—Maha-kari.—S. 466 of the Code of Criminal Procedure extends to all acts committed by a public servant, i.e., to acts which would have no special sanctification except as acts done by a public servant; therefore, a mahakari charged with fabrication of the record of a case decided before himself could not be tried on that charge except with the sanction specified in that section. Para. 1 of s. 466, which mentions a sanction by Government or its deputy is intended to apply at least chiefly to the cases of persons specially responsible to Government such as accountants who have failed in their duty and para. 2, which speaks of sanction by Government alone to persons performing to exercise certain authority and with that perfect duty, an act which is impeached by a subject on the ground of its being wholly unwarranted or of an excess or impropriety of some kind. A mahakari falls within the case of public servants contemplated in para. 1

2. ———— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss. 366, 498—Cognizance of offence by Court—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s. 190—Enticing away married woman—Conviction for minor offence where evidence is insufficient for grave offence—The complainant charged the accused with an offence under s. 366 of the Penal Code in respect of his wife. The Deputy Magistrate convicted the accused of an offence under s. 498 of the Penal Code and sentenced him to one month's rigorous imprisonment. The Sessions Judge being of opinion that the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction to convict the accused under s. 498 there being no complaint by the husband under s. 190 of the Criminal Procedure Code and that the offence did not fall under s. 238 of the Criminal Procedure Code referred the case to the High Court. Held that such a case is within the intention of s. 238. The intention of the law is to prevent Magistrates inquiring of their own motion into cases connected with marriage unless the husband or other person authorized moves them to do so. But when the husband is complainant and brings his complaint under s. 366 a conviction under s. 498 may properly be had if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for the minor offence and yet is sufficient for a conviction for the graver one. *JATRA SURESH v. 1 ————— Deposition taken before Magistrate—Evidence before Sessions Judge—Discretion of Sessions Judge—The purpose of s 249 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as amended by s 20 of Act XI of 1874 is to make depositions given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry evidence in the trial before the Court of Session only when the Sessions Judge determines in the exercise of his discretion that they are to be used in this way. But the exercise of this discretion considering it as a matter of fact or law, is open to review by the Appellate Court. PEO v ARJUN MOHA

2 ————— Former deposition of witness—Evidence Act s 80—The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against a prisoner only on the condition prescribed by s 249 Criminal Procedure Code 1872—that is it must have been duly taken by the committing officer in the presence of the person against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession in order to afford prima facie evidence under s 80 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s 249. QUEEN v NESTERDUPP

4 ————— Witnesses before committing Magistrate—On the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife and child the witnesses for the prosecution gave evidence contradicting the evidence given by them before the committing Magistrate and the Sessions Judge purporting to act under s 249 Act V of 1872 discarded the evidence taken before himself and grounded his judgment on the evidence given before the Magistrate and on this evidence convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to death. On appeal by the prisoner —Held that s 249 did not warrant such a course of proceeding. That section merely authorizes the Court to take a particular statement made by a witness before the Magistrate as the true statement notwithstanding that it is denied or a statement inconsistent with it was made by the witness before the Judge only if the Judge should see that the original statement was worthy of belief and does not mean that the Court should discard wholly the testimony of witnesses before it and have recourse to the testimony of the same persons given before another officer. QUEEN v AMANULLA

5 ————— Use in Sessions Court of evidence taken before the committing Magistrate—Although under certain circumstances a Court of Session may use evidence given before the committing Magistrate as if it had been given before itself it is not proper for a Court of Session to base a conviction solely upon such evidence there being no other evidence on the record to corroborate it. QUEEN v AMANULLA

6 ————— Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate—Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s 288 Code of Criminal Procedure in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate. Where at a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge admitted, and under s 288 Code of Criminal Procedure such evidence without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness that her statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police—Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made some inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made. A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court. Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s 288 Criminal Procedure Code. Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and he had no disposition in any way to recede from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODES (ACT V OF 1898 ACT X OF 1892 ACT X OF 1872 ACTS XXV OF 1861 AND VIII OF 1869) — cont. and

the admission of that deposition by a Sessions Judge under a 258 Code of Criminal Procedure was improper. Queen v. Amannaulla 12 B I P 45 21 B I Cr 40 and Queen Empress v. Dina Sahas I L R 11 All 657 11 Week. Where a medical officer gave evidence before the committing Magistrate and it was not certified that the evidence was given in presence of the accused — Held that the admission of such evidence by the Sessions Judge under a 258 Code of Criminal Procedure was also improper. Where the police had kept a witness under surveillance for four days and the Sessions Judge considered that they were justified under the circumstances of the case — Held that there is no warrant in law for the police to keep the witness under such restraint and that statements so obtained can hardly be regarded as voluntary. BAIRAGI LAL v. EMPRESS

[4 C W N., 49]

7 — Previous statement to committing Magistrate retracted in Sessions Court — Use of such statement by Sessions Court as substantial evidence. — Where a witness who has made a statement before the committing Magistrate subsequently recants from that statement in the Court of Session the statement made before the committing Magistrate can be used under a 258 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to contradict the witness but the use of such statement as substantial evidence of the facts alleged by the witness on the prior occasion is fraught with the gravest peril and could never have been the intention of the Legislature. QUEEN EMPRESS v. NIRMAL DAS I L R 22 All 445

8 — Admissibility of evidence — Statement of approver made before committing Magistrate and afterwards retracted in the Court of Session. — Pardon was tendered by a Magistrate to one of several persons who were being tried before him for dacoity. The pardon was accepted, and the person to whom it was tendered made a statement as a witness before the Magistrate. The case having been committed to the Court of Session the approver in that Court totally repudiated his statement made before the Magistrate. Held that this repudiation did not prevent the Sessions Court from considering the evidence of the approver under the provisions of a 258 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN EMPRESS v. SONKEU

9 — Refusal to allow cross examination of witnesses. — A B and C having been charged with murder before a Magistrate two vakils presented their vakalatnamas and applied to be allowed to conduct the defence of the accused. The Magistrate refused permission and after recording the depositions of the witnesses committed the accused to take their trial before the Sessions Court. In the Court of the Magistrate the only material evidence for the prosecution was that of three witnesses who on being examined in the Sessions Court denied all knowledge of the facts to which they had deposed before the Magistrate. Two of them denied having made the statements recorded, while the third admitted the statements attributed to him but asserted they were false and made under pressure. The Sessions Judge disbelieving the statements made in his Court thereupon under a 249 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 15/2 (as amended by a 20 of the Amending Act) used the previous depositions as evidence in the case and mainly upon these convicted the accused of murder and sentenced them to transportation for life. Against this conviction and sentence the prisoners appealed to the High Court on the ground that the previous depositions ought not to have been used as evidence in the case as the Magistrate had refused to allow their leaders to appear and cross-examine the witnesses who made the depositions. The High Court affirmed the convictions and sentence. IN THE MATTER OF DHAM MENDEL

Meaning of words no evidence in section. — The words "no evidence" in the second and third clauses of a 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1892) must not be read as meaning "no satisfactory trustworthy or conclusive evidence." If there is evidence the trial must go on to its close; when in trials by jury the jury and in other trials the Judge after considering the opinions of the assessors have to find on the facts. It is only in the absence of any evidence as to the commission of the offence by the accused that the Court can record an acquittal without allowing the trial to go on or obtaining the opinion of the assessors or that the Court can direct the jury without going into the defence to return a verdict of not guilty. Queen Empress v. Doat and deat process—Procedure—G was convicted by the Joint Magistrate of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft and the case referred under the provisions of s 186 of Act V of 1882 to the High Court

for orders. It appeared that G whose understanding was of the most limited character was caught at night in a house with some anklets in his possession. He was a lad of 15 or 16 years of age and had been deaf and dumb from his birth. He sometimes lived with his father and sometimes by begging and there was little doubt that hunger had driven him to break into the house. He had never been in arrest before. The Court recommended that he should be made over to his father. QUEEN v GANGA 7 N W., 131

2. — Deaf and dumb person—Ability to understand charge—In the case of an accused person who was deaf and dumb the Deputy Magistrate who tried and convicted him considered that he did not understand the proceedings and accordingly referred the case to the Magistrate under s 181 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Magistrate considered that the accused did understand what he was charged with. Held that the finding of the Magistrate must prevail and s 186 did not apply. DOORJI HULWAI v ANANTHODAS

3. — Deaf and dumb person Trial of—The High Court under the circumstances of this case which came before it under the last clause of s 186 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1872 set aside the conviction of the prisoner who was deaf and dumb and directed that he be admonished and discharged. DWARKANATH HALDAR v NODER CHAND HANTRY 23 W R Cr., 36

4. — Deaf and dumb person Trial of—The High Court may under s 186 Criminal Procedure Code in the trial of a person who is deaf and dumb and who cannot understand the proceedings against him or plead to the charge treat the proceedings as amounting to a sufficient trial and pass sentence upon the prisoner according to the facts which seem to be established in the course and as the result of those proceedings. In this case the Court had no doubt that the prisoner was guilty but before passing final orders it gave the prisoner a further opportunity of being heard, and accordingly directed the Magistrate to give him notice. QUEEN v BOWKA HANI 22 W R., Cr, 36

proceedings to High Court—Power of High Court to pass final orders on such report—Discretion of High Court to order Sessions trial to be held—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) ss 311 and 312—Penal Code (Act V of 1860) s 462—An accused person who had been for some time confined in a lunatic asylum was tried and committed to the Sessions by a Deputy Magistrate on a charge of murder. The accused was deaf and dumb and could not be made to understand the proceedings which had been taken. On the proceedings being forwarded to the High Court under s 311 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it was held that the law does not contemplate that the Sessions trial should necessarily take place. That it is discretionary with the High Court on a commitment made to order the Sessions trial to be held and the High Court must consider whether any benefit would be likely to result especially to the accused by such trial. The High Court in this case having come to the conclusion that no benefit would be likely to result to the accused by his being tried by the Court of Sessions found that the accused was guilty of the alleged murder but that he was by reason of unsoundness of mind not responsible for his action and directed him to be kept in the district jail to await the orders of Government. QUEEN EMPRESS v SOWRI BOWKA

5 ——— Witness—Accused person calling as witnesses persons charged with him and awaiting a separate trial for same offence—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 132 — The accused D a European British subject was charged together with others who were natives of India under ss 391 380 and 389 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) with conspiring to commit extortion. D claimed to be tried by a mixed jury under s 400 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1873). The other accused who were natives of India then claimed to be tried separately under s 402. The trial of D then proceeded and at the close of the case for the prosecution he proposed to call as his witnesses the persons who had been charged with him and who were awaiting their trial. The object of this was to be called. Held that he was entitled to call them as witnesses and to examine them in cross-examination. The accused in effect of this was the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1873) meant the accused in a separate trial and not a joint trial. QUEEN EMPRESS v. BURGESS I L R, 23 Bom 213

1. Acquittal—Re trial—Interference of the High Court—Criminal Procedure Code s 530—Where an offence is tried by a Court without jurisdiction the proceedings are void under s 530 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act X of 1882 and the offender if acquitted is liable to be re tried under s 403. It is therefore not necessary for the High Court to upset the acquittal before the re trial can be had. QUEEN PARVATI v. HUSSIN (AIR 1951 I L R 8 Bom 307)

3. Previous acquittal—Upon a charge of dacoity the Magistrate having split up the charge convicted the accused of rioting using criminal force and misappropriating the property of a deceased person. On appeal the Sessions Court reversed the conviction holding that the offence was in dacoity but that the facts alleged being incredible there was no need to order a committal. The complainant thereupon lodged a fresh complaint of dacoity based on the same facts before another Magistrate. Held that the judgment of the Sessions Court was no bar to further proceedings. VIJAY LAL CHAKRAVARTY I. L. R. 7 Mad 667

3 and s 437—Different charges arising out of same transaction—Accused—Further inquiry—Re trial—E being charged with theft and mischief in respect of certain branches cut from a tree claimed by the complainant, was tried by a Subordinate Magistrate on the charge of mischief and acquitted on the ground that as against the complainant E had title to the tree. On the application of the complainant the District Magistrate directed further inquiry into the case under s 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and on a reference to the Court of Session the Sessions Judge held that as an inquiry at the charge of theft had been held the order was legal. Held that the District Magistrate had no power to pass such an order under s 437 and that a trial on the charge of theft was barred by the title of s 403 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

7 ———— Discharge of accused persons
under s. 215—Recital of proceedings at the instance of the Court of Session—Commitment of accused persons—Certain persons were charged under s. 417 of the Penal Code and were discharged by the Magistrate inquiring into the offence under s. 215 of Act X of 1872. The Court of Session considering that the accused persons had been improperly discharged forwarded the record to the Magistrate of the district suggesting to him to make the case over to a Subordinate Magistrate with directions to enquire into any offence other than the offence in respect of which the accused persons had been discharged which the evidence on the record showed to have been committed. The Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over made an inquiry and committed the accused persons for trial before the Court of Session on charges under ss. 303 and 470 of the Penal Code. It was contended that the Court of Session was not competent to direct the accused persons to be committed under s. 296 of Act X of 1872 the case not being a Sessions case within the meaning of that section and that the commitment was consequently illegal. Held that there was no direction to commit within the meaning of that section that it is to send the accused persons at once to the Sessions Court without further inquiry and whether or not the inquiry was made in consequence of the suggestions of the Court of Session was immaterial and that the inquiry upon the charges under ss. 303 and 420 of the Penal Code was rightly held by the Subordinate Magistrate and the commitment could not be impeached. *EXPRESS v. But under s. 298, as amended by Act VI of 1874 the Court has power to direct the subordinate Court to enquire into any offences for which it Court to enquire into any offences for which it Court renders a commitment should be ordered. When however a trial under such a commitment made by order of a Sessions Judge has been duly held and by actual failure of justice has been caused by the error of the Sessions Judge s. 298 of the Criminal Procedure Code would be a bar to the reversal of his judgment. *EXPRESS v. Procedure Code is bad in form if it does not specify the offence for which the parties are to be committed for trial at the Sessions. A trial for the offence of cheating is not a Sessions case within the meaning of s 296 having regard to the first portion of the definition of Sessions case in s 4 of the Code, which must be read as if the word only followed the words triable by a Court of Sessions. JAY KUNY SINGH v MAN PATICK 21 W R Cr 41

The Court accordingly was of opinion that if the accused had no opportunity given them of meeting the charge the commitment was not a good commitment. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BUNDHO

under s 437 Criminal Procedure Code that further inquiry should be made and the accused called on to enter upon his defence. The accused was not called upon to show cause why a further inquiry should not be made but a summons in the terms of s 63 of the Criminal Procedure Code was issued to him. On his appearance he was tried by the Magistrate of the district convicted and sentenced. The witnesses for the prosecution were not recalled but the Magistrate relied upon their evidence as recorded in the first trial and also upon the statement of a witness for the defence which was not receivable in evidence. Held that the proceedings of the Magistrate of the district were irregular first because notice to show cause why action should not be taken against him in the terms of s 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was not served upon the accused person before proceedings commenced under that section were commenced and secondly because the subsequent proceedings of the Magistrate were not such as are contemplated by the provisions of s 437 inasmuch as the conviction was practically based upon evidence which was not recorded in the course of a further inquiry before the Magistrate of the district but upon evidence which was recorded by the Deputy Magistrate and had been adjudicated upon by that officer and such irregularities were fatal to the conviction. QUREY EXPRESS v. 10. — Discharge of accused—Further inquiry Power to direct—An accused having been discharged after a full inquiry before a competent Court is entitled to the benefit of such discharge and as a consequence further evidence is disallowed. Consequently an order made by a District Judge directing a further inquiry to be held under s. 137 of the Criminal Procedure Code in a case where a Magistrate had discharged the accused under a 253 was not warranted by law when there had been a full inquiry by a competent Court and when no further evidence was disclosed such order being based merely upon the ground that in the opinion of the District Judge the evidence recorded was sufficient for the conviction if the accused. JESOO AMIRO ROY v SHRI CHANDRA DASS

12. — Further inquiry—Power of District Magistrate—Where an accused person has been discharged by a Magistrate further inquiry cannot be directed under s. 437 of the Code if Criminal Procedure on the ground that the Magistrate has not rightly appreciated the credit due to the witnesses. Further inquiry should only be directed when other witnesses merit have been examined or when the witnesses have not been properly examined; and inasmuch as s. 437 does not direct that the evidence already taken should be taken again the further inquiry should ordinarily be made by the Magistrate who made the original inquiry. Where a District Magistrate being of opinion that a subordinate Magistrate had without just cause refused credit to the witnesses in a certain case and had improperly discharged an accused person directed a further inquiry by another Magistrate and the accused was on the same evidence retried and convicted—Held that the conviction must be quashed. QUEEN EMPRESS v AMIR KHAN

The complainant then moved the District Magistrate for a further inquiry against the other persons and the District Magistrate a different officer without giving them notice ordered a further inquiry to be made. Held that the District Magistrate was not competent in the face of his predecessor's order to direct a further inquiry which had already been practically refused. The term 'further inquiry' in s 437 is not restricted to inquiry upon further materials or further or additional evidence. Before directing further inquiry under s 437 it is not obligatory on the District Magistrate to give notice to the person discharged or against whom the complaint was dismissed. When an order directing such inquiry is made the Subordinate Magistrate to whom it is directed has jurisdiction and is bound to carry it out. Such order remains in force until it is duly set aside or withdrawn. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODES (ACT V OF 1898 ACT X OF 1892 ACT X OF 1872 ACTS XXV OF 1891 AND VIII OF 1889) —continued

(Act V of 1892) s 437—Notice to an accused person is necessary in point of law before an order under s 437 can be passed but as a matter of discretion it is proper that such notice should be given. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PRINCEP WILSON TORRESMAN NOLAN LIGOR and O'HENEAL JJ)—After an inquiry by a subordinate Magistrate and the discharge of an accused person a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has jurisdiction under s 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry or a re-hearing upon the same materials which were before the subordinate Magistrate as when a further evidence is forthcoming. But (PRINCEP J dissenting) the words "further inquiry" in that section mean the inquiry preliminary to trial which regularly results in a charge or discharge and do not include the trial. And if on the evidence taken the accused ought to be committed then in a case trial only at the Sessions the proper course is to commit under s 437 in the case to refer to the High Court. Per PRINCEP J.—The word inquiry includes a trial and the "further inquiry" would therefore allow of the framing of a charge and the cross examination of witnesses for the prosecution. Per LIGORIAN CJ and O'HENEAL J.—The power given by s 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry is confined to cases in which the reviewing officer is satisfied for one of the reasons mentioned in s 433 that the subordinate officer has proceeded on insufficient materials and that with a more exhaustive inquiry further material would be forthcoming. It was not intended that such an enquiry should be granted simply for the reconsideration of evidence. IN THE MATTER OF HARI DAS SANYAL v SARITULLA I L R 16 Cal 608

25 — Further inquiry—Notice to the accused—Practice—Before making an order for further inquiry under s 437 Criminal Procedure Code a notice should be given to the accused person to give him an opportunity of being heard upon the question whether any further inquiry should be made. Hari Das Sanyal v Saritulla I L R 15 Cal 609 followed. JAIJAI RAM v SUPNAL BROWN [2 C W N 198]

26 — Discretion of Court—Further inquiry—Notice—Although there is nothing in s 437 rendering it incumbent to give notice before directing a further inquiry yet a Court would not be exercising a proper discretion if before ordering a further inquiry it did not give notice to the accused to show cause against such order. Where therefore a further inquiry was directed with out such previous notice to the accused the High Court set aside the order. Hari Das Sanyal v Saritulla I L R 15 Cal 608 followed. IN THE MATTER OF AMIT HARIADAS 3 C W N 249

at large inspector visited a toddy shop where the complainant and one D were employed as agents for the sale of toddy. Having reason to suspect that an offence under the Abkari Act (Bombay Act V of 1855) had been committed the accused made an inquiry in the course of which the complainant made certain statements implicating his fellow servant. The accused thereupon resolved to prosecute D and make the complainant a witness in the case. In order to prevent him being tutored, the accused ordered his peon to bring the complainant to his camp and there detained him during the night and in the following morning sent him in charge of a peon to a Magistrate's Court where the complainant repeated the statements made by him before the accused. He was then allowed to go away. The accused prosecuted D and in the course of his trial admitted in his deposition that he had ordered his peon to bring the complainant to his camp and had detained him there during the night. After the termination of D's trial the complainant charged the accused with wrongful confinement under s 342 of the Penal Code. The accused pleaded that the complainant had voluntarily come to his tent to have his statements reduced to writing and that he had of his own accord stopped in his camp during the night. The trying Magistrate held this plea proved and discharged the accused under s 233 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1860). The Sessions Judge held that though the accused had detained the complainant in his camp during the night still he was not guilty of any offence under the Penal Code as he had acted with malice and to the best of his judgment. He therefore declined to interfere or order a further inquiry. Held by the High Court on revision that the trying Magistrate had wrongly omitted to take into consideration the admissions made by the accused in his deposition in D's case. Those admissions had an important bearing on the present case. They were admissible in evidence against the accused and as they were left out of consideration the inquiry was necessarily incomplete and incorrect. Further inquiry was therefore ordered. DHANIA v CLIFFORD

1. Act XXIII of 1861 s 16

— Sending case for investigation by Magistrate—A Subordinate Judge, finding that a person had made a false verification of a plaint sent his case for investigation to a Magistrate of the district who refused to investigate it on the ground that the alleged offence was one triable exclusively by the Court of Session to which the Subordinate Judge himself should under s 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have committed it. Held that the Magistrate of the district was bound to proceed with the investigation of the case according to s 16 of Act XXIII of 1861. REG v ANKUTA NATH

2. Preliminary enquiry—

Procedure—Under s 471 Criminal Procedure Code the Court must first make a preliminary enquiry to satisfy itself that a specific charge coming under the sections mentioned in it ought to be preferred against the accused and after being so satisfied it must either commit the case or send the case to the Magistrate for enquiry whether a commitment should be made or not. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI PROSUNNO BAGCHEE

4. Act XXIII of 1861 s 16

— Order sending case to Magistrate for enquiry into offence of giving false evidence—Procedure—Enquiry—Charge—Although s 16 of Act XXIII of 1861 gives Civil Courts powers similar to those conferred on Civil and Criminal Courts alike by s 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code, still the law as to the procedure in cases under these sections is now embodied in s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In a suit brought to recover possession of certain property the Judge decided one of the issues raised in the plaintiff's favour but on the important issue as to whether the plaintiff ever had possession he found for the defendant. The plaintiff was not examined, but on the issue as to whether he called two witnesses. The Judge directed the defendant to make statements, and considering that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case gave judgment for the defendant with out requiring him to give evidence on that issue. In the concluding paragraph of the judgment the Judge directed the depositions of the two witnesses above referred to, together with the statements of the defendant to be sent to the Magistrate with a view to his enquiring whether or not they had voluntarily given false evidence. The defendant's counsel objecting, and he further directed the Magistrate to enquire whether or not the plaintiff had abetted the offence of giving false evidence on the ground that as the witnesses were the plaintiff's servants he must personally have influenced them and also to enquire whether the plaintiff which the plaintiff had attested contained statements which he knew to be false. On a motion to quash this order—Held that under s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Judge had no power to send a case to a Magistrate except when after having made such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary he is of opinion that there is sufficient ground (i.e. ground of a nature higher than mere surmise or suspicion) for directing judicial enquiry into the matter of a specific charge and that the Judge is bound to indicate the particular statements or averments in respect of which he considers that there is ground for a charge into which the Magistrate ought to enquire and that the order was bad because the Judge had made no preliminary enquiry and because it was too vague and general in its character. QUEEN v BAYYOO LALL IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI PROSUNNO BAGCHEE

5. Power of and procedure of

Court in making order under section—Order directing prosecution—Before a Court is justified in making an order under s 476, directing the prosecution of any person it ought to have before it direct evidence raising the offence upon the person whom it is sought to charge either in the course of the preliminary enquiry referred to in that section or in the earlier proceedings out of which the enquiry arises. It is not sufficient that the evidence in the earlier case may induce some sort of suspicion that the person had been guilty of an offence; but there must be distinct evidence of the commission of an offence by the person who is to be prosecuted. QUEEN v BAYYOO LALL I L R 1 Cal 450 and In the matter of the petition of Kali Prosunno Bagchee 23 W R., Cr., 33 followed. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI PROSUNNO BAGCHEE v GRIH CHANDRA SIKHAR

9. ———— Just int. on a writ of appeal in Civil Court—If in the course of a proceeding either civil or criminal a Judge or Magistrate finds clear ground for believing that either the parties to the proceeding or their witnesses have committed perjury or any other offence against public justice he is justified in directing criminal proceedings against such persons under s. 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code with any further enquiry than that which he has already held in his own Court. As a matter of discretion and propriety it is right for a Court before committing a person on a charge of perjury upon his own uncontradicted statement, to send the hearing of the appeal where an appeal is pending in the case in which he is charged with such perjury. IN THE MATTER OF MURRAY LANE JONES I L R. 9 Cal. 303

10. ———— Power to commit for offences—s 471 deals with a more extended class of cases, viz. all those mentioned in ss. 467, 468, and 469 in which not merely a Civil Court but any Court Civil or Criminal and whether possessing or not possessing the power to commit to the Court of Session is competent that there is sufficient ground for holding, on enquiry, and it enacts the procedure to be followed by this Court which may elect to adopt one of two courses that is to say it may either commit a case to the Court of Session if and where it has the power to do so, or, if it has not that power or is not disposed to exercise it it may send the case to a Magistrate having power to try or commit for trial the accused person for the offence charged. *EXPRESS v. The law requires only such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary. Held therefore where a Magistrate being of opinion that both the parties to a suit tried by him had given false evidence therein on certain points sent the case for enquiry to the Magistrate under s. 471 of Act V of 1872 with a proceeding embodying the facts of the case and charging the parties respectively with giving false evidence on such points and the case was nothing to show that any enquiry that the Magistrate had

s. 551—Unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose—I found Custody—A Hindu girl under the age of 14 years went of her own accord to a Mission house where she was received and allowed to remain. The mother and husband of the girl thereupon applied to the Magistrate who took proceedings under s. 501 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The lady superintendent of the Mission house denied that the girl was legally married and alleged that she was practically being brought up with the connivance of the mother to a life of prostitution. The Magistrate after recording evidence found that the girl was legally married, that the other allegation was established; and that although she went to and remained in the Mission house of her own free will there was under the circumstances an unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose. He further found that there were no facts established which would disentitle the husband or the mother to the custody of the girl and passed an order under the section directing the girl to be restored to her mother. Held upon the facts as found by the Magistrate as it was immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent to remain at the Mission house there was an unlawful detention within the meaning of these words as used in the section as the girl was kept against the will of those who were lawfully entitled to have charge of her. Held also that s. 551 applying only as it does to women and female children must not be construed so as to make it include purposes which, although not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian but that the purpose whether entertained towards a woman or a female child must be in itself unlawful. Held consequently that in the circumstances of the case there was no detention for an unlawful purpose and that the Magistrate had no power to make the order. Held further that although the Magistrate had no power under the section to make the order he did it did not follow that the Court should direct the girl to be restored to the custody of the lady superintendent even if it had the power to do so and that having regard to the circumstances of the case there was nothing to justify such an order being passed. ABRAHAM & MANTARO I. 3. Irregularity—Waiver or consent by prisoner—Recording statements of witnesses
—The jailor of a district jail being accused by one of the jail clerks of falsifying his accounts and defrauding the Government the matter was enquired into by the District Magistrate and the jailor was by the Magistrate a order placed on trial before a Bench of Magistrates consisting of the District Magistrate himself & the Officiating Superintendent of the jail and three other Honorary Magistrates. The prisoner and his pleaders were alleged to have stated before the commencement of the trial on being questioned that they had no objection to the composition of the Bench but after the charges had been framed the prisoner's counsel objected to the Bench as formed. The District Magistrate directed the Government pleader to prosecute and both the District Magistrate and L gave evidence for the prosecution. After the case for the prosecution was closed two formal charges were drawn up namely that the prisoner had debited Government with the price of more oil seed than he actually purchased and that he had received payment for certain oil at a higher rate than he credited to Government. The moneys the receipt of which were the subject of the first charge were obtained by the prisoner on the strength of certain vouchers which he had induced L to sign as correct and L had sanctioned the sale at the rates credited to Government. Upon the prisoner's giving the names of the witnesses he intended to call in his defence L was deputed by his brother Magistrates to examine some of them who were connected with the jail in order to guard against derivation and the depositions so taken were placed on the record to be used by either party though not themselves as evidence. The prisoner was convicted. On a motion to quash the conviction—Held that the recording the statements of the prisoner's witnesses was irregular. Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law and if they are substantially bad the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner. QUEEN v. 5. Summary jurisdiction wrongly exercised—Unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons—Splitting offence—Right of appeal Deprivation of—No Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself summary jurisdiction. If a charge of an offence not triable summarily is laid and sworn to the Magistrate must proceed with the case accordingly unless he is at the outset in a position to show from the deposition of the complainant that the circumstances of aggravation are really mere exaggeration and not to be believed. Therefore a Magistrate when he has before him a person charged with having been armed with a deadly weapon while a member of an unlawful assembly is not at liberty to disregard that part of the charge which charges the prisoner with having been armed with a deadly weapon and so to give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily and then by inflicting a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months to deprive the prisoner of his right of appeal. EXPRESS v. Such a course is different to disregarding part of a charge for the purpose of dealing with a case summarily. The High Court will not interfere where a Magistrate has bona fide acted in the interests of justice. EXPRESS v. ABDOL KARIM I. L. R. 4 Calc 18 distinguished. QUEEN EXPRESS v. PANGAMANI

7. Accused affirmed and examined—Appointment of Magistrate who convicted accused to be Crown Prosecutor—Right of prisoners to converse privately with pleader—Magistrates sitting on bench in Judge's Court during trial—Upon an inquiry which the High Court directed the Sessions Judge to make into an allegation that a confession was made under such circumstances as to be inadmissible in evidence the prisoners were ordered to be and were solemnly affirmed and the prosecution neither objected to the form of the order nor to the affirmation of the prisoners and, moreover cross-examined them but objected to their evidence being used upon the return of the inquiry. It was held that the objection though possibly good if taken in time was too late and that the evidence of the prisoners might be used, whether the order directing them to be affirmed was correct or otherwise. The appointment of the Magistrate who, in the first instance, had tried and convicted the accused, to be Crown Prosecutor to conduct an enquiry subsequently directed in the same case censured as being unprecedented and objectionable. A Public Prosecutor should be without a personal interest in the case which he conducts. Prisoners should be allowed to have free converse with their advocates and the hearing of the police officers in charge of such prisoners. It is undesirable that Magistrates whose decisions are under appeal or who have been engaged in promoting the prosecution, or police officers concerned in a case, should sit on the bench beside or converse privately in Court with the Judge who is engaged in trying the prisoners' appeal. If the Appellate Judge wishes to ascertain any facts relating to the case from the Magistrate who convicted the accused, he should examine the Magistrate upon oath or a solemn affirmation in the same manner as an ordinary witness. REG v KASHINATH DISKAR 8 Bom. It is essential too in a case of perjury that he should know at what period he ceased to be a witness and his position was changed to that of the accused. QUEEN v KALICHURN LALGOORE [9 W R Cr 54]

44. Irregularity in omitting to call on accused for defence.—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s. 259 s. 263 of (d) and s. 537.—Misdirection to jury.—The formality of calling upon an accused person to enter on his defence under the provisions of s. 259 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not a mere formality but is an essential part of a criminal trial. Omission to do so occasions a failure of justice and is not cured by s. 537 of the Code. To allow the jury to pronounce their verdict before the accused is called upon to enter on his defence is a misdirection though the Judge omits to charge the jury at all. a yadast from a revenue officer and convicting accused without examining complainant.—A revenue officer sent a yadast to a third class Magistrate charging a certain person with having disobeyed a summons issued by the revenue officer. The third class Magistrate thereupon tried and convicted the accused under s 174 of the Penal Code. The District Magistrate referred the case on the ground that the conviction was bad under s 530 (k) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 62. Criminal Procedure Code 1882 s 530 cl (p)—Offence originally cognizable by a second class Magistrate subsequently non cognizable by reason of an aggravating circumstance.—Duty of inferior Court.—The accused were charged before a Magistrate of the second class with causing grievous hurt as members of an unlawful assembly under ss 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code. The evidence showed that one of the accused had used an axe in causing the hurt. The Magistrate apparently ignored this fact and he convicted the accused under s 325 of the Code. The accused appealed. The District Magistrate who heard one appeal and the first class Magistrate who heard the rest of the appeals were both of opinion that the offences committed by the accused was one of causing grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon within the meaning of a 326 of the Penal Code and as such beyond the jurisdiction of the second class Magistrate. But they did not think it proper under the circumstances of the case to quash the convictions. The Sessions Judge on examining the record of the case was of opinion that as the offence committed by the accused was not cognizable by the trying Magistrate his proceedings were void ab initio under s 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code. He therefore referred the case to the High Court and recommended that the convictions under s 325 should be set aside. Held that the proceedings before the second class Magistrate were not void ab initio as he had jurisdiction to try the accused for offences punishable under ss 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code with which they were originally charged. Held also that though it was the duty of the trying Magistrate when the evidence disclosed a circumstance of aggravation such as the use of a dangerous weapon which made the offence cognizable by a higher Court to adopt the proper procedure to send the case to the higher Court still it was not necessary to quash the proceedings as the accused were not in any way prejudiced and the sentences were not inadequate. *QUEEN EMPRESS v. The woman alleged to have been enticed away resided in Bombay but the alleged adultery took place at Khandala outside the jurisdiction. At the enquiry before the Magistrate in Bombay objection was taken as to his jurisdiction with regard to the charge of adultery. The Magistrate however overruled the objections and committed the accused for trial. At the trial an application was made on behalf of the accused under s 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code (X of 1882) that the commitment should be quashed and a fresh enquiry directed on the ground that an objection had been taken to the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Held refusing the application that the commitment being an order (see *Queen Empress v. said-deed and act aside the attachment. He also applied to the High Court to quash the commitment or stay the criminal proceedings pending the disposal of the civil suit. Held refusing the application as that the mere fact that a regular suit was filed to establish the genuineness of the sale-deed was not a sufficient ground for quashing the commitment or for adjourning the trial pending the hearing of the civil suit. 1722 DEVI VALABHAYANI

In the matter of Ham I. rood Ha ro B. L. R. Sep 101 420 followed. It is very doubtful if the High Court has any power to pass an order quashing the proceedings before a Magistrate. No section of the Criminal Procedure Code expressly authorizes the High Court to quash pending proceedings. PER GHOSH J.—A proceeding in a criminal Court should not as a general rule be stayed pending the decision of the civil suit in regard to the same subject-matter but ordinarily it is not desirable if the parties to the two proceedings are substantially the same and the prosecution is but a private prosecution, and the issues in the two Courts are substantially identical that both the cases should go on at once and at the same time. It is open to the Magistrate having regard to the facts of the case before him, to consider whether it is not desirable that the proceedings in his Court should be stayed till the decision of the civil suit or for a limited period of time and it is also open to him to put the defendant on terms as to appearance or otherwise if he does stay proceedings. The High Court has the power to order a Magistrate to stay proceedings in his Court if a sufficient cause in that behalf is made out. But inasmuch as the Legislature has given him the power to regulate the proceedings in his own Court the direction should ordinarily be left to him either to stay proceedings or not as he in the circumstances of each case may think right and proper. RAJ KUMARI DEBI & BAMA SUNDARI DEBI

One of the accused had made a confessional statement before the Magistrate who recorded it but did not make on it a memorandum to the effect stated in Criminal Procedure Code s 164 and did not submit it in evidence for the reasons that the accused was produced from the custody of the police in which he had been detained for five days and there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat him as an approver. It appeared that a perusal of the preliminary register would have shown that the accused were either guilty under s 396 or not guilty under s 395 at all. The accused were tried by the Sessions Judge with a jury. The confessional statement was not admitted in evidence. The jury found the accused not guilty of dacoity but the Judge disagreeing with the verdict referred the case to the High Court under Criminal Procedure Code s 50. Held (1) that the procedure adopted by the Judge was wrong and that he should have tried the accused with the aid of assessors under Indian Penal Code s 296 (2) that the Judge should have enquired under Criminal Procedure Code s 533 whether the confessional statement had been duly made and (3) that under the circumstances the High Court should determine on the evidence on record after giving due weight to the opinions of the Judges and the jury whether the accused were guilty under s 395. QUEEN EMPRESS & ANOJA VALAYAN

One of the accused had made a confessional statement before the Magistrate who recorded it but did not make on it a memorandum to the effect stated in Criminal Procedure Code s. 161 and did not admit it in evidence for the reasons that the accused was produced from the custody of the police in which he had been detained for five days and there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat him as an approver. It appeared that a perusal of the preliminary register would have shown that the accused were either guilty under s. 390 or not guilty under s. 390 at all. The accused were tried by the Sessions Judge with a jury. The confessional statement was not admitted in evidence. The jury found the accused not guilty of dacoity but the Judge, disagreeing with the verdict, referred the case to the High Court under Criminal Procedure Code s. 307. Held (1) that the procedure adopted by the Judge was wrong and that he should have tried the accused with the aid of assessors under Indian Penal Code s. 396; (2) that the Judge should have enquired under Criminal Procedure Code s. 633 whether the confessional statement had been duly made and (3) that under the circumstances the High Court should determine on the evidence in record after giving due weight to the opinions of the Judge and the jury whether the accused were guilty under s. 395. QUEEN EMPRESS v. 13. Entry in property and cutting trees—The entry by one man on another's property accompanied by the cutting down of trees on that property is criminal trespass. QUEY v. JEEVU DESAI 1 W. R., Cr., 48

14. Entering on land after decree giving another possession—Accused was owner of complainant's family. Complainant obtained a decree setting aside an alienation made by accused. In execution complainant obtained possession from the alienee. The accused entered on this land. Held that he had not committed the offence of criminal trespass. ANONIMOUS [8 Mad. Ap 10]

15. Re-entry into or remaining on land from which person has been ejected by civil process—Certain immovable property was the joint undivided property of C and a certain other person. E obtained a decree against C for the possession of such property and such property was delivered to him in the execution of that decree in accordance with the provisions of s. 264 of Act X of 1877. C in good faith with the intention of asserting her right and without any intention to intimidate, insult or annoy E or to commit an offence and C in like manner with the intention of asserting the right of his co-owners remained on such property. Held that under such circumstances they could not be convicted of criminal trespass. Re-entry into or remaining upon land from which a person has been ejected by civil process or of which possession has been given to another for the purpose of asserting rights he may have solely or jointly with other persons is not criminal trespass unless the intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy is conclusively proved. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GODIND PRASAD [I. other person or to commit an offence then though he may have no right to the land he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass. So also if a person deals injuriously with property in the bona fide belief that it is his own he cannot be convicted of mischief. The mere assertion however in such cases of a claim of right is not in itself a sufficient answer to charges of criminal trespass and mischief. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right then it cannot refuse to convict the offender assuming that the other facts are established which constitute the offence. EXPRESS OF INDIA v. 17. Acting in exercise of right of distraint—Pent Act (Bengal Act VIII of 1869) ss. 71-76—A the servant of B was convicted of criminal trespass in going upon the land of C one of B's tenants and preventing him from cutting his crops. B was convicted of abetment of criminal trespass. A and B pleaded that they were acting in the exercise of the legal right of distraint. It appeared that no written demand under s. 72 of the Rent Act (Bengal Act VIII of 1869) for the amount of the arrears together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which demand had been made was served on C and that no written authority under s. 70 had been given by B to A. Held that it lay upon A and B to show that they had conformed to the provisions of the law or at least had acted with the bona fide intention of distraining the complainant's crops; and that the conviction was right. Held also that as under s. 74 standing crops and ungathered products may notwithstanding distraint be reaped and gathered by the cultivator A had no right even if he was acting bona fide to restrain C from cutting his crops. JHUMUR DOWAN v. 26. ————— Penal Code ss 441 and 446—House breaking by a ght—Intent—When a stranger uninvited and without any right to be there effects an entry in the middle of the night into the sleeping apartment of a woman a member of a respectable household, and when an attempt is made to capture him need great violence in his efforts to make good his escape a Court should presume that the entry was made with an intent such as is provided for by s 441 of the Penal Code. An accused person in the middle of the night effected an entry into a house occupied by two widows members of a respectable family. On an alarm being given and an attempt made to capture him he made use of great violence and effected his escape. Upon these facts he was charged with offences under ss 446 and 343 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was an alibi which was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the house but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 446. It was contended that as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence the conviction was illegal. Held that under the circumstances of the case the Court ought to presume that the entry was effected with such intent as is provided for by s 441 and that the conviction should be upheld. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KOLASH CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY KOLASH CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY v. On an alarm being given and an attempt made to capture him he escaped. He was charged with an offence under s. 456 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the room but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 456. It was contended that as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence the conviction was illegal. CROWN DEBTS

Judgment-debt in name of
Secretary of State for India in Council—Insolvent Act (11 & 12 Vic c 21) s 62—A judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State for India in Council, arising out of transactions at a public sale of opium held by the Secretary of State for India in Council is a debt in respect of Crown property and therefore a debt due to our Sovereign lady the Queen within the meaning of s. 62 of the Insolvent Act. In determining whether or no a debt falls under the denomination of a Crown debt the question is not in whose name the debt stands but whether the debt when recovered falls into the offers of the State. *Principle in Secretary of State

TALS APPEALS FROM
[I. L. R., 2 Calc 273]

1. ———— Provocation—Beatings—Deliberation.—A person who beats another brutally and continuously so that death results is guilty of murder or culpable homicide not amounting to murder
according as there may or may not have been grave
provocation. QUEEN v. TEFRA FAKEN
[5 W. R. Cr 78]

2. ———— Penal Code s 300
—Culpable homicide though committed under provocation will amount to murder unless it is proved
not only that the act was done under the influence of some feeling which took away from the person doing it all control over his actions, but that that feeling had an adequate cause. QUEEN v. HART GIRT
[I. L. R. A. Cr 11 10 W. R. Cr 28]

3. ———— Grave and sudden provocation—Murder—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder is when a man kills another on being deprived of self control by reason of grave and sudden provocation. But when the act is done
after the first excitement had passed away and there was time to cool it is murder. QUEEN v. YAK
SHEIKH

[4 B. L. R. A. Cr 6 12 W. R., Cr., 68]

4. ———— Penal Code s 300
—The provocation contemplated by s. 300 of the Penal Code should be of a character to deprive the offender of his self control. In determining whether it was so it is admissible to take into account the condition of mind in which the offender was at the time of the provocation. EMPEROR v. KHOGATI
[I. L. R., 2 Mad. 122]

5. ———— Sudden provoca- tion—Penal Code s 300 except 1—To enable a person to plead the extenuating circumstances provided for in s. 300 Penal Code except 1 the provocation and its effects must be sudden as well as grave and

the deprivation of the power of self control must continue in order to benefit a man who kills another under circumstances of grave provocation QUEEN v BUCHOO SAOIT 19 W R, Cr, 35

6 Grave provocation—Interval between provocation and attack—Where a man suddenly cut his wife's throat it was held that in order to establish that the act was not done under grave provocation so as to bring the case under excep 1 of s. 300 of the Penal Code it is not sufficient to state that the deceased ceased abusing the prisoner then but it is necessary to show what interval elapsed between the time when the deceased ceased to speak and the instant when the prisoner attacked her. The offence in this case held to be culpable homicide QUEEN v NOKUI NUSURO [7 W R, Cr 72]

7 Sudden fight—Where it appeared in the case of a person charged with murder that while smarting from a severe blow from a stick in the midst of a sudden fight and possibly apprehensive of future violence finding a knife at hand he took it up and in the melee inflicted the wound which caused the death of the deceased—Held that under the circumstances the accused was guilty under the Penal Code s. 304 of culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v SOMIRUDDIN [24 W R, Cr 48]

8 Hasty and fatal blow—The prisoner having struck the deceased a hasty but fatal blow with a stick in his hand at the time for abusing his mother was held guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v SULIKUM 1 W R, Cr 23

9 Grave provocation—The prisoners found the deceased lying in the same bed with their sister and ill treated him from the effects of which ill treatment he died. Held that the provocation was sufficiently grave to justify a conviction of culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v HASSEEMONDEN [4 W R, Cr 38]

QUEEN v MAITHYA GAZEE 6 W R, Cr 42

10 Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s. 304—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Grave and sudden provocation—A person accused of murder under s. 302 of the Penal Code pleaded in defence that he had found his sister having illicit connection with a man named Thakur and had in a fit of passion killed them both on the spot. The statement being accepted was held to be a good plea of grave and sudden provocation so as to reduce the offence to one of culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN EMPRESS v CHUNNI I L R, 18 All 497

11 Grave provocation—Husband finding wife in adultery—Two prisoners confessed that having caught the deceased in the act of having sexual intercourse with the wife of one of them they then and there killed him. Held that the grave provocation given reduced the crime

from murder to culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v GOTE CHUND POLLE [1 W R, Cr 17]

12 Grave provocation—Husband finding wife in adultery—Where a prisoner confessed that he did not suspect his wife's fidelity; that he left home on business that on his return he saw what convinced him of his wife's infidelity; and that maddened at the sight he killed both her and her paramour—Held that he was guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder and that the case was one in which he ought to be treated with lenity QUEEN v BOODHOO [8 W R, Cr 38]

13 Grave provocation—Husband seeing wife seduced to adultery—The wife of the prisoner had been forcibly taken to the house of the deceased a native physician who alleged that her presence was necessary to the due performance of certain incantations. The prisoner armed with a sword and watching from the roof of the house saw his wife being actually violated by the deceased. He jumped down from the roof and struck deceased with his sword in several places from the effects of which he died. Held that the prisoner's conviction for murder could not be sustained. The offence committed was culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v RAMTALAH KAHAR [3 B L R, A Cr 33]

14 Grave provocation—Husband seeing wife in adultery—Deliberation—On a certain evening M a common workman saw N committing adultery with his (M's) wife and on the following morning while labouring under the excitement provoked by their misconduct came upon them eating food together while his wife had neglected to provide food for M. M took up a bill hook and killed N on the spot. Held that if M connected the subsequent conduct of N and his wife with their misconduct on the preceding evening and regarded it as implying an open avowal of their criminal relations which under the circumstances he might have done the provocation was sufficiently grave and sudden to deprive him of self control and to reduce the offence from murder to culpable homicide not amounting to murder BOYA MUNIADU v QUEEN [1 L R, 3 Mad. 33]

15 Right of private defence—Penal Code ss 97 99 and 104—When the accused whose property had frequently been stolen went out with a lates to watch his property and with the lates struck a thief who died from the effects of the blows it was held (having regard to the nature of the injuries inflicted and to the subsequent conduct of the accused) that the case did not fall within the 4th exception to s. 99 and that the prisoner was not guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder but was protected by ss 97 and 104 of the Penal Code and had not exceeded the legal right of private defence of property QUEEN v MOKEE 12 W R, Cr 15

16 Search by police for stolen property—Apprehended violence—A head constable making an investigation into a case of

house breaking and theft searched the coats of certain gipsies for the stolen property but discovered nothing. After he had completed the search the gipsies gave him a certain sum of money which he accepted but at the same time not deeming it sufficient he demanded a further sum from them. They refused to give any thing more on the ground that they were poor and had no more to give. Thereupon he unlawfully ordered one of them to be bound and taken away. On his subordinates proceeding to execute such order all the gipsies in the camp, men, women and children, turned out a mob of four or five of the men being armed with sticks and stones, and advanced in a threatening manner towards the place where such gipsy was being bound and the head constable was standing. Before any actual violence was used by the crowd of advancing gipsies, the head constable fired with a gun at such crowd, when it was about five paces from him and killed one of the gipsies and having done so ran away. Any apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be the consequence of the acts of such crowd would have ceased had he released the gipsy he had unlawfully arrested and withdrawn him if and his subordinates or had he effected his escape. Held that such head constable had not a right of private defence against the acts of such gipsies as those acts did not reasonably cause the apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be their consequence and such head constable was guilty of culpable homicide amounting to murder. EXPRESS OF INDIA v. ABDUL HAKIM I L R 3 All. 253

17 — Killing outlaw while endeavouring to escape—Penal Code s 300 except 3—The prisoners, fearful of being punished if they allowed him to escape, and thinking that they were acting lawfully in furtherance of a plan arranged for them by a police constable and the lumberdar of a village for the capture of an outlaw for whose arrest a reward had been offered and in pursuance thereof killed him while endeavouring to escape. Held that the offence committed came under the third exception in s 300 of the Penal Code and was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. AKAN (5 N W 130)

18 — Unpremeditated assault—Penal Code s 300 except 4—An unpremeditated assault ending in an affray in which death is caused committed in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel comes within except 4 of s 300 of the Penal Code. It is immaterial which party offered the provocation or committed the first assault. QUEEN v. ZALIM RAI I W R Cr 33

19 — Inflicting injury not sufficient to cause death—Heat of intention to cause death—Penal Code s 299 300—Where the prisoner knocked his wife down put one knee on her chest and struck her two or three violent blows on the face with the closed fist producing extravasation of blood on the brain and she died in consequence either on the spot or very shortly afterwards—Held that there being no intention to cause death and the bodily injury not being sufficient in the ordinary

course of nature to cause death the offence committed by the prisoner was not murder but culpable homicide not amounting to murder. P. GOVINDA [I L R, 1 Bom 343]

20 — Grievous hurt—Blow causing injury not intended—An accused struck a woman carrying an infant in her arms violently over head and shoulders. One of the blows fell on the child's head causing death. Held that the accused was not guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder but had committed hurt on the infant under circumstances of sufficient aggravation to bring the offence within the definition of grievous hurt. EXPRESS v. SAMAN RAO

21 — Death from violent attack—Where death has resulted from a violent attack the Magistrate is bound to commit to the Court of Session on a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Conviction of grievous hurt in such a case is contrary to law. IN THE MATTER OF GORI NATH SHARMA I C L R 141

22 — Consenting to act likely to cause death—Murder—Penal Code s 300 except 5—Except 5 to s 300 refers to cases where a man consents to submit to the doing of some particular act either knowing that it will certainly cause death or that death will be the likely result but it does not refer to the running of a risk of death from something which a man intends to avert if he possibly can do so even by causing the death of the person from whom the danger is to be anticipated. PER BRONKHORST J—Except 5 to s 300 is not applicable to the case of a premeditated fight but points to a different character such as riot. EXPRESS v. ROHMUDDIN

23 — Riot—Unlawful assembly—Fight between two contending factions each armed with deadly weapons—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1856) s 300 except 6—Where death results in a fight between two bodies of men deliberately fighting together a greater proportion of the men composing both sides being armed with deadly weapons and it being further apparent from the evidence that the man slain was an adult and that no unfair advantage was taken by the one side or the other during the fight the offence committed is culpable homicide but does not amount to murder. SAMSHERE KHAN v. EUREZZES

24 — Penal Code s 300 of 5 and ss 139 and 307—Murder Attempt to commit—Rioting armed with deadly weapons—Pre-arranged fight—In a case in which it was found that all the accused were guilty of rioting armed with deadly weapons that the fight was premeditated and pre-arranged a regular pitched battle or trial of strength between the two parties concerned in the riot and that one of the accused in the course of the riot and in prosecution of the common object of the assembly killed or attempted to kill a man under such circumstances that his act

amounted to an attempt to murder the question arose whether that act could be said to bear a less grave character by reason of excep. 5 to s. 300 of the Indian Penal Code Per Curiam—Held that upon such finding the case did not fall within the exception Per LIGOT J (PETHURAM C.J. and MACPHERSON J. concurring)—The 5th exception to s. 300 should receive a strict and not a liberal construction and in applying the exception it should be considered with reference to the act consented to or authorized and next with reference to the person or persons authorized and as to each of those some degree of particularity at least should appear upon the facts proved before the exception can be said to apply Shamshere Khan v. Empress I L R 6 Cal 154 and Queen v. Kukier Mather unreported dissented from so far as they decide that from such a finding as the above consent to take the risk of death is inferred. Per O'KEEFE J—Before excep. 5 can be applied it must be found that the person killed with a full knowledge of the facts determined to suffer death or take the risk of death; and that this determination continued up to and existed at the moment of his death Queen v. Kukier Mather unreported observed on Per GHOSE J—No general rule of law can be laid down in determining in cases of this description whether the person killed or wounded suffered death or took the risk of death with his own consent it being a question of fact and not of law to be decided upon the circumstances of each case as it arises. Shamshere Khan v. Empress I L R 6 Cal. 154 and Queen v. Kukier Mather unreported observed on and the propositions of law laid down therein concurred with. QUEEN EMPRESS v. DATAMUDDIN I L R 18 Cal. 484

25 ——— Subjecting person of full age to emasculation—When a man of full age (i.e. above 18 years) submits himself to emasculation performed neither by a skilful hand nor in the least dangerous way and dies from the injury the persons concerned in the act are guilty of culpable homicide amounting to murder QUEEN v. BABOOLUN HILBAH 5 W R. Cr. 7

26 ——— Knowledge of likelihood to cause death—Pre-meditation—Where a person snatches up a log of heavy wood and strikes another with it on a vital part with so much force and vindictiveness as to cause that other person a death almost on the spot the act must be held to have been done with the knowledge that it was likely to cause death but if done without pre-meditation in the heat of passion on a sudden quarrel, the offence committed is culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v. PAJOO GHOSH 7 W R. Cr. 108

27 ——— Taking persons on old boat—Negligence—Penal Code s. 299—Certain persons whom the accused a ferryman was rowing across a river were drowned by the sinking of the boat which was an old one with holes in it over which planks had been nailed. Held that the prisoner could not be convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder unless it could be shown

that he acted with the knowledge that he was likely by taking them in the boat to cause death within the terms of a 299 of the Penal Code QUEEN v. MAGYER BEHARA II W R. Cr. 3

28 ——— The knowledge that an act is likely to cause death does not constitute culpable homicide amounting to murder. It must be shown that the act was committed with the knowledge that it must in all probability cause death. QUEEN v. GIRDHAREE SING 6 N W 28

29 ——— Act likely to cause death—Penal Code ss 304 and 304 (a)—Assault on thief—The prisoners assaulted a thief so severely that he died. One hundred and forty one marks of separate blows were found on the body of the deceased and several of his ribs were broken. Held that s. 304 (a) of the Penal Code was not applicable to the circumstances of the case and that taking the offence out of the category of murder it must still come under s. 304 QUEEN v. MAN 6 N W 335

30 ——— Causing death by branding a thief—Dangerous act—Causing death by branding a thief without the knowledge that the act was so imminently dangerous that it would in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as was likely to cause death is punishable under s. 304 of the Penal Code as culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v. LUNDEN MISSE 7 W R. Cr. 54

31 ——— Penal Code s. 304 (a)—Administering milk to child in such quantity as to kill it—Rash and negligent act—Knowledge of consequences—Where there was medical evidence to show that milk had been administered to a child in such quantities as to kill it but there was no evidence to show that the milk was administered by the orders of the mother or that she knew the quantity that was being administered—Held that there was not sufficient evidence to bring her within s. 304 (a) of the Penal Code. The Sessions Judge found that the mother could not have been ignorant of the fact that her child was being over-fed or of the probable consequences of such over-feeding; such feeding was inconsistent with the terms of s. 304 (a) which provides for the causing of death by any rash or negligent act not amounting to murder. What a man does with the knowledge that the consequences will be likely to cause death cannot be reduced to a simply rash and negligent act. QUEEN v. PEMCOER 5 N W 38

32 ——— Intent on to cause injury likely to result in death—Causing death by rash act—Culpable rashness—Culpable negligence—Prisoner killed his mother by beating and kicking her. The Sessions Judge found that the death resulted from brutal beating and kicking but acquitted of culpable homicide because the violence was not such as the prisoner must have known to be likely to cause death. Held that this was no ground for acquitting of culpable homicide not amounting to murder; the question for the Judge was whether the act was done with the intention of causing bodily injury which was likely to cause death. The Sessions

Judge convicted the prisoner on the charge of causing death by a rash act. Held that the act was wholly inapplicable. Culpable rashness and culpable negligence distinguished. QUEEN v. NIDAMARTI NAGABHUSHANAM 7 Mad. 119

ss 299 304 and 323—Voluntarily causing death by rash or negligent act—Where a person hurt another who was suffering from spleen disease intentionally but without the intention of causing death or causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely by his act to cause death as by his act caused the death of such other person—Held that he was not guilty of culpable homicide and properly convicted under s 323 of the Penal Code of voluntarily causing hurt EMPRESS OF INDIA v. FOX I L R. 2 All. 523

34 ————— Penal Code ss 304
325—Voluntarily causing death by rash or negligent act—Where a person voluntarily caused hurt to A who was suffering from spleen disease knowing himself to be likely to cause grievous hurt but without the intention of causing death or causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely by his act to cause death, and caused grievous hurt to A from which A died. Held that A ought not to be convicted under s 304 (a) of the Penal Code of causing death by negligence but under s 325 of that Code of voluntarily causing grievous hurt EMPRESS OF INDIA v. O'BRIEN I L R. 2 All. 766

35 ————— Penal Code
ss 304 (a) 323—Causing death by a rash or negligent act—Voluntarily causing hurt—A person with out the intention to cause death or to cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely by his act to cause death or the intention to cause grievous hurt or the knowledge that he was likely by his act to cause grievous hurt but with the intention of causing hurt caused the death of another person by throwing a piece of a brick at him which struck him in the region of the spleen and ruptured it the spleen being diseased. Held that the offence committed was not the offence of causing death by a rash or negligent act but the offence of voluntarily causing hurt EMPRESS OF INDIA v. RANDHIA SINGH I L R. 3 All. 597

ss 299 300 302 304 (a) 325—Causing death by rash or negligent act—Grievous hurt—Where a person struck another a blow which caused death without any intention of causing death or of causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely by such act to cause death but with the intention of causing grievous hurt—Held that the offence of which such person was guilty was not the offence of causing death by a rash act but the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt *QUEEN v. s 304 (a)—Doing act with rashness and negligence—Where an accused was charged with culpable homicide and the evidence showed that the deceased had an enlarged spleen and that his death was caused by rupture of the spleen occasioned by blows inflicted by the accused on the body of the deceased—Held that it was not sufficient in order to find the accused guilty of a rash act under s 304 (a) of the Penal Code that the jury should be satisfied only of the prevalence of the disease of enlargement of the spleen in the district and infer therefrom criminal rashness in beating the deceased but that they should also be satisfied that the accused was aware of the prevalence of such disease in the district and also aware of the risk to life involved in striking a person afflicted with that disease EMPRESS OF INDIA v. FOX I L R. 4 Cal. 816

s 304 (a)—Penal Code ss 336 337 and 338—Rashness—Negligence—s 304 (a) of the Penal Code does not apply to a case in which there has been the voluntary commission of an offence against the person. If a man intentionally commits such an offence and consequences beyond his immediate purpose result it is for the Court to determine how far he can be held to have the knowledge that he was likely by such act to cause the actual result and if such knowledge can be imputed the result is not to be attributed to mere rashness; if it cannot be imputed still the wilful offence does not take the character of rashness because its consequences have been unfortunate. Acts, probably or possibly involving danger to others but which in themselves are not offences may be offences under s 336 337 338 or 304 (a) if done without due care to guard against the dangerous consequences. Acts which are offences in themselves must be judged with regard to the knowledge or means of knowledge of the offender and placed in their appropriate place in the class of offences of the same character *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. case and that the welfare of the infant, irrespective of its age is the main feature to be regarded. Semble—A boy of fourteen and a girl of sixteen have a right to choose their own residence. 10 ——— Appointment of Guardian—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) ss 9 and 17—Application by a Christian father to be appointed guardian of his Hindu minor son—Matters to be considered by the Court in appointing guardian—A who was originally a Hindu but afterwards became a Christian and abandoned his family residence applied to be the guardian of the person of his minor son. On the objections of the paternal and maternal uncles of the boy that under the circumstances of the case the father was not fit and proper person to be appointed the guardian of the minor—Held although the father is prima facie entitled to the custody of his infant child, he can be deprived of such parental right if the circumstances justify it therefore in a case where a child who was brought up as a Hindu and who expressed a desire to remain a Hindu and was living with his Hindu relation who was maintaining him and was looking after his education properly it would not be to the welfare of the child that he should be handed over to the father and brought up in the Christian faith and that the Court held under the circumstances of the case was right in dismissing the application. MOKOOND LALSINGH & NARODIP CHUNDER SINGHA

11. ——— Mother's right to custody—Guardian—Act IX of 1861—Marriage of Mahomedan mother with Christian in Mahomedan form—A child the offspring of a Christian marriage was living after her father's death under the protection of her mother. A married man a Christian came to live with her mother and in order to legalize their intercourse he and the mother became Mahomedans, and were married in Mahomedan form. About three years after when the child had attained the age of fourteen, some of her relatives applied for an order under Act IX of 1861 that this girl be removed from the guardianship of the mother and her second husband and placed under a Christian guardian. The girl deposed that she wished to remain with her mother and to become a Mahomedan. Held by the High Court in granting the application and appointing a guardian in place of her mother that a Judge in the exercise of his jurisdiction under the Act is justified in having respect to the religion professed by the father of a minor and in passing such orders with regard to the custody of the person of such minor as he may hold to be in accordance with what would have been the minor's father's wishes had he been alive to express them. Where a mother under colour of a change of religion forms a connection or leads a life which by persons professing her husband's faith would be deemed immoral

she thereby ceases to be a proper person to be entrusted with the education of the children of her deceased husband. If the Court finds a case made out for its interference it will not be deterred from the exercise of its powers because the persons stating it in motion may be actuated by motives other than the interests of the minor. Special leave having been given to appeal to the Privy Council, the order was upheld. SEKHYER & ORDS 10 B L R. 125

1. ——— Origin of custom.—A custom to be valid must be ancient must have been continued and acquired in and must be reasonable and certain. LALA & HIRA SINGH I. L. R. 2 All., 49

2. ——— Effect of custom.—Written contract—Custom cannot affect the express terms of a written contract. INDUR CHUNDER DROHAR & LACHMI DEVI 7 B L R. 682 15 W R., 501

3. ——— Custom contrary to law of inheritance.—Custom, when it is ancient, invariable and established by clear and positive proof overrides the usual law of inheritance. KUTUBA KUTUBAR & MOHAMMED DEO GOVERNMENT & MOHAMMED DEO W R. 1864 39

4. ——— Custom regular succession Proof of.—If it is contended that the succession to property is regulated by any special family custom that custom ought to be alleged and proved with distinctness and certainty. SERMAN UMAN & PALATHAN & JILL MARYA COOTHY UMAN [15 W R., P. C. 47]

5 Family custom—Intermarriages—To establish a family custom at variance with the ordinary law of inheritance it is necessary to show that the usage is ancient and has been invariable and it should be established by clear and positive proof. VENKAT NARAIN v. RUDRANATH NARAIN DEY W R. 1804 26

6 Custom contrary to Hindu law—Where a custom according to which the Rajah of Boerboom had granted a right to a share of property described as Mabak melahs appeared to have been always recognized by the Courts it was maintained notwithstanding that it was in contravention of the ordinary Hindu law. NIL MADHUR GO SAMER v. CHENNER BLOKKER GO SAMER 22 W R. 397

8 Inheritance—Converts from Hindu to Mahomedan religion—Custom at variance with law—The general presumption arising from the intimate connection between law and religion in the Mahomedan faith is that the Mahomedan law governs converts from the Hindu religion to Mahomedanism. But a well established custom in the case of such converts to follow their old Hindu law of inheritance would override that general presumption and a usage establishing a special rule of inheritance as regards a special kind of property would be given the force of law even though it be at variance with both Hindu and Mahomedan laws. MAHOMED SIDICK v. HAJI AHMED HAJI ABDULLA HAJI ABDSTAFAR v. HAJI AHMED [L L R., 10 Bom, 1]

9 Custom of trade—Notoriety and definiteness of custom—Requirements of a binding custom of trade—Suit for damages for breach of a contract to let horses on hire. The plaintiff hired a pair of horses at Ootacamund from the defendant for a period of six months and on one occasion drove them beyond the municipal limits of the station on their return the defendant took away the horses from the plaintiff which was the breach complained of. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff's use of the horses as above was contrary to the local custom of the trade. Held that since the alleged custom was not shown to be either certain or invariable or so notorious that persons should be held to enter into agreements with reference to it formed no defence to the action. IRICK BROWN [I L R. 14 Mad, 426]

10 Sale—Exchange—Trade usage—Contract Act ss 49 77 92 151—Delivery of cotton to cotton press—Transfer of Property Act s 118—Ownership of cotton—According to mercantile usage in the cotton trade in Tuticorin where a dealer delivers cotton to the owner of a cotton press not in pursuance of any special contract the property in the cotton vests in the owner of the cotton press who is bound to give the merchant in exchange cotton of like quantity and quality. The transaction is not a sale but an agreement for exchange. Where therefore cotton thus delivered was accidentally destroyed by fire—Held that the loss fell on the owner of the press. VOLKART BROTHERS v. VETTIVELU NADAN I L R., 11 Mad 459

11 Evidence of custom—Mercantile usage—Proof of mercantile usage needs not either the antiquity the uniformity or the notoriety of custom which in respect of all these becomes a local law. The usage may be still in course of growth; it may require evidence for its support in each case but in the result it is enough if it appear to be so well known and acquiesced in that it may be reasonably presumed to have been an ingredient tacitly imported by the parties into their contract. JEGGOMOHUN GHOSH v. MANICK CHUND

[4 W R. P C 8

12 Family usage—Custom repugnant to law—Evidence of the acts of a single family repugnant or antagonistic to the general law will not establish a valid custom or usage enforceable in a Court of Justice. Tora Chand v. Reed Pam 3 Mad 80 followed. MADHAVRAY RAOHAYENDRA v. BALKRISHNA RAOHAYENDRA [4 Bom A C 113]

13 Family custom—Intermarriages—A family custom as to intermarriages being a matter of family history may be proved by declarations made by members of the family. NUGGENDUR NARAIN v. RUDRANATH NARAIN DEY [W R. 1884 20]

14 Mahomedan law of succession—Law in Malabar as to right to superintend mosques—In Malabar where the right to superintend a mosque is in dispute the Mahomedan law of succession must be applied unless a custom to the contrary is proved. Proof that the management of most mosques in a certain district is in the hands of persons who would inherit under the Marmakkatayam law will not warrant a finding of the existence of such a custom in such district. KUNAI BILLY v. ANDER AZIZ I L R. 6 Mad. 103

15 Land separated from estate by change in course of river—When a party claims land separated from his estate by a change in the course of a river upon the ground of immemorial custom he must prove such custom. The canoeing papers are not sufficient evidence to prove immemorial custom. The proceedings showing that such custom obtains on the banks of one river will be no evidence to prove that it obtains on the banks of another. RAI MANIK CHAND v. MADHORAM

16 ————— Custom as to transferability of tenures—In an enquiry as to whether tenures of a certain class are transferable according to local custom, it is sufficient if there is credible evidence of the existence and antiquity of the custom, and none to the contrary; there is no necessity for the witnesses to fix any particular time from which such tenures became transferable. *JOR KISHEN MOORESEY v. [1 W R, 340]

17 ————— Pre-emption—Proceedings in former suits—The proceedings in two former suits where under similar circumstances though the exercise of the right was disputed in other grounds, the right of pre-emption was admitted to exist may be received in evidence in support of the custom. *MADHUN CHUNDER NATH LISWAS v. 18 ————— Haggy, Chaharum—Private sale—Sale in execution of decree—Proof of a custom whereby the zamindar of a village is entitled to one-fourth of the purchase money when a house in the village is sold privately is not proof of a similar custom in respect of sales in execution of decrees. KALJAN DAS v. BHAGIRATHI
[1 L R, 6 All, 47]

19 ————— Right to timber—Wreck—Lords of manor—Where a plaintiff sued for damages for value of timber carried away by Government after being washed on to his estate and to have his right declared as against Government to all timber that in the future may be washed on to his estate. Held that it was not necessary for plaintiff to produce documentary evidence in support of the right or some decree or decision of competent authority establishing the custom. Lords of manor are allowed to establish rights to wrecks etc., by long continued and adverse assertion of and enjoyment under such claims; and the plaintiff was entitled to have the question tried by the evidence he had adduced. *CUSTON LALL SINGH v. 21 ————— Local custom—*Hom. Reg. By local custom in the Broach district wafal land left as a religious endowment may be mortgaged although such practice is contrary to Malomedan law. ABAS ALI ZAKIL ARABIN v. GURRAM MOHAMMAD

the existence of a family custom (in this case primogeniture) and give as the grounds thereof information derived from deceased persons. But it must be independent opinion based on hearsay and not on mere repetition of hearsay. See Evidence Act s. 57 s. 32 sub-s. (5) ss. 47 and 60. It would depend on the character of the witness and of the deceased persons. GARGUTDHARJI PARHAD SINGH v. SAKARJI DHARJI PARHAD SINGH

23 ————— Custom of inheritance to Bhagdari tenures in the Broach district—The custom in the Broach District of male first cousins succeeding to property held on the Bhagdari tenure in preference to daughters or sisters upheld in a case in which the Bhagdars were Mahomedans. BAI KHANDU v. DAST LALL
[5 Bom, A. C. 123]

24 ————— Bhagdari tenures in Broach—Inheritance—Special custom—Priority of nearest male relative to daughter or sister—The plaintiff as heir of her father (a deceased Hindu Bhagdari) sued the sons of sisters of her father's paternal uncle for possession of certain Bhagdari lands situate in a village in the Broach collectorate. The defendants pleaded that they were entitled to the property under a special custom regulating the succession to Bhagdari lands in the collectorate of Broach under which custom on the death of a Bhagdar whether Hindu or Mahomedan without male issue, his nearest male relations (after the death of a widower) whether sprung through male or female ties of the deceased Bhagdar succeeded to his Bhagdari lands to the exclusion of his daughter or Held that the custom alleged was sufficiently proved and that the defendants were entitled to possession of the Bhagdari lands in question. Custom—The custom alleged being if not at least general in the Broach collectorate it is in the case of any particular village at all evidence being given of its continuance in that village adjacent villages, if not in the particular village to itself (though it would always be more satisfactory if this could be done) be held still to survive, and until the opposite party proved the adoption of some other custom or of the ordinary rules of inheritance in the particular village or failing such proof the general prevalence of such rules or such opposite custom in other similar adjacent villages. Quere Whether males sprung of male relatives of a deceased Bhagdar have priority over males sprung of female relatives of the same. Quere—Whether a daughter or sister of a deceased Bhagdar is wholly excluded by the custom from the line of inheritance or only on failure of male relations succeeded to the Bhagdari lands. *IRANJITAN DATARAM v. 25 ————— Wafal of manor—Evidence of custom—A wafal of manor is not a mere record of custom but is a record of it by a public or private authority. It is a record of the custom of the manor. It is a record of the custom of the manor. It is a record of the custom of the manor.

28 Wajib ul-ur—Held that the mention of the cess in a wajib ul-ur is not conclusive proof of the custom or usage which gives the right to levy the cess against persons not parties to it. RAM CHURN v ZAHOR ALI KHAN 1 Agra 134 135

27 The wajib ul ura binds co-partners who have verified and attested it and is so far evidence of custom between co-partners but is not a conclusive evidence of custom between co-partners and their tenants who were no parties to it. PACHOO v MAHOMED TALA A SUDOLAH [3 Agra, 217]

28 Record of cess by settlement officer—The fact that a cess leviable in accordance with village custom has been recorded by a settlement officer is important evidence of the custom but not conclusive proof of it. Held on the evidence in this case that the village custom set up was not established. LALA v HIRA SIVON [I L R 2 All. 49]

29 Manorial dues and cesses—The plaintiffs zamindars sued for a declaration of their ancient rights as against all the tenants of a certain village to appropriate all trees of spontaneous or growth and the fruits of other trees planted by the tenants also to receive as manorial tribute a certain number of ploughs annually and a law on offering of paddy seed and other farm produce on the occasion of the marriage of persons of the same caste of tenants with a further right to levy upon appropriation of the produce of the sugar manufacturing and fields in the village. The Courts having decreed the suit on vague and flimsy evidence as to the existence of the said rights—Held (a) that where a custom regarding cesses is alleged the existence of the custom

each case should be tried as a separate case. (b) that parol evidence as to the existence of such a custom should be tested by ascertaining the grounds of the witnesses' opinion. (c) that the best proof of such instances in which it has been acted on and (d) that a custom to be good must be definite. LACHU v RAI v AKBAR KHAN I L R 1 All. 440

30 Pre-emption—Wajib ul-ur—Onus probandi—A wajib ul-ur prepared and attested according to law is prima facie evidence of the existence of any custom of pre-emption which it records such evidence being open to be rebutted by any one disputing such custom. ISHT SINGH v GANGA I L R 2 All. 876

But such a custom is not established by one instance. TOYA RAM v MOHAN LAL 2 Agra, 120

31 Pre-emption—Wajib ul-ur—An unsigned wajib ul-ur is not binding on the co-sharers, and cannot originate a right of pre-emption if no prior usage existed. To prove usage it is not necessary that documentary evidence should be adduced. JOTKISHORE SINGH v THAKOR DASS 3 Agra 75

32 Wajib ul ur—Held that occasional instances in which a claim to pre-emption on the ground of vicinage may have been admitted or for special reason the vendors submitted to the claim are not sufficient to prove the custom of pre-emption in a mabullah but repeated instances of the assertion of pre-emption as a right and of its recognition or enforcement ranging over a long period of time and in various places should be shown. SHEO CHURN KANDOO v GOODER BURNWAR 3 Agra, 138

33 Suit for pre-emption—Evidence—Decrees enforcing right—In a suit for pre-emption based on custom evidence of decrees passed in favour of such a custom in suits in which it was alleged and decreed is admissible evidence to prove its existence. The most satisfactory evidence of an enforcement of a custom is a final decree based on the custom. Gajju Lal v Fateh Lal I L R 6 Cal. 171 distinguished. Koodotooljah v Mohiude Mohua Shaha 5 Rev. Civ. and Cr. Rep. 290. Sheo Churn Kandoo v Gooder Burnwar 3 Agra 138 and Lockman Rai v Akbar Khan I L R 1 All. 440 referred to. GUBDAYAL MAL v JHANDU MAL [I L R 10 All. 585]

34 Suit by land holder for declaration of right to take land from occupancy tenant for cultivation of indigo—Wajib ul ur—Construction of—The zamindars of a village sued an occupancy tenant for a declaration of their right to maintain a custom which was thus recorded in the wajib ul-ur.—When necessary one or two bigas out of the tenants' lands are taken with their consent (or khushi) for sowing indigo. Upon the basis of this entry they claimed to be entitled to take a portion of the occupancy holding at a certain period of the year for the purpose of cultivating indigo. Held by the Full Bench that the word khushi used in the wajib ul-ur indicated that the land was only to be taken with the occupancy tenant's consent and the document created no right of the nature alleged namely to take the land despite the tenant. SHROFABAN v BHANU PASAAN I L R, 7 All. 580

35 Pre-emption—Wajib ul ur—Evidence of contract and custom—Act XIX of 1873 s. 91—Beng. Reg. VII of 1882 s. 9 cl. (1)—The wajib ul-ur of a village is a document of a public character prepared with all publicity and must be considered as prima facie evidence of the existence of any custom which it records. Its record of the existence of a custom of pre-emption is sufficiently strong evidence to cast on those denying the custom the burden of proof and in the same manner when it records a contract of pre-emption between the shareholders there is a presumption that it is binding on the shareholders. Looking to the public character of the document and the way it is prepared, and that all shareholders whether dissenting or not must be presumed to have assented to its terms the inferences to be deduced from it cannot be disregarded except when they are rebutted by evidence of an opposite character. A suit to enforce

of pre-emption which was based on contract and custom as evidenced by the wajih ul urz of a village, was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that any contract which might be founded on the wajih ul urz was not binding on the vendor defendant as that document did not bear his signature and the lower Appellate Court attached no weight to the wajih ul urz as proof of the custom of pre-emption because it was drawn up when Regulation VII of 1822 was in force and at that time there was no legal presumption of its accuracy. The claim was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff's evidence did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the village. Held that the lower Appellate Court had erred in dealing with the evidence and that although this particular wajih ul urz was made before Act XIX of 1873 came into force yet the weight which would attach to its entries both as proof of the contract as well of custom was very strong. Jee Singh v Ganga I L R 2 All 676, referred to MUHAMMAD HASAN v MUNNA LAL I L R., 8 All, 434

36. ————— Wajih ul urz—Mahomedan law—It having been alleged that an estate by custom descended to a single heir in the male line the High Court concurring with the Court of first instance found that this custom had not been proved to prevail in the family. On an appeal contesting this finding it was argued among other objections that the High Court had not given sufficient effect to an entry in the wajih ul urz of a zamindari village the principal owner comprised in the family estate now in dispute the last owner of that estate who held all the shares in the village having caused an entry to be made to the effect that his eldest son should be his sole heir the others of the family being maintained. Held that though termed an entry in a wajih ul urz the document was not entitled to the name but was rather in the nature of a testamentary attempt to make a disposition contrary to the Mahomedan law of descent. MOHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN v FIDAYAT UN NISSA

[I L R., 8 All, 516]

37. ————— Dhardhura—Alluvial land—Quere—What is the extent of the applicability of the custom of dhardhura in regard to alluvial land overriding the provisions of Regulation XI of 1825. NASEER-OD DEEN AHMED v OOMEEDER 3 Agra 1

38. ————— Dhardhura, Applicability of custom—Accretion—The custom of dhardhura applies to lands thrown up or formed by fluvial action either in one year or in the course of a number of years. Whether it is equally applicable to chuckee formations or tracts of land covered by a sudden change in the course of a river and yet preserving their identity of site and surface after the severance, must be determined by proof of the extent of the custom. KATTIYANER v MAHOMED SHUKR OOD DEE 3 Agra, 189

39. ————— Dhardhura—The custom of dhardhura is, when applied to lands gained otherwise than by gradual accretion opposed to equity; and such a custom must be proved, not by the vague assertions of witnesses but by a sufficient enumeration of instances. JAHEE SINGH v SHIBIRY OODREX 1 N W., 142 Ed. 1873 234

40. ————— Dhardhura—Deny Reg XI of 1825 as 2 4(11)—The question whether the custom of dhardhura applies to lands gained by gradual accretion only, or also to lands which have been separated from a mouzah by a sudden change of stream must be determined in each case on the evidence; for although the Court would be disposed to scrutinize with care evidences in regard to a custom which would have the effect of passing from one owner to another lands long held and enjoyed and of which the character is in no way altered by river action yet it cannot be said that such a custom can in no case be established and given effect to. Katigawee v Mahomed Shurfooden 3 Agra 189 Jee Singh v Shurfooden 1 N W., 142 and Rayendur Periab Sahas v Laljee Sahas 20 W R., 427, referred to SBT Ali v MUNIB UD DIN [I L R., 6 All, 479]

41. ————— Validity of custom—Power of some of mirasidars to bind co owners of village lands—A custom that some only of the mirasidars of a village should bind the co owners of the village lands is valid. ANANDATTAN v DEVARAJATTAN [2 Mad., 17]

42. ————— Usage of mangrove—Policy of insurance—Evidence of average loss—Certificates of mahajans—An alleged usage that the mahajana certificate is deemed to be conclusive evidence against the under writer without production of manifest and account sales, and that upon proof of the certificate alone and of the policy the owner is entitled to recover his average loss cannot be upheld such not being a reasonable usage. RANJODAS BHAGILAL v KESRISING MOHANLAL 1 Bom., 229

43. ————— Unreasonable custom—Broker carrying contract—A custom which allows a broker to deviate from his instructions is unreasonable and the Courts of law will not enforce it. ARLATA NAIR NARSI KINHAVALI AND COMPANY [8 Bom., A. C., 19]

44. ————— Customary right of privacy—Right of building and to interfere with erection of building—A customary right of privacy under certain conditions exists in India and in the North Western Provinces and is not unreasonable but merely an application of the maxims sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas and nedificare in tuo proprio solo non licet quod alteri noceat. In the case of a building for parda purposes newly erected without the acquiescence of the owner of an adjacent building site a custom preventing such owner from so building as to interfere with the privacy of the first new building would be unreasonable and consequently bad in law. But if such adjacent owner without protest or notice allowed his neighbour to erect and consequently to incur expenses in connection with a building for the use of parda-nashan women a custom preventing him from interfering with the privacy of such new building would not

— Facts necessary to establish the existence of a customary right—Easement—Easement Act ss 4 and 15.—The plaintiff sued for possession of a piece of land which, he alleged, formed part of the courtyard of his kothi and for demolition of a chabutra thereon. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title and alleged that they always used the chabutra as a sitting place and that during the Moharram the tazias and alams were exhibited upon the chabutra, and a takht was placed upon it. The Court of first instance found that the defendants had a right to use the land in the manner claimed during the Moharram. The lower Appellate Court, on the question of the defendant's right to use the said land in the manner claimed by them found as follows:—That various mirasda, whose connection with each other is not established, have within a period of twenty years or so placed tazias upon land and sung there. Held that this finding of fact did not necessarily in law lead to the conclusion that there was a local custom by virtue of which the easement now claimed by the defendants was acquired. Where a local custom excluding or limiting the general rule of law is set up a Court should not decide that it exists unless such Court is satisfied of its reasonableness, and its certainty as to extent and application and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by force granted or by stealth or by force and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which it concerned. REAR SEN v MANMAN I. 46. — Usage imported as term of a contract—Practice on a particular estate.—In order that the practice on a particular estate may be imported as a term of the contract into a contract in respect of land in that estate, it must be shown that the practice was known to the person whom it is sought to bind by it and that he assented to its being a term of the contract; and when the person sought to be bound by the practice is an assignee for value of rights under that contract it must also be shown that he and all prior assignees (if any) for value knew that the practice was a term of the original contract. MAGE VIKRAMA v RAMA PATTER I. L. R., 20 Mad., 275

— Local custom—Right to bury the dead in a certain locality—Right of burial.—Where a certain sect of the Mahomedan community had been for many years in the habit of burying their dead near a dargah in plaintiff's land, and the plaintiff sought to prevent a restraining them from exercising this right in future. Held that the right of burial claimed by the defendants was not an easement but a customary right, which, being confined to a limit of space of graves and a limited area of land was sufficiently certain and reasonable to be recognised as a valid local custom. MOHIDEEN v SHIVLINGAPPA

under the provisions of the law comes under the charge and control of the Court of Wards. The view taken by the Courts of the Regulation and Acts concerned with the Courts of Wards in Bengal is, that although the possession of a revenue-paying property is a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards attaching yet when once that jurisdiction has attached, all the property of the ward comes under the control and management of the Court. Mahomed Zahoor Ali Khan v Ruttia Koer II Moore's I A 478 considered. DURRY SINGH v SHOOBHULAL AHYARI

10 ————— Disqualification to contract—Beng Reg LII of 1803.—On a consideration of the provisions of Regulation LII of 1803 (the provisions of Regulation X of 1783 are similar) it was held that the mere fact that the Court of Wards has charge of the estates of a female did not necessarily disqualify her from contracting debts. That Regulation must be construed strictly the provisions requiring the Collector to report to the Board a female as disqualified, and the subsequent procedure thereon should be strictly carried out as not mere matters of form but necessary preliminaries before the female can be considered disqualified. From the absence of the observance of those provisions in the case of R A and the conduct of the Government officials representing the Court of Wards the custody of the Court of Wards of her estates was held to be of such a character as did not render her a disqualified female incapable of contracting debts. The case having been framed incorrectly it was under the circumstances, remanded for trial by the High Court under special directions. MAHOMED ZAHOUR ALI KHAN v RUTTA KOOR

11. ————— Beng Reg LIII of 1803—Incompetency of disqualified proprietor to contract.—Under a 7 of Regulation LII of 1803 lakhirs lands belonging to a disqualified proprietor may be committed by the Government (on its appearing that this will be for its interests and that of such proprietor) to the charge of the Court of Wards; and thereupon the whole estate and effects real and personal of such proprietor become vested in that Court. An estate consisting of lakhirs lands was duly placed under the management of the Court of Wards the proprietress a Mahomedan being disqualified under the Regulation. This ward having then become a party to a mortgage of such lands to secure repayment of money advanced to her it was held that she neither bound herself nor charged the estate. This case distinguished from Mohammed Zahoor Ali Khan v Ruttia Koer II Moore's I A 478; where the proprietress no intention to treat her as disqualified having been shown was adjudged capable of contracting though the Court of Wards was in possession of her estate. On the facts of this case it was also held that although the Court had given to this ward an authority under certain limitations of which the plaintiff had notice to borrow money for a special purpose there had not been such a holding out to the world of her competency as would have induced any

the hands of the Collector as manager of the Court of Wards on the allegations that she had placed the property in the hands of the Court some years previously, because she was not at that time in a position to manage it herself but that she was now capable of managing it and desired to get it back. The suit was dismissed and the plaintiff appealed on the ground inter alia that inasmuch as she was not a disqualified proprietor within the meaning of Act XIX of 1873 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Act) the Court of Wards had no jurisdiction to take the property and that its possession was merely the result of an arrangement to which she was a consenting party and which she now desired to terminate. Held that with reference to the provisions of Act XIX of 1873 and Act VIII of 1879 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Acts) the suit as brought was not maintainable inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiff had obtained the previous sanction of the local Government to the release of the property from the superintendence of the Court of Wards as required by s 20 of the latter Act. Held also that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal entirely to change the nature of the grounds upon which she alleged herself to be entitled to claim relief and that hence she could not now raise the plea that the Court of Wards in taking the property under its management had acted without jurisdiction. The expression "local Government" in ss 101 and 105 of Act XIX of 1873 and s 20 of Act VIII of 1879 means the Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces. *MASUMA BIBI v. 19 Minor—Irregular procedure—On 27th July 1871 a disqualified proprietor B signed a duly attested document declaring he had adopted a boy by name D the next day B signing a declaration of his approval of the adoption. Before sanction of the Lieutenant Governor could be obtained under Bengal Act IV of 1870 s 74 B died and the sanction was subsequently refused on the ground of B's death. On application made under Act XXVII of 1860 the Judge on 28th March 1871 found the adoption good and appointed one P to be guardian of the minor D and directed the estate to be placed under the management of the Court of Wards. M a judgment-creditor of B failing to execute his decree against the estate of B brought a suit to have it declared that B as heir had inherited all B's property and that he M was entitled to have that property attached and sold in satisfaction of his decree. The only defendant was A M manager under the Court of Wards, and the Subordinate Judge gave plaintiff a decree declaring that D was not the legally adopted son of B. This was appealed from. Held that the

Judge had no power to make any such order as that of the 28th March 1871 in regard to the Court of Wards. What he had power to do under Act XL of 1858 s 12 was to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate and it would then have become the duty of the Collector to appoint a manager and a guardian in the same manner etc. as if the minor's property and person were subject to the Court of Wards. Held that the minor's interests were not properly represented before the Subordinate Judge whose decree therefore could not stand so as to affect the minor and that the minor must be made a party strictly in the manner prescribed by Bengal Act IV of 1870, s 69. ABDOOL HUSSAIN MITTHERJEE SINGH 23 W R 348

COURT OF WARDS ACT (BENGAL ACT IX OF 1870)

— s 20 and ss 51-55—Sut—Application for execution by Collector on behalf of ward when manager of ward's estate has been appointed—This word suit as used in ss 51 to 55 of Bengal Act IX of 1870 is not limited to what is usually called a regular suit but covers miscellaneous proceedings in a suit such as an application for execution of a decree in which the ward for the first time seeks to have the carriage of litigation instituted by his predecessor in title. When it appeared that a manager of a minor's property had been appointed by the Court of Wards under the provisions of s 20 of Bengal Act IX of 1870 and during the absence of such manager on leave an application was made on behalf of the minor by the Collector of the district for execution of a decree—Held that the office of manager did not become vacant because the manager obtained leave and that if it were not vacant, s 51 of the Act did not enable the Collector to appear on behalf of the minor. *BRIGGS v. A suit was instituted in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Barua on behalf of a ward by his manager without the order or sanction of the Court of Wards and proceeded to judgment without any such order or sanction. The suit was partially decreed, and the manager appealed to the District Judge for that portion of the claim which had been dismissed by the Court of first instance. At the hearing of the appeal an application was filed on behalf of the appellant accompanied by a letter giving sanction to the institution of the suit, the appeal and other proceedings connected therewith, with retrospective effect from the date of its institution. The Judge dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held having regard to s. 55 of the Court of Wards Act, 1879 as amended by s. 7 of Bengal Act III of 1851 the lower Appellate Court was right in dismissing the suit. Held also that the sanction given after appeal did not have a retrospective effect. DINESH CHUNDER ROY & GOLAM MOSTAFHA, DINESH CHUNDER ROY & FAKHIMUDDIN KHALIL, DINESH CHUNDER ROY & NISHI KANT GUNGO PADHATA [I. Meaning of—Duty of Court Fees Act officer—The word "final" in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act has the same meaning as in s. 12 though it is applied to a different subject. The cases in which it has been held that notwithstanding the use of this word in s. 12 an appeal lies from a decision as to the category in which the relief sought by a plaintiff or appellant falls do not mean that decisions which the court declares to be final are nevertheless appealable but that the question of category is not a question relating to valuation and therefore is not declared by the section to be final. In s. 5
s. 6 and s. 12 final is used in its ordinary legal sense of unappealable. A decision under s. 5 of the Act is not open to appeal, revision or review and is final for all purposes and no means have been provided or suggested by the Legislature for questioning it. The officer mentioned in s. 5 of the

3 ——— Declaratory decrees—Con-

which the removal of an attachment of such house in
the execution of a decree was sought the plaintiff did not, as s. 7 of the Court Fees Act directs, state
in his plaint the amount at which he valued the
relief sought nor did the Court of first instance
cause him to supply this defect. On appeal by
the plaintiff from the decree of the Court of first instance dismissing his suit the lower Appellate Court demanded from the plaintiff Court fees in respect of his plaint and memorandum of appeal com-
puted on the market value of such house the plaintiff
having only paid in respect of those documents
respectively the Court fees payable in a suit for a declaration of right where no consequential relief
was prayed. Held that the market value of the propto be the value of the relief sought as the plaintiff had

not seek possession of the property and that as the valuation of the relief sought was in this instance the declaration of right claimed necessarily carried with
it the consequential relief sought of which the
value was merely nominal further Court fees could

The theory being that all land is primarily liable to be rated or taxed for the public revenue any sum not levied according to the apportionment made in order to show the proper amount of the land tax may be regarded as a remission. In the case of a talukhdar village the proprietor of which had under a settlement with Government for a period of twenty two years agreed to pay a fixed annual jumma or lump assessment instead of the full survey assessment for the whole village. Held by a majority of the Full Bench that the difference in amount between the jumma and the full survey assessment was a remission and therefore a suit for possession of lands in this village was to be valued according to cl 3 of the proviso to art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). Per RICHWOOD J.—The remission contemplated by cl (3) of the proviso is an express remission and not a mere difference in amount between the actual assessment payable by a talukhdar and the survey assessment. The three clauses of the proviso seem to apply only to lands which have been subjected to a survey settlement as ordinarily understood and legally provided for in the Bombay Presidency the first clause being applicable to lands settled for a period not exceeding thirty years the second to lands settled for a longer period or permanently and the third to immo lands on which the whole or a part of the survey assessment has been expressly remitted. The talukhdars are not immo lands. They are land holders liable to pay a land tax but not under a survey settlement such as is applicable to lands for which provision seems to have been specially made in the proviso to art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act. No part of this proviso therefore applies to a suit for the possession of lands in a talukhdar village. Such a suit should be valued according to cl (d) of art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act. ALA CHUELA v OGHAD BHAI TRAKHSE. I L R. 11 Bom. 541

s 7 cl 8.—Suit to restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 246.—A stamp of Rs 10 is sufficient for the plaint or memorandum of appeal in a suit brought under s 246 of Act VIII of 1859 to restore an attachment upon a house which has been removed at the instance of an intervenient under that section. A person whose property was attached was not compelled to resort in the first instance to an application under s 246 of the late Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859). There was nothing to prevent him from commencing his litigation by a regular suit if such were his pleasure. Cl 8 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) would apply to such a suit. The language of that section is not limited to suits to set aside any special kind of attachments on land. It is large enough to include suits brought in pursuance of the permission given by s 246 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside attachments on land, as well as other suits for that purpose brought independently of that section. The term land in cl 8 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act does not include a house. Quære—Whether that clause includes all suits to set aside attachments upon land or all such suits except where the result of setting aside the attachment would be to alter or set aside a summary decision or order of any Civil Court not established by Letters Patent or of Revenue Court. DAYA CHAND NIM CHAND v HEM CHAND DHARAM CHAND. On the 2nd May 1893 the appellant paid the additional Court-fees under protest, and a decree was then prepared bearing date the 1st March 1893 but it referred to and carried into effect the subsequent order of the 21st March and the 2nd May. Jaffer Mahomed J. that as soon as the Judge had passed the decree of the 1st March 1893 he ceased to have any power over it and was not competent to introduce new matters not dealt with by the judgment; that the order of the 21st March and the disposal of the 2nd May whether right or wrong were not proceedings to which effect could be given in the antecedent decree of the 1st March 1893; and that the decree was ultra vires to that extent and was therefore liable to correction in second appeal under s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code. The powers conferred by s. 64 (a) and (c) and s. 65 read with s. 682 of the Civil Procedure Code or by s. 12 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) read with cl. (ii) of s. 10 are intended to be exercised before the disposal of the case and not after it has been decided finally so far as the Court is concerned.

The powers conferred by s. 23 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court fees relates and even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree. For O'DRISCOLL J.—That the Court had power to make the order it did inasmuch as the collection of Court fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which could be said to have ceased with its determination; and the provisions of the Court Fees Act fixed no time within which the presiding Judge could exercise his power of ordering documents to be stamped and sealed, on the other hand, to contemplate the exercise of that power at any time subsequent to the receipt, filing or use of a document, and to make the validity of the document and the proceedings relative thereto dependent on the document being properly stamped. MAHADER RAY v. 2. — Execution of part of decree—Payment of full amount of Court fees not necessary for such part execution—Construction of Act—Court Fees Act s. 17—The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of a house and for mesne profits. In the same suit he also claimed certain accounts books and documents from the defendant. In paying Court fees he estimated the mesne profits at Rs. 1151 and paid on that amount. He obtained a decree and the amount of mesne profits awarded to him was Rs. 1334-13-3. The decree further directed that possession of the house should be given to him and that the books and documents should be handed over to him. He now applied for execution of that part of the decree which directed the delivery of the house and of the account books and other documents. The defendant contended that, under s. 11 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) the plaintiff was not entitled to execution of any part of the decree until he paid the proper Court fees on the sum awarded as mesne profits viz. Rs. 1334-13-3. Held that the plaintiff might obtain execution of that part of the decree which ordered delivery of the house and books and documents without paying the fees payable on the amount awarded for mesne profits. S. 11 and s. 17 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) ought to be similarly construed; and the language of the latter section which deals with multifarious suits shows that for the purposes of the stamp revenue such suits are deemed to be a collection of distinct suits relating to the several causes of action combined in them. In applying s. 11 to such suits, in order to

from—Interest in partnership property—The testator a member of the firm of G & A & Co. of Calcutta and O G & Co. of Liverpool died in England leaving a will of which he appointed G in England and O in Calcutta his executors. As a partner in the Calcutta firm the testator was entitled to a share in an indigo concern and in certain immovable property in Calcutta and his share in these properties was on his death estimated, and the money value thereof paid to his estate by the firm in Liverpool and probate duty had been paid thereon by G in obtaining probate of the will in England. Shortly after the testator's death the indigo concern was contracted to be sold and the testator's name appearing on the title deeds as one of the owners G applied for probate of the will to enable him to join in the conveyance and in any future sale of the other immovable property. An unlimited grant of probate was made to O who claimed exemption from probate duty in respect of his properties on the grounds (a) that duty had already been paid in

4. ———— Suits brought to set aside or restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 246—Summary decision—Limitation Act 1871 art 15 (1877, art 13)—Interpretation of Acts—Valuation of suits—Suits brought to set aside or to restore an attachment upon a house in pursuance of the permission given in s 246 of the Civil Procedure Code may be regarded either as "suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed" so as to fall within s 1 cl 4 art (c) of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) or as suits to obtain or set aside a summary decision or order in which case the stamp duty payable would be that prescribed by art 17 cl 1 sch II of the Court Fees Act. The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment it is the duty of the Courts to treat such suits as belonging to the latter class (it being the more favourable for the suitors) and to impose fees accordingly. Decisions under s 246 of Act VIII of 1859 as to the removal or retention of attachments are summary decisions or orders within the meaning of art 17 cl 1 sch II of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). The words summary decision or order in this clause of the Court Fees Act mean decision or order not made in a regular suit or appeal. The construction which has been given to these words or nearly similar words in the Limitation Acts (e.g. Act IX of 1871 sch II art 15 and Act XV of 1877 sch II art 13) affords no guide to their construction in the Court Fees Act. When Acts are in pari materia they may be treated as forming a Code and may be read together; but when this is not so, the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another. The valuation of suits for the purpose of jurisdiction is perfectly distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of Court-fees. Therefore Court Fees Acts which are fiscal enactments are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction. Motchand Jaichand v Dadabhai Pestonjee 11 Bom., 186 explained. Parlati Tamoyi v Dholapa Raghe 11 L R, 4 Bom 123 dissented from by WESTROP C.J. The plaintiff's mother died pending the determination of the objection having devised her property to the plaintiffs. They succeeded to the same and certain other property which also had been transferred to their mother in lieu of her dower-debt having been also attached in execution of the same decree the plaintiffs objected to the attachment. Fees Act 1870 s 7 cl 4 and s 17—A suit praying merely for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to require the defendants to account to him and to permit him to inspect their books is simply a suit for a declaratory decree without consequential relief and falls within art 17 cl 3 of sch II of Act VII of 1870. A suit praying for such a declaration as the above and also for a positive order in the nature of a mandatory injunction for the production of the defendants' books and property in their hands or a suit praying for such declaration as the above and also for a positive decree for an account to be taken by the Court and for the production of the books and property would range under s 7 cl 4 art (c) of Act VII of 1870 as being a suit to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed and also within art (d) of the same section as being a suit to obtain an injunction and a suit of the third species described above would fall under art (f) of the same clause as being a suit for accounts. Quere—Whether in the case of a suit for a declaration of the right of the plaintiff to an account and to inspection of the defendants' books and for a mandatory injunction for the production of those books or of a suit for such declaration and for a positive decree for the taking of an account by the Court and the production of the defendants' books the plaintiff would by virtue of s 17 of Act VII of 1870 require separate stamps under arts (d) and (f) of cl 4 s 7 or be sufficiently covered by the stamp under art (c) of the same clause and whether assuming the declaration and the account each to require a stamp the prayer for an injunction or order for the production of books is not merely ancillary to and not a distinct subject from the taking of an account. Quere—Whether the provision in s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 that the amount of the fee payable in suits falling within that clause shall be computed according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint is so inconsistent with that portion of s 31 of Act VIII of 1859 which permits the Court receiving the plaint to revise the valuation of the claim as to render that portion of s 31 of Act VIII of 1859 inoperative in suits within s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 notwithstanding the concluding passage in the clause. Quere—Whether the concluding passage in cl 4 s 7 of Act VII of 1870 is too express to admit of a limitation of the power of the Judge and leaves him the right to revise the valuation placed on suits and r cl 4 by the plaintiff. But assuming this to be so it would generally not be advisable that the Judge should enhance the valuation on the reception of the plaint. The fee payable under s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 is according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint and not the value of the subject matter of the plaint. MAYORAN GAYSEN v BAWA RAM CHANAY DAS I. The representative of the vendor sued M and B to recover arrears of malikana.

Held without expressing any opinion as to whether registration of the deed of sale operated as a lien to all the world or whether notice of the terms of the deed was necessary to bind B and assuming B to have had no such notice in fact that if he had searched the register he would have ascertained these terms and if he did not search the register he must have wilfully abstained from so doing or was guilty of gross negligence in not so doing; that in either case he could not be treated as a bond fide mortgagee without notice; and that being in receipt of the profits of the property he was liable for the annual

The prisoner was charged with criminal breach of trust as a servant. The defence was that he had purchased wood and made advances on that account but this defence was proved to be false. But where the master himself has settled the account with the tradesman for a specific sum and sends the servant with money and the servant after making the payment accepts a present from the tradesman in that case the servant does not commit criminal breach of trust inasmuch as the money is given to him by a person whom he believes to have a right to give it though it may be that according to the strict equitable dictum of the Court of Chancery he is bound to account to the master for the money *Hay's case In re Canadian Oil Works Corporation L. On receipt of that money he paid a portion only of it into the Collectorate on account of the revenue and having done so he then altered the chitlan given back to him showing the amount actually paid and made it appear that a much larger amount had been paid than was the fact. This chitlan he sent to his employer for the purpose of showing the application of the money. He was charged (amongst other offences) with criminal breach of trust as a servant (s 408 of the Penal Code) in respect of the difference between the amount actually paid into the treasury and the amount shown to have been paid in by the altered chitlan. The accused was convicted on all altered chitlans. It was contended that the charge under the Penal Code was not sustainable inasmuch as the money was not applied for the purpose of paying the Government revenue but the account between him and his employers and that had been adjusted and that it was not shown that at the date of the alleged breach of trust he was indebted to his employer or the reverse. Held that as the money was sent to the accused

immediately before the list day and the chitlan was sent to the employers showing in its altered state the amount really payable as revenue which nearly covered the whole amount remitted, it was reasonable to infer that the accused was aware of the implied purpose for which the money was remitted and as he deposited a very much smaller amount than that remitted and tried to pass off the altered chitlan as genuine there was a dishonest misappropriation of the difference sufficient to constitute the offence under s 408 LOHIT MOHAN SARKAR v QUEEN EMPRESS

Before it was put up to auction the rice was found to be in a rotten condition. It was condemned and with the consent of the Port Commissioners seized by the officers of the Health Department of the Corporation of Calcutta and ordered to be destroyed. Held that assuming that the rice was entrusted by the Superintendent of the Health Department to the accused (who were inspectors employed in that department) for the purpose of destruction and that the accused instead of destroying the rice sold the same to a third party and retained the proceeds of such sale they did not commit the offence of criminal breach of trust as public servants. See Simble—The accused committed no offence punishable under the Penal Code though they may have been guilty of infringing a departmental rule. EMPEROR v WILKINSON

It was contended that the charge under s. 408 was not sustainable inasmuch as the money was not alleged to have been sent to the accused for the specific purpose of paying the Government revenue and that the account between him and his employers had not been adjusted and that it was not shown whether at the date of the alleged breach of trust the accused was indebted to his employer or the reverse. Held that as the money was sent to the accused

immediately before the list day and the challan was sent to the employers showing in its altered state the amount really payable as revenue which nearly covered the whole amount remitted it was reasonable to infer that the accused was aware of the implied purpose for which the money was remitted and as he deposited a very much smaller amount than that remitted and tried to pass off the altered challan as genuine there was a dishonest misappropriation of the difference sufficient to constitute the offence under s. 408. LOLIT MOHAN SARKAR v. QUEEN EMPRESS

Rice condemned and ordered to be destroyed—Property according to the Penal Code—Sale of the same by municipal inspector—A certain consignment of rice lay unclaimed at the Adderpore Docks and was advertised for sale by auction by the Port Commissioners. Before it was put up to auction the rice was found to be in a rotten condition. It was condemned and with the consent of the Port Commissioners seized by the officers of the Health Department of the Corporation of Calcutta and ordered to be destroyed. Held that assuming that the rice was entrusted by the Superintendent of the Health Department to the accused (who were inspectors employed in that department) for the purpose of destruction and that the accused instead of destroying the rice sold the same to a third party and retained the proceeds of such sale they did not commit the offence of criminal breach of trust as public servants. Semble—The accused committed no offence punishable under the Penal Code though they may have been guilty of infringing a departmental rule. EMPRESS v. WILKINSON 2 C. W. N. 216

1. — "Minor offence" Contention of without formal charge—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss 363 366 and 376—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s 307—An offence under s. 365 of the Penal Code is within the meaning of s. 233 of the Criminal Procedure Code a minor offence as compared with offences under s 366 and 376 of the Penal Code and the High Court in dealing with a case under s. 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code can convict an accused of the former offence without a formal charge having been framed Per BANERJEE J.—The words minor offence have not been defined by law they are to be taken not in any technical sense but in their ordinary sense QUEEN EMPRESS v. SITAIAH MANDAL

2. — Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss 366 498—Cognizance of offence by Court—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s 193—Fattig away married woman—Contention for minor offence where evidence is insufficient for grave offence—The complainant charged the accused with an offence under s. 366 of the Penal Code in respect of his wife. The Deputy Magistrate convicted the accused of an offence under s. 498 of the Penal Code and sentenced him to one month's rigorous imprisonment. The Sessions Judge being of opinion that the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction to convict the accused under s. 498 there being no complaint by the husband and that the offence did not fall under s. 233 of the Criminal Procedure Code referred the case to the High Court. Held that such a case is within the intention of s. 233. The intention of the law is to prevent Magistrates inquiring of their own motion into cases connected with marriage unless the husband or other person authorized moves them to do so. But when the husband is complainant and brings his complaint under s. 366 a conviction under s. 498 may properly be had if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for the minor offence and yet insufficient for a conviction for the graver one. *JATRA SARKH v. 1. Deposition taken before Magistrate—Evidence before Sessions Judge—Discretion of Sessions Judge—The purpose of s 249 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as amended by s 20 of Act XI of 1874 is to make depositions given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry evidence in the trial before the Court of Session only when the Sessions Judge determines in the exercise of his discretion that they are to be used in this way. But the exercise of this discretion considering it as a matter of fact or law is open to review by the Appellate Court. REGU v. ABAY MEENA
[11 Bom 281]

2. Former deposition of witness—Evidence Act s 60—The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against a prisoner only on the condition prescribed by s 249 Criminal Procedure Code 1874—that is, it must have been duly taken by the committing officer in the presence of the person against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession in order to afford prima facie evidence under s 80 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s 249. QUEEN v. VASANTHAPPA
[21 W R. Cr 5]

3. Depositions taken before Magistrate—A Court of Session is not at liberty under Act X of 1874 s 249 to ground its judgment on the depositions taken by the Magistrate without taking the examinations of the witnesses fresh. QUEEN v. MAJUMBAR POY

4. Witness before Court
1. Magistrate—On the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife and child the witnesses for the prosecution gave evidence contradicting the evidence given by them before the committing Magistrate; and the Sessions Judge purporting to act under s 249 Act X of 1872 disarded the evidence taken before himself and grounded his judgment on the evidence given before the Magistrate and on this evidence convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to death. On appeal by the prisoner, —Held that s 249 did not warrant such a course of proceeding. That section merely authorizes the Court to take a particular statement made by a witness before the Magistrate as the true statement notwithstanding that it is denied or a statement inconsistent with it was made by the witness before the Judge only if the Judge should see that the original statement was worthy of belief and does not mean that the Court should discard wholly the testimony of witnesses before it and have recourse to the testimony of the same persons given before another officer. *QUEEN v. 5. Use in Sessions Court of evidence taken before the committing Magistrate—Although under certain circumstances a Court of Session may use evidence given before the committing Magistrate as if it had been given before itself it is not proper for a Court of Session to base a conviction solely upon such evidence there being no other evidence on the record to corroborate it. *QUEEN v. 6. Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate—Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s 249 Code of Criminal Procedure in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate. Where at a Session trial the Sessions Judge admitted, and under s 238 Code of Criminal Procedure such evidence without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness in his statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police —Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made an inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made. A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court. —Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s 249 Criminal Procedure Code. Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and had shown no disposition in any way to recede from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate

Where a medical officer gave evidence before the committing Magistrate and it was not certified that the evidence was given in presence of the accused—Held that the admission of such evidence by the Sessions Judge under a 288 Code of Criminal Procedure was also improper. Where the police had kept a witness under surveillance for four days and the Sessions Judge considered that they were justified under the circumstances of the case—Held that there is no warrant in law for the police to keep the witness under such restraint and that statements so obtained can hardly be regarded as voluntary BARABANGI LAL v EMPRESS

[4 C W N., 40]

7 — Previous statement to committing Magistrate retracted in Sessions Court—Use of such statement by Sessions Court as substantiated evidence—Where a witness who has made a statement before the committing Magistrate subsequently resiles from that statement in the Court of Session the statement made before the committing Magistrate can be used under s 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to contradict the witness but the use of such statement as substantial evidence of the facts alleged by the witness on the prior occasion is fraught with the gravest peril and could never have been the intention of the Legislature QUEEN EMPRESS v NIRMAL DAS 1 L R 22 All 445

8 — Admissibility of evidence—Statement of approver made before committing Magistrate and afterwards retracted in the Court of Session—Pardon was tendered by a Magistrate to one of several persons who were being tried before him for dacoity. The pardon was accepted and the person to whom it was tendered made a statement as a witness before the Magistrate. The case having been committed to the Court of Session the approver in that Court totally repudiated his statement made before the Magistrate. Held that this repudiation did not prevent the Sessions Court from considering the evidence of the approver under the provisions of s 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure QUEEN EMPRESS v BOTEJU

9 — Refusal to allow cross examination of witnesses—A B and C having been charged with murder before a Magistrate two vakils presented their vakalatnamahs and applied to be allowed to conduct the defence of the accused. The Magistrate refused permission and, after recording the depositions of the witnesses committed the accused to take their trial before the Sessions Court. In the Court of the Magistrate the only material evidence for the prosecution was that of three witnesses, who on being examined in the Sessions Court denied all

knowledge of the facts to which they had deposed before the Magistrate. Two of them denied having made the statements recorded while the third admitted the statements attributed to him but asserted they were false and made under pressure. The Sessions Judge disbelieving the statements made in his Court thereupon under s 419 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1872 (as amended by s 20 of the Amending Act) used the previous depositions as evidence in the case and mainly upon these convicted the accused of murder and sentenced them to transportation for life. Against this conviction and sentence the prisoners appealed to the High Court on the ground that the previous depositions ought not to have been used as evidence in the case as the Magistrate had refused to allow their pleaders to appear and cross-examine the witnesses who made the depositions. The High Court affirmed the convictions and sentence. IN THE MATTER OF DHAM MUNDUL

Meaning of words no evidence in section—The words no evidence in the second and third clauses of s 289 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) must not be read as meaning no satisfactory trustworthy or conclusive evidence. ————— Meaning of words no evidence in section.—The words "no evidence in the second and third clauses of s. 289 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) must not be read as meaning no satisfactory trustworthy or conclusive evidence. If there is evidence the trial must go on to its close; when in trials by jury the jury and in other trials the Judge after considering the opinions of the assessors have to find on the facts. It is only in the absence of any evidence as to the commission of the offence by the accused that the Court can record an acquittal without allowing the trial to go on, or obtaining the opinion of the assessors or that the Court can direct the jury without going into the defence to return a verdict of not guilty. Queen Express v. L. ———— Deaf and dumb person—Procedure—G was convicted by the J. M. Magistrate of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft and the case referred under the provisions of s. 15 of Act X of 1872 to the High Court for orders. It appeared that G whose understanding was of the most limited character was caught at night in a house with some anklets in his possession. He was a lad of 15 or 16 years of age and had been deaf and dumb from his birth. He sometimes lived with his father and sometimes by begging and there was little doubt that hunger had driven him to break into the house. He had never been in arrest before. The Court recommended that he should be made over to his father. QUEEN v. OASWA 7 N W., 131

2. — Deaf and dumb person—Ability to understand charge—In the case of an accused person who was deaf and dumb the Deputy Magistrate who tried and convicted him considered that he did not understand the proceedings and accordingly referred the case to the Magistrate under s. 186 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Magistrate considered that the accused did understand what he was charged with. Held that the finding of the Magistrate must prevail and s. 186 did not apply. DOHERT HULWAI v. ANONYMOUS [19 W R Cr, 37]

3. — Deaf and dumb person Trial of—The High Court under the circumstances of this case which came before it under the last clause of s. 186 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1872 set aside the conviction of the prisoner who was deaf and dumb and directed that he be admonished and discharged. DWARKANATH HALDAR v. NODER CHAUD HANNA 22 W R Cr., 35

4. — Deaf and dumb person Trial of—The High Court may under s. 186 Criminal Procedure Code in the trial of a person who is deaf and dumb and who cannot understand the proceedings against him or plead to the charge treat the proceedings as amounting to a sufficient trial and pass sentence upon the prisoner according to the facts which seem to be established in the course and as the result of those proceedings. In this case the Court had no doubt that the prisoner was guilty but before passing final orders, it gave the prisoner a further opportunity of being heard and accordingly directed the Magistrate to give him notice. QUEEN v. BOWKA HARI 22 W R Cr. 35

He was subsequently convicted by the Magistrate and this conviction was confirmed by the High Court. QUEEN v. BOWKA 22 W R Cr., 73

5. — Accused Meanings of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) s. 123—Person liable to imprisonment in default of giving security—The term accused in s. 340 of the Code of Criminal Procedure applies to a person who is liable under s. 123 of that Code to imprisonment in default of giving security. NAKHI LAL JHA v. proceedings to High Court—Power of High Court to pass final orders on such report—Discretion of High Court to order Sessions trial to be held—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) ss 341 and 342—Penal Code (XXV of 1860) s. 302

—An accused person who had been for some time confined in a lunatic asylum was tried and committed to the Sessions by a Deputy Magistrate on a charge of murder. The accused was deaf and dumb and could not be made to understand the proceedings which had been taken. On the proceedings being forwarded to the High Court under s. 341 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it was held that the law does not contemplate that the Sessions trial should necessarily take place. That it is discretionary with the High Court on a commitment made to order the Sessions trial to be held and the High Court must consider whether any benefit would be likely to result especially to the accused by such trial. The High Court in this case having come to the conclusion that no benefit would be likely to result to the accused by his being tried by the Court of Sessions found that the accused was guilty of the alleged murder but that he was by reason of unsoundness of mind not responsible for his action and directed him to be kept in the district jail to await the orders of Government. QUEEN EMPRESS v. 5 ———— Witness—Accused person calling as witnesses persons charged with him and awaiting a separate trial for same offence—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s. 132 — The accused D a European British subject was charged together with others who were natives of India under ss. 381, 385 and 389 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) with conspiring to commit extortion. D claimed to be tried by a mixed jury under s. 400 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898). The other accused who were natives of India then claimed to be tried separately under s. 452. The trial of D then proceeded and at the close of the case for the prosecution he proposed to call as his witnesses the persons who had been charged with him and who were awaiting their trial. They objected to be called. Held that he was entitled to call them as witnesses and to examine them on oath. The words “the accused in cl. 4 of s. 34 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) mean the accused then under trial and under examination by the Court. QUEEN EMPRESS v. DEWANT I. L. On the application of the complainant the District Magistrate directed further inquiry into the case under s 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and on a reference to the Court of Session the Sessions Judge held that as no inquiry into the charge of theft had been held the order was legal. The Court of Session considering that the accused persons had been improperly discharged forwarded the record to the Magistrate of the district suggesting to him to make the case over to a Subordinate Magistrate with directions to enquire into any offence other than the offence in respect of which the accused persons had been discharged which the evidence on the record showed to have been committed. The Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over made an inquiry and committed the accused persons for trial before the Court of Session on charges under ss. 363 and 450 of the Penal Code. It was contended that the Court of Session was not competent to direct the accused persons to be committed under s. 296 of Act V of 1872 the case not being a Sessions case within the meaning of that section and that the commitment was consequently illegal. Held that there was no direction to commit within the meaning of that section that is to say to send the accused persons at once to the Sessions Court without further inquiry and whether or not the inquiry was made in consequence of the suggestions of the Court of Session was immaterial and that the inquiry upon the charges under ss. 363 and 450 of the Penal Code was rightly held by the Subordinate Magistrate and the commitment could not be impeached. EMPRESS v. But under s. 298 as amended by Act VI of 1874 the Court has power to direct the subordinate Court to enquire into any offences for which it considers a commitment should be ordered. When however a trial under such a commitment made by order of a Sessions Judge has been duly held and no actual failure of justice has been caused by the error of the Sessions Judge s. 298 of the Criminal Procedure Code would be a bar to the reversal of his judgment. EMPRESS v. A trial for the offence of cheating is not a Sessions case within the meaning of a 206 having regard to the first portion of the definition of Sessions case in s. 4 of the Code which must be read as if the word "only" followed the words "triable by a Court of Session." JOR HERN SINGH v. The Court accordingly was of opinion that if the accused had no opportunity given them of meeting the charge the commitment was not a good commitment. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BENDROO

under s. 437 Criminal Procedure Code that further inquiry should be made and the accused called on to enter upon his defence. The accused was not called upon to show cause why a further inquiry should not be made but a summons in the terms of s. 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code was issued to him. On his appearance he was tried by the Magistrate of the district convicted and sentenced. The witnesses for the prosecution were not recalled but the Magistrate relied upon their evidence as recorded in the first trial and also upon the statement of a witness for the defence which was not receivable in evidence. Held that the proceedings of the Magistrate of the district were irregular first because notice to show cause why action should not be taken against him in the terms of s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was not served upon the accused person before proceedings ostensibly under that section were commenced and secondly because the subsequent proceedings of the Magistrate were not such as were contemplated by the provisions of s. 437 inasmuch as the conviction was practically based upon evidence which was not recorded in the course of a further inquiry before the Magistrate of the district but upon evidence which was recorded by the Deputy Magistrate and had been adjudicated upon by that officer and such irregularities were fatal to the conviction. QUEEN v. 16. — Jurisdiction of District Magistrate to order further inquiry in a proceeding under s. 13 of the Code of Criminal Procedure—A District Magistrate has strictly speaking no power under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) to order a further inquiry into a proceeding under s. 13 of the Code which has been practically dropped by a Subordinate Magistrate the proper course being to refer the matter to the High Court. INDRA NATH DANIEL v QUEEN EMPRESS

17. — Further inquiry—Sessions Judge Jurisdiction of—It is competent to a Sessions Judge acting under the Criminal Procedure Code s. 437 to direct further inquiry to be held where additional evidence is not forthcoming. QUEEN EMPRESS v BALASUBRAMANIAM

18. — Power of Sessions Judge to order further inquiry—A Sessions Judge is not competent under s. 437 Criminal Procedure Code to direct the reopening of the proceedings merely because in his opinion the Subordinate Magistrate has not rightly appreciated the credit due to the witnesses. Further inquiry under this section

19 ——— Inquiry—Further inquiry—Fresh inquiry—Jurisdiction—Notice—District Magistrate—Subordinate Magistrate—When a complaint has been dismissed under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1882) or an accused person discharged by a Subordinate Magistrate the District Magistrate has power under s. 437 of the Code to direct any Magistrate subordinate to him to make further inquiry into the complaint dismissed or into the case of the accused person discharged even though there be no additional evidence disclosed or allegation that such exists. The term 'further inquiry' in s. 437 is not restricted to inquiry upon further materials or further or additional evidence. Before directing further inquiry under s. 437 it is not obligatory on the District Magistrate to give notice to the person discharged or against whom the complaint was dismissed. When an order directing such inquiry is made the Subordinate Magistrate to whom it is directed has jurisdiction and is bound to carry it out. Such order remains in force until it is duly set aside or withdrawn. Difference between the provisions of the District Magistrate under the former Criminal Procedure Code (Act X 1872) and the present one (Act X 1882) pointed out. Empress v Gondaga I L R 2 Bom 530 explained Chandra Churn Bhattacharya v Hem Chander Banerjee I L R 10 Cal 207 commented on and Jeelun Kristo Roy v Shib Chunder Das I L R 10 Cal 1027 Queen Empress v Hossain I L R 6 All 367 and Queen Empress v Amir Khan I L R 8 Mad 336 commented on and cited. QUEEN EMPRESS v DORABJI HORMASJI I L R 10 Bom 131*

20 ——— Further inquiry—Practice—Notice to show cause—Held by the Full Bench that when a Magistrate has discharged an accused person under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code the High Court or Court of Session under s. 437 has jurisdiction to direct further inquiry on the same materials and a District Magistrate may under like circumstances himself hold further inquiry or direct further inquiry by a Subordinate Magistrate. Queen Empress v Dorabji Hormasji I L R 10 Bom 131 referred to. Empress v Bhole Singh W N All 1883 p 150 Queen Empress v Haanu I L R 6 All 367 Chandra Churn Bhattacharya v Hem Chander Banerjee I L R 10 Cal 207 Jeelun Kristo Roy v Shib Chunder Das I L R 10 Cal 1027 Darshan Lall v Jomuk Lall I L R 12 Cal 522 and Queen Empress v Amir Khan I L R 8 Mad 336 cited. 23 ——— Complaint dismissed of—Several of proceedings—Criminal Procedure Code s. 437—A complaint was made before a Magistrate of the first class of an offence punishable under s. 323 of the Penal Code. The Magistrate recorded a brief statement by the complainant but did not ask him if he had any witnesses to call. An order was passed directing that a copy of the petition of complaint should be sent to the police station calling for a report on the matter and on receipt of the report the Magistrate dismissed the complaint under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code. There was nothing in the Magistrate's original order to show that he saw reason to distrust the truth of the complaint nor did he direct any local investigation to be made by a police officer for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. Subsequently to the dismissal of the complaint the same complainant brought a fresh charge upon the same facts against the same persons in the same Court and upon this charge the accused were tried convicted and sentenced. Held that the Magistrate in ordering a further inquiry on receipt of the complaint a second petition did not act contrary to any provision of the law and that considering the circumstances under which the first complaint had been dismissed a further inquiry was necessary. QUEEN EMPRESS v CHAK I L R 9 All 85

24 ——— Notice to accused—Discharge by Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code

(Act X of 1882) s 437 - Notice to an accused person is necessary in point of law before an order under s. 437 can be passed but as a matter of discretion it is proper that such a notice should be given. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PARSEER WILLOW TOTTERHAM MORRIS PIGOT and O'HINEALTY JJ) - After an inquiry by a subordinate Magistrate and the discharge of an accused person a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has jurisdiction under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry or a re-hearing upon the same materials which were before the subordinate Magistrate when no further evidence is forthcoming. But (PARSEER J dissenting) the words "further inquiry" in that section mean the inquiry preliminary to trial which regularly results in a charge or discharge and do not include the trial. And if on the evidence taken the accused ought to be committed then in a case triable only at the Sessions the proper course is to commit under s. 476 in other cases to refer to the High Court. Per PARSEER J - The word "inquiry" includes a trial and the further inquiry would therefore fall within the framing of a charge and the cross examination of witnesses for the prosecution. Per PATTERHAM C.J. and GHOSE J - The power given by s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry is confined to cases in which the revising officer is satisfied for one of the reasons mentioned in s. 435 that the subordinate officer has proceeded on insufficient materials and that with a more exhaustive inquiry further material would be forthcoming. It was not intended that such an enquiry should be granted simply for the reconsideration of evidence. IN THE MATTER OF HARI DASS SANYAL v SARKISULLA I L R 15 Cal 608

25 ----- Further inquiry - Notice to the accused - Practice - Before making an order for further inquiry under s. 437 Criminal Procedure Code a notice should be given to the accused person to give him an opportunity of being heard upon the question whether any further inquiry should be made. Hari Das Sanyal v Sarkisulla I L R 15 Cal 608 followed. JALMAL HANU v SUPHAL SINGH [3 C W N 198]

26 ----- Discretion of Court - Further inquiry - Notice - Although there is nothing in s. 437 rendering it incumbent to give notice before directing a further inquiry yet a Court would not be exercising a proper discretion if before ordering a further inquiry it did not give notice to the accused to show cause against such order. Where therefore a further inquiry was directed with at such previous notice to the accused the High Court set aside the order. Hari Das Sanyal v Sarkisulla I L R 15 Cal 608 followed. IN THE MATTER OF AMIT I ANJADAR 3 C W N 249

abkari inspector visited a toddy shop where the complainant and one D were employed as agents for the sale of toddy. Having reason to suspect that an offence under the Abkari Act (Bombay Act V of 1878) had been committed the accused made an inquiry in the course of which the complainant made certain statements implicating his fellow servant. The accused thereupon resolved to prosecute D and make the complainant a witness in the case. In order to prevent him being tutored the accused ordered his spy to bring the complainant to his camp and there detained him during the night and on the following morning sent him in charge of a spy to the Magistrate's Court where the complainant repeated the statements made by him before the accused. He was then allowed to go away. The accused prosecuted D and in the course of his trial admitted in his deposition that he had ordered his spy to bring the complainant to his camp and had detained him there during the night. After the termination of D's trial the complainant charged the accused with wrongful confinement under s. 347 of the Penal Code. The accused pleaded that the complainant had voluntarily come to his tent to have his statements reduced to writing and that he had of his own accord stripped in his camp during the night. The trying Magistrate held this plea proved and discharged the accused under s. 253 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1882). The Sessions Judge held that though the accused had detained the complainant in his camp during the night still he was not guilty of any offence under the Penal Code as he had acted with ut malice and to the best of his judgment. He therefore declined to interfere or order a further inquiry. Held by the High Court on revision that the trying Magistrate had wrongly omitted to take into consideration the admissions made by the accused in his deposition in D's case. Those admissions had an important bearing on the present case. They were admissible in evidence against the accused and as they were left out of consideration the inquiry was necessarily incomplete and improper. Further inquiry was therefore ordered. DEWJA v CLIFFORD

28 ----- Order of Sessions Judge rejecting application under s. 437 - Subsequent order of District Magistrate granting similar application - Practice - Where a Sessions Judge has passed orders under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code a District Magistrate acting under the same section should not pass orders of a contrary kind but if he thinks that the Judge's orders were wrong he should submit them to the High Court through the medium of the Public Prosecutor. Queen Empress v Shere Singh I L R 15 P. 9 111 360 referred to. Where a Sessions Judge had under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code refused to order further inquiry into the case of an accused person who had been discharged the High Court set aside a subsequent order of the Magistrate of the

29 Jurisdiction of Sessions Judge and Magistrate to grant further inquiry.—Power of the Sessions Judge to interfere with orders passed by the District Magistrate.—Both the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate are competent under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry but the Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to review an order made by the District Magistrate under that section refusing a further inquiry. He refused on application made to the Sessions Judge to direct a further inquiry to be made by the Magistrate into another offence under s. 111 of the Penal Code in respect of which no charge of any such offence having been made at any time against him. The Sessions Judge also directed a further inquiry against other persons who apparently were mentioned in the complaint but who had not been summoned to appear before the Magistrate. Held that the order of the Sessions Judge was without jurisdiction not being within the powers described by s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. HAR KISHORE DAS v. 31 Power of superior Magistrates to direct a Subordinate Magistrate to issue warrants previously issued and cancelled by such subordinate Magistrate.—Where a Sub-Divisional Magistrate issued warrants for the apprehension of some accused persons for trial and afterwards cancelled the warrants and a District Magistrate purporting to act under s. 437 Criminal Procedure Code directed the said Sub-Divisional Magistrate to re-issue the warrants. Held that the Magistrate's order directing the Sub-Divisional Officer to re-issue the warrants against the accused was ultra vires. Held also that s. 437 Criminal Procedure Code does not contemplate a case of a Magistrate directing a Subordinate Magistrate to issue warrants for the apprehension of a person. 33 Order for further inquiry in case of discharge of person called upon to give security for good behavior.—Further inquiry Power to order in such proceedings.—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) ss. 110 and 437.—A further inquiry cannot be made into the case of a person against whom proceedings under s. 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have been taken and who has been discharged. If it be considered by the Magistrate that it is necessary to institute further proceedings he is competent to do so under the law on fresh information received. The further inquiry which can be ordered under s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is into a complaint which has been dismissed or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged. Proceedings under s. 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure cannot be regarded as on a complaint nor can they be regarded as a case in which any accused person has been discharged for the terms accused person and discharge in s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure clearly refer to a person accused of an offence who has been discharged from a charge of that offence within the terms of Ch. XIX of the Code. QUEEN v. FERNANDES v. INAM MOYDAL I L R 27 Cal 863

1. — Act XXIII of 1861 s 16

— Sending case for investigation by Magistrate — A Subordinate Judge finding that a person had made a false verification of a plaint sent his case for investigation to a Magistrate of the district who refused to investigate it on the ground that the alleged offence was one triable exclusively by the Court of Session to which the Subordinate Judge himself should under s 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have committed it. Held that the Magistrate of the district was bound to proceed with the investigation of the case according to s 16 of Act XVIII of 1861. Rao v AMRUTA NATH

[7 Bom. Cr 28]

2. — Preliminary enquiry —

Procedure — Under s 471 Criminal Procedure Code the Court must first make a preliminary enquiry to satisfy itself that a specific charge coming under the sections mentioned in it ought to be preferred against the accused; and after being so satisfied it must either commit the case or send the case to the Magistrate for enquiry whether a commitment should be made or not. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI PROSUNNO BAGCHEE

[23 W R, Cr, 30]

3. — Power of High Court as

Civil Court to interfere with order under s 471 — Where a Civil Court directs an inquiry to be made by the Magistrate of the district under s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect to the evidence given by the witnesses in a case before it the High Court cannot as a Civil Court on appeal interfere. See Queen v Baijoo Lall I L R 1 Cal 450 UMRICA SUNDRI CHOUDHRAI v ANITALLA MOY DUL

4. — Act XXIII of 1861 s 16

— Order sending case to Magistrate for enquiry into offence of giving false evidence — Preliminary enquiry — Vagueness of charge — Although s 16 of Act XXIII of 1861 gives Civil Courts powers similar to those conferred on Civil and Criminal Courts alike by s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code the whole law as to the procedure in cases within these sections is now embodied in s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In a suit brought to recover possession of certain property the Judge decided one of the issues raised in the plaintiff's favour but on the important issue as to whether the plaintiff ever had possession he found for the defendant. The plaintiff was not examined but on the issue as to possession he called 10 witnesses. The Judge who believed their statements and considering that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case gave judgment for the defendant without requiring him to give evidence on that issue. In the concluding paragraph of his judgment the Judge directed the depositions of the two witnesses above referred to together with the English memoranda of their evidence to be sent to the Magistrate with a view to his enquiring whether or not they had voluntarily given false evidence in a judicial proceeding; and he further directed the Magistrate to enquire whether or not the plaintiff had abetted the offence of giving false evidence on the ground that as the witnesses were the plaintiff's servants he must personally have influenced them and also to enquire whether the plaintiff which the plaintiff had alleged contained averments which he knew to be false. On a motion to quash this order — Held that under s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Judge had no power to send a case to a Magistrate except when after having made such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary he is of opinion that there is sufficient ground (i.e. ground of a nature higher than mere surmise or suspicion) for directing judicial enquiry into the matter of a specific charge and that the Judge is bound to indicate the particular statements or averments in respect of which he considers that there is ground for a charge into which the Magistrate ought to enquire and that the order was bad because the Judge had made no preliminary enquiry and because it was too vague and general in its character. Queen v Baijoo Lall IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI PROSUNNO BAGCHEE

5. — Power of and procedure of

Court in making order under section — Order directing prosecution — Before a Court is justified in making an order under s 470 directing the prosecution of any person it ought to have before it direct evidence fixing the offence upon the person whom it is sought to charge either in the course of the preliminary enquiry referred to in that section or in the earlier proceedings out of which the enquiry arises. It is not sufficient that the evidence in the earlier case may induce some sort of suspicion that the person had been guilty of an offence; but there must be distinct evidence of the commission of an offence by the person who is to be prosecuted. Queen v Baijoo Lall I L R 1 Cal 450 and In the matter of the petition of Kali Prosunno Bagchee [23 W R Cr 30] followed. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF AMRUTA NATH SIKHAN v GRISH CHANDER MUKERJI

9 ————— Institution of criminal prosecution pending appeal in Civil Court—If in the course of a proceeding either civil or criminal a Judge or Magistrate finds clear ground for believing that either the parties to the proceeding or their witnesses have committed perjury or any other offence against public justice he is justified in directing criminal proceedings against such person under s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code without any further enquiry than that which he has already held in his own Court. As a matter of discretion and propriety it is right for a Court before committing a person on a charge of perjury upon his own uncontradicted statement to await the hearing of the appeal where an appeal is pending in the case in which he is charged with such perjury. IN THE MATTER OF MUTTI LALL GHOSH I L R 6 Cal 303

10 ————— Power to commit for offences—S 471 deals with a more extended class of cases, viz all those mentioned in ss 467 468 and 469 in which not merely a Civil Court but any Court Civil or Criminal and which repeats or not possessing the power to commit to the Court of Session is of opinion that there is sufficient ground for holding an enquiry and it enacts the procedure to be followed by the Court which may elect to adopt one of two courses that is to say it may either commit a case to the Court of Session if and where it has the power to do so or if it has not that power or is not disposed to exercise it it may send the case to a Magistrate having power to try or commit for trial the accused person for the offence charged. EMRESS v POPAT NATHU I L R 4 Bom 267

12 ————— Preliminary enquiry—An order made under s 471 of Act V of 1872 sending a case for enquiry to a Magistrate is not necessarily bad because the Court did not make a preliminary enquiry before making such order. The law requires only such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary. Held therefore where a Munsif being of opinion that both the parties to a suit tried by him had given false evidence thereon on certain points sent the case for enquiry to the Magistrate under s 471 of Act V of 1872 with a proceeding embodying the facts of the case and charging the parties respectively with giving false evidence on such points and there was nothing to show that any enquiry that the Munsif could have

— s. 551—Unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose—Infant Custody—A Hindu girl under the age of 15 years went of her own accord to a Mission house where she was received and allowed to remain. The mother and husband of the girl thereupon applied to the Magistrate who took proceedings under s. 501 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The lady superintendent of the Mission house denied that the girl was legally married and alleged that she was practically brought up with the assistance of the mother to a life of prostitution. The Magistrate after recording evidence found that the girl was legally married; that the other allegation was not established; and that although she went to and remained in the Mission house of her own free will there was under the circumstances an unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose. He further found that there were no facts established which would disentitle the husband or the mother to the custody of the girl and passed an order under the section directing the girl to be restored to her father. Held upon the facts as found by the Magistrate as it was immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent to remain at the Mission house there was an unlawful detention within the meaning of those words as used in the section as the girl was kept against the will of those who were lawfully entitled to have charge of her. Held also that s. 51 apply only to women and female children and not to the husband so as to make it include purposes which, although not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian but that the purpose whether entertained towards a woman or a female child must be in itself unlawful. Held consequently that in the circumstances of the case there was no detention for an unlawful purpose and that the Magistrate had no power to make the order. Held further that although the Magistrate had no power under the section to make the order he did it did not follow that the Court should direct the girl to be restored to the custody of the lady superintendent even if it had the power to do so and that having regard to the circumstances of the case there was nothing to justify such an order being passed. ANAND K. — s. 551—Unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose—Infant Custody—A Hindu girl under the age of 15 years went of her own accord to a Mission house where she was received and allowed to remain. The mother and husband of the girl thereupon applied to the Magistrate who took proceedings under s. 501 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The lady superintendent of the Mission house denied that the girl was legally married and alleged that she was practically brought up with the assistance of the mother to a life of prostitution. The Magistrate after recording evidence found that the girl was legally married; that the other allegation was not established; and that although she went to and remained in the Mission house of her own free will there was under the circumstances an unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose. He further found that there were no facts established which would disentitle the husband or the mother to the custody of the girl and passed an order under the section directing the girl to be restored to her father. Held upon the facts as found by the Magistrate as it was immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent to remain at the Mission house there was an unlawful detention within the meaning of those words as used in the section as the girl was kept against the will of those who were lawfully entitled to have charge of her. Held also that s. 51 apply only to women and female children and not to the husband so as to make it include purposes which, although not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian but that the purpose whether entertained towards a woman or a female child must be in itself unlawful. Held consequently that in the circumstances of the case there was no detention for an unlawful purpose and that the Magistrate had no power to make the order. Held further that although the Magistrate had no power under the section to make the order he did it did not follow that the Court should direct the girl to be restored to the custody of the lady superintendent even if it had the power to do so and that having regard to the circumstances of the case there was nothing to justify such an order being passed. ANAND K. 2. Irregularity—Waiver or consent by prisoner—Recording statements of witnesses—The jailor of a district jail being accused by one of the jail clerks of falsifying his accounts and defrauding the Government the matter was enquired into by the District Magistrate and the jailor was by the Magistrate's order placed on trial before a Bench of Magistrates consisting of the District Magistrate himself, the Officiating Superintendent of the jail and three other Honorary Magistrates. The prisoner and his pleaders were alleged to have stated before the commencement of the trial on being questioned that they had no objection to the composition of the Bench but after the charges had been framed the prisoner's counsel objected to the Bench as formed. The District Magistrate directed the Government pleader to prosecute and both the District Magistrate and J gave evidence for the prosecution. After the case for the prosecution was closed two formal charges were drawn up namely that the prisoner had debited Government with the price of more oil seed than he actually purchased and that he had received payment for certain oil at a higher rate than he credited to Government. The moneys the receipt of which were the subject of the first charge were obtained by the prisoner on the strength of certain vouchers which he had induced L to sign as correct and L had sanctioned the sale at the rates credited to Government. Upon the prisoner's giving the names of the witnesses he intended to call in his defence L was deputed by his brother Magistrates to examine some of them who were connected with the jail in order to guard against deviation and the depositions so taken were placed on the record to be used by either party though not themselves as evidence. The prisoner was convicted. On a motion to quash the conviction—Held that the recording the statements of the prisoner's witnesses was irregular. In the proceedings the Magistrate referred to a police report which however did not show that a breach of the peace was imminent. Held that although this report might be taken to be incorporated by reference yet that it was not sufficient to justify the order. Per FIELD J—Unless the parties are able to show that there is such a dispute as is likely to induce a breach of the peace the Magistrate should hold his hand and not proceed further. When the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court the dispute is at an end, and it is the duty of the Magistracy to maintain the results of the successful party and the proper course for the Magistrate to pursue if the defeated party does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace is to take action under s 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code and require from such person security to keep the peace. If a charge of an offence not triable summarily is laid and sworn to the Magistrate must proceed with the case accordingly unless he is at the outset in a position to show from the deposition of the complainant that the circumstances of aggravation are really mere exaggeration and not to be believed. Therefore a Magistrate when he has before him a person charged with having been armed with a deadly weapon while a member of an unlawful assembly is not at liberty to disregard that part of the charge which charges the prisoner with having been armed with a deadly weapon and so to give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily and then by inflicting a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months to deprive the prisoner of his right of appeal. a yadast from a revenue officer and conveying accused without examining complainant—A revenue officer sent a yadast to a third class Magistrate charging a certain person with having disobeyed a summons issued by the revenue officer. The third class Magistrate thereupon tried and convicted the accused under s. 174 of the Penal Code. The District Magistrate referred the case on the ground that the conviction was bad under s. 530 (k) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 63. Criminal Procedure Code 1893 s. 530 cl (p)—Offence originally cognizable by a second class Magistrate subsequently non cognizable by reason of an aggravating circumstance—Duty of inferior Court—The accused were charged before a Magistrate of the second class with causing grievous hurt as members of an unlawful assembly under ss. 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code. The evidence showed that one of the accused had used an axe in causing the hurt. The Magistrate apparently ignored this fact and he convicted the accused under s. 325 of the Code. The accused appealed. The District Magistrate who heard one appeal and the first class Magistrate who heard the rest of the appeals were both of opinion that the offence committed by the accused was one of causing grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon within the meaning of s. 326 of the Penal Code and as such beyond the jurisdiction of the second class Magistrate. But they did not think it proper under the circumstances of the case to quash the convictions. The Sessions Judge on examining the record of the case was of opinion that as the offence committed by the accused was not cognizable by the trying Magistrate his proceedings were void ab initio under s. 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code. He therefore referred the case to the High Court and recommended that the convictions under s. 325 should be set aside. Held that the proceedings before the second class Magistrate were not void ab initio as he had jurisdiction to try the accused for offences punishable under ss. 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code with which they were originally charged. Held also that though it was the duty of the trying Magistrate when the evidence disclosed a circumstance of aggravation such as the use of a dangerous weapon which made the offence cognizable by a higher Court to adopt the proper procedure to send the case to the higher Court still it was not necessary to quash the proceedings as the accused were not in any way prejudiced and the sentences were not inadequate. *QUEEN EMPRESS v. At the trial an application was made on behalf of the accused, under s. 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code (X of 1892) that the commitment should be quashed and a fresh enquiry directed on the ground that an objection had been taken to the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Held refusing the application that the commitment being an order (see Queen Empress v. Thaku I. L. 64. Irregularity in commitment—Criminal Procedure Code (1892) ss. 532 and 537—Commitment to Sessions Court by Magistrate having no jurisdiction over place where alleged offences were committed—A Magistrate who commits a case for trial by a Sessions Court does so in the exercise of powers duly conferred upon him and the fact that he had no territorial jurisdiction over the place where the alleged offences were committed and that an objection to the commitment on this ground was taken before the commitment is no ground for the Court to which the commitment was made quashing it under s. 532 nor under s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code. *Queen Empress v. 65. Stay of criminal proceedings pending civil litigation—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s. 278—Inquiry into claim to attached property—Subsequent civil suit by claimant to establish his right to the property—Criminal Procedure Code (1892) s. 478—It is not an invariable rule that criminal proceedings should be stayed during the pendency of civil litigation regarding the same subject matter. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. Thereupon accused No. 1 applied to have the attachment raised on the ground that he had purchased the property from the judgment-debtor under a sale deed executed long before the date of the attachment. In the summary inquiry which was made under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) he produced the sale deed and accused No. 2 was called as his witness and supported his claim. The Subordinate Judge found that the deed was a forgery and rejected the claim. Proceeding then under s. 478 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1892) he held the inquiry directed by that section and committed both the accused to the Sessions Court on charges of perjury and forgery. During the pendency of the inquiry under s. 478 the accused No. 1 filed a civil suit to establish the genuineness of the sale deed and set aside the attachment. He also applied to the High Court to quash the commitment or stay the criminal proceedings pending the disposal of the civil suit. Held refusing the application that the mere fact that a regular suit was filed to establish the genuineness of the sale-deed was not a sufficient ground for quashing the commitment or for adjourning the trial pending the hearing of the civil suit. IN RE DEVI VALAB BHAYANI

68 ————— Power of the High Court to stay proceedings before Magistrate pending a civil suit—Per RAMPIR J.—The High Court has no power to direct that criminal proceedings in the Court of a Magistrate should be stayed until the disposal of a civil suit in which the question at issue in the criminal proceedings at all have been decided. In the matter of Ram Prasad Ka Ra B. L. R. Sup. 101 420 followed. It is very doubtful if the High Court has any power to pass an order quashing the proceedings before a Magistrate. No section of the Criminal Procedure Code expressly authorizes the High Court to quash pending proceedings. Per GHO J.—A proceeding in a criminal Court should not as a general rule be stayed pending the decision of the civil suit in regard to the same subject matter but ordinarily it is not desirable if the parties to the two proceedings are substantially the same and the prosecution is but a private prosecution, and the issues in the two Courts are substantially identical, that both the cases should go on at one and the same time. It is open to the Magistrate having regard to the facts of the case before him to consider whether it is not desirable that the proceedings in his Court should be stayed till the decision of the civil suit or for a limited period of time and it is also open to him to put the defendant on terms as to appearance or otherwise if he does stay proceedings. The High Court has the power to order a Magistrate to stay proceedings in his Court if a sufficient cause in that behalf is made out. But inasmuch as the Legislature has given him the power to regulate the proceedings in his own Court the direction should ordinarily be left to him either to stay proceedings or not as he, in the circumstances of each case may think right and proper. PAT KUMARI DEBI v. One of the accused had made a confessional statement before the Magistrate who recorded it but did not make on it a memorandum to the effect stated in Criminal Procedure Code s. 164 and did not admit it in evidence for the reasons that the accused was produced from the custody of the police in which he had been detained for five days and there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat him as an approver. It appeared that a perusal of the preliminary register would have shown that the accused were either guilty under s. 396 or not guilty under s. 395 at all. The accused were tried by the Sessions Judge with a jury. The confessional statement was not admitted in evidence. The jury found the accused not guilty of dacoity but the Judge, disagreeing with the verdict, referred the case to the High Court under Criminal Procedure Code s. 307. Held (1) that the procedure adopted by the Judge was wrong and that he should have tried the accused with the aid of assessors under Indian Penal Code s. 396; (2) that the Judge should have enquired under Criminal Procedure Code s. 333 whether the confessional statement had been duly made and (3) that under the circumstances the High Court should determine on the evidence on record after giving due weight to the opinions of the Judge and the jury whether the accused were guilty under s. 395. QUEEN EMPRESS v. 22 ————— House trespass—Possession of property the subject of criminal trespass—Penal Code ss 441 442 and 445—C a rate payer in a municipality who had filed a petition against an assessment which in his absence had been dismissed entered a room where a Committee of the Municipal Commissioners were seated hearing and deciding petitions in assessment matters ostensibly with the object of presenting a petition for the revision of his assessment. The Chairman of the Committee ordered him to leave the room and on his refusal to do so he was turned out. Outside the room in the verandah he addressed the crowd complaining that no justice was to be obtained from the Committee. C was prosecuted on these facts at the instance of the Chairman of the Committee and convicted of house trespass under s 445 of the Penal Code. Held that the conviction was wrong and that no offence had been committed. The prosecution was bound to prove in order to support a conviction of a charge under s 441 or s 442 that the property trespassed upon was at the time in the possession of a complainant who could compound the offence under s 345 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the complainant had failed to prove that the room was in his possession and had in fact shown that he was merely sitting in it with other persons at the invitation and with the consent of the person whoever he might be who had the immediate right to such possession. Held further that even if the complainant could be held to be in possession of the room there was no evidence of any intent to commit an offence or to intimidate insult or annoy any person at appearing that the object of the accused in going into and remaining in the room was to endeavor to induce the complainant and his colleagues to reconsider their decision the verbal insult on which the conviction was based having been uttered after C had left the room. CHANDI PERSHAD v. 23 ————— Penal Code ss 441 446 457 and 509—Lurking house trespass by night—Intrusion on privacy—Intention—Chao Form of Criminal Procedure Code (1882) ss 221 222 and 537—A conviction for lurking house trespass by night under s 446 of the Penal Code is not bad for want of the specification of the intention in the charge but one under s 447 cannot be sustained without such specification. In a charge

under the former section though a guilty intention must be proved it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s 441 though it may not be certain which it was. An accused person the landlord of a house in which he occupied the lower flat was found in the middle of the night in the room of the complainant one of his tenants upstairs in which the complainant and his wife were at the time sleeping. Upon being detected the accused was subjected to very severe treatment but did not utter a word of protestation of innocence or make any show of remonstrance and when questioned said I have committed a fault pardon me. He was arrested upon a charge under s 456 of the Penal Code the criminal intention alleged being that of committing theft. The charge framed by the Magistrate did not specify any intention and the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the trespass was not committed by the accused who was a wealthy man with that intention. He found however that the complainant had suppressed some important facts and that he was not in his wife's room when the accused entered it and relying on the decision in Koslass Chandra Chakrabarty v. Queen Empress I L R 16 Calo 657 he convicted the accused. On appeal the Sessions Judge though finding that the Magistrate's views were against the evidence upheld the conviction without finding what specifically was the intention with which the entry was made. In revision it was contended that the conviction was bad (1) because no guilty intention was set out in the charge; (2) because no such intention was proved by the evidence and (3) because no such intention was specifically found by the Sessions Judge. Held that the first contention was not sustainable for the reasons above stated. Even if it had been necessary to specify the intention in the charge it would have to be shown under the provisions of s 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that the omission had occasioned a failure of justice and having regard to the nature of the charge and the line of defence adopted the accused had not in any way been prejudiced in his defence. Held as regards the second contention that though it was not certain what the precise intention of the accused was in committing the trespass it was clear that it must have been with one or other of the intentions specified in s 441 of the Penal Code as judging from the time the place and manner in which the trespass was committed and the conduct of the accused when discovered it was impossible to suppose that the trespass could have been committed either unintentionally or with any innocent intention and that it must have been committed with the intention of committing some offence but that the accused was entitled to have it taken that it was with the least possible culpable intention namely an offence under s 509 of the Penal Code. Held as regards the third contention that in exercising its powers under s 443 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it is open to the High Court to alter any finding and confirm a conviction and that if the evidence on the record in a case be sufficient to warrant a conviction the Court would not be justified in setting such conviction aside merely because the view taken of the evidence by the lower Court is not sustainable or some fact which ought to have been found by that Court is not found or found incorrectly HAJIRKAND RAO v. GHANASAMRAM I L R. 22 Calc. 391

26. ————— Penal Code ss 441 and 466—House breaking by night—Intent—When a stranger uninvited and without any right to be there effects an entry in the middle of the night into the sleeping apartment of a woman a member of a respectable household and when an attempt is made to capture him uses great violence in his efforts to make good his escape a Court should presume that the entry was made with an intent such as is provided for by s 441 of the Penal Code. An accused person in the middle of the night effected an entry into a house occupied by two widows members of a respectable family. On an alarm being given and an attempt made to capture him he made use of great violence and effected his escape. Upon these facts he was charged with offences under ss 450 and 323 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was an alibi which was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the house but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s 456. It was contended that as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence the conviction was illegal. Held that under the circumstances of the case the Court ought to presume that the entry was effected with such intent as is provided for by s 441 and that the conviction should be upheld. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s 456. It was contended that as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence the conviction was illegal. Held that the facts proved were good evidence of an intent and of an intrusion upon privacy within the meaning of s. 509 of the Penal Code and that therefore the intent to commit an offence within the meaning of s. 441 was made out. BALMAKAND RAO v. house breaking and theft searched the tents of certain gipsies for the stolen property but discovered nothing. After he had completed the search the gipsies gave him a certain sum of money which he accepted but at the same time not deeming it sufficient he demanded a further sum from them. They refused to give any thing more on the ground that they were poor and had no more to give. Thereupon he unlawfully ordered one of them to be bound and taken away. On his subordinates proceeding to execute such order all the gipsies in the camp men women and children turned out some four or five of the men being armed with sticks and stones and advanced in a threatening manner towards the place where such gipsy was being bound and the head constable was standing. Before any actual violence was used by the crowd of advancing gipsies the head constable fired with a gun at such crowd when it was about five paces from him and killed one of the gipsies and having done so ran away. Any apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be the consequence of the acts of such crowd would have ceased had he released the gipsy he had unlawfully arrested and withdrawn himself and his subordinates or had he effected his escape. Held that such head constable had not a right of private defence against the acts of such gipsies as those acts did not reasonably cause the apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be their consequence and such head constable was guilty of culpable homicide amounting to murder. EMRESS v. INDIA v. ANDUL HAYDER I L R 3 All 263

17 ——— Killing outlaw while endeavouring to escape—Penal Code s 300 except 3—The prisoners fearful of being punished if they allowed him to escape and thinking that they were acting lawfully in furtherance of a plan arranged for them by a police constable and the lumberard of a village for the capture of an outlaw for whose arrest a reward had been offered and in pursuance thereof killed him while endeavouring to escape. Held that the offence committed came under the third exception in s. 300 of the Penal Code and was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. AMAR [5 N W, 130]

18 ——— Unpremeditated assault—Penal Code s 300 except 4—An unpremeditated assault ending in an affray in which death is caused committed in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel comes within except 4 of s. 300 of the Penal Code. It is immaterial which party offered the provocation or committed the first assault. QUEEN v. ZALIM RAI I W R Cr 33

19 ——— Inflicting injury not sufficient to cause death—Intent of intention to cause death—Penal Code ss 299 300—Where the prisoner kicked his wife down put one knee on her chest and struck her two or three violent blows on the face with the closed fist producing extravasation of blood on the brain and she died in consequence either on the spot or very shortly afterwards.—Held that there being no intention to cause death and the bodily injury not being sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death the offence committed by the prisoner was not murder but culpable homicide not amounting to murder. PEO v. GOVINDA [I L R 1 Bom. 342]

20 ——— Grievous hurt—Blow causing injury not intended—An accused struck a woman carrying an infant in her arms violently over head and shoulders. One of the blows fell on the child's head causing death. Held that the accused was not guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder but had committed hurt on the infant under circumstances of sufficient aggravation to bring the offence within the definition of grievous hurt. EMPRESS v. 21 ——— Death from violent attack—Where death has resulted from a violent attack, the Magistrate is bound to commit to the Court of Session on a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Conviction of grievous hurt in such a case is contrary to law. 1872 MATTER OF GORI NATH SHANI I C L R 141

22 ——— Consenting to act likely to cause death—Murder—Penal Code s 300 except 5—Except 5 to s. 300 refers to cases where a man consents to submit to the doing of some particular act either knowing that it will certainly cause death or that death will be the likely result; but it does not refer to the running of a risk of death from something which a man intends to avert if he possibly can do so even by causing the death of the person from whom the danger is to be anticipated. PER BROUGHTON J—Except 5 to s. 300 is not applicable to the case of a premeditated fight but points to a different character such as suttee. EMPRESS v. amounted to an attempt to murder the question arose whether that act could be said to bear a less grave character by reason of excep 5 to a 300 of the Indian Penal Code Per Curiam—Held that upon such finding the case did not fall within the exception Per 1809 J (PERERAM CJ and MACPHERSON J concurring)—The 5th exception to s 300 could receive a strict and not a liberal construction; and in applying the exception it should be considered with reference to the act consented to or authorized and next with reference to the person or persons authorized and as to each of those some degree of particularity at least should appear upon the facts proved before the exception can be said to apply Shamshere Khan v Empress I L R 6 Cal 154 and Queen v Kulier Ma ter unreported, dissented from so far as they decide that from such a finding as the above consent to take the risk of death is inferred Per O'KINEALY J—Before excep 5 can be applied it must be found that the person killed with a full knowledge of the facts determined to suffer death or take the risk of death; and that this determination continued up to and existed at the moment of his death Queen v Kulier Ma ter unreported observed on Per GHOSH J—No general rule of law can be laid down in determining in cases of this description whether the person killed or wounded suffered death or took the risk of death with his own consent it being a question of fact and not of law to be decided upon the circumstances of each case as it arises. Shamshere Khan v Empress I L R 6 Cal 154 and Queen v Kulier Ma ter unreported observed on and the propositions of law laid down therein concurred with. QUEEN EMPRESS v NATANUDIN I L R, 18 Cal. 484

25 — Subjecting person of full age to emasculation.—When a man of full age (i.e. above 15 years) submits himself to emasculation performed neither by a skilful hand nor in the least dangerous way and dies from the injury the persons concerned in the act are guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v HANOOLOU HIFRAH 5 W R, Cr. 7

36 — Knowledge of likelihood to cause death.—Pre-meditation—When a person snatches up a log of heavy wood and strikes another with it on a vital part with so much force and violence as to cause that other person's death almost on the spot the act must be held to have been done with the knowledge that it was likely to cause death but if done without pre-meditation in the heat of passion on a sudden quarrel the offence committed is culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v RAJGO GHOSH 7 W R, Cr 108

27 — Taking persons in old boat—Negligence—Penal Code s 299—Certain persons whom the accused a ferryman was rowing across a river were drowned by the sinking of the boat which was an old one with holes in it over which planks had been nailed. Held that the prisoner could not be convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder unless it could be shown

that he acted with the knowledge that he was likely by taking them in the boat to cause death within the terms of s 299 of the Penal Code QUEEN v MAGEVET SENARA 11 W R Cr. 3

28 — The knowledge that an act is likely to cause death does not constitute culpable homicide amounting to murder. It must be shown that the act was committed with the knowledge that it must in all probability cause death QUEEN v GIRDHAREE SING 8 N W, 20

29 — Act likely to cause death.—Penal Code ss 304 and 304 (a)—Assault on thief—The prisoners assaulted a thief so severely that he died. One hundred and forty one marks of separate blows were found on the body of the deceased and several of his ribs were broken. Held that s 304 (a) of the Penal Code was not applicable to the circumstances of the case and that taking the offence out of the category of murder it must still come under s 304 QUEEN v MAN 5 N W 235

30 — Causing death by branding a thief—Dangerous act—Causing death by branding a thief without the knowledge that the act was so imminently dangerous that it would in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as was likely to cause death is punishable under s 304 of the Penal Code as culpable homicide not amounting to murder QUEEN v KHEPUS MISSEH 7 W R, Cr 54

31 — Penal Code s 304 (a)—Administering milk to child in such quantity as to kill it—Rash and negligent act—Knowledge of consequences—Where there was medical evidence to show that milk had been administered to a child in such quantities as to kill it but there was no evidence to show that the milk was administered by the orders of the mother or that she knew the quantity that was being administered—Held that there was not sufficient evidence to bring her within s 304 (a) of the Penal Code. The Sessions Judge found that the mother could not have been ignorant of the fact that her child was being over fed or of the probable consequences of such over-feeding; such finding was inconsistent with the terms of s 304 (a) which provides for the causing of death by any rash or negligent act not amounting to murder. What a man does with the knowledge that the consequences will be likely to cause death cannot be reduced to a simply rash and negligent act QUEEN v PEMROSE 5 N W 38

32 — Intention to cause injury likely to result in death—Causing death by rash act—Culpable rashness—Culpable negligence—Prisoner killed his mother by beating and kicking her. The Sessions Judge found that the death resulted from brutal beating and kicking but acquitted of culpable homicide because the violence was not such as the prisoner must have known to be likely to cause death. Held that this was no ground for acquitting of culpable homicide not amounting to murder; the question for the Judge was whether the act was done with the intention of causing bodily injury which was likely to cause death. The Sessions

s 304 (a)—Doing act with rashness and negligence—Where an accused was charged with culpable homicide and the evidence showed that the deceased had an enlarged spleen and that his death was caused by rupture of the spleen occasioned by blows inflicted by the accused on the body of the deceased—Held that it was not sufficient in order to find the accused guilty of a rash act under s 304 (a) of the Penal Code that the jury should be satisfied only of the prevalence of the disease of enlargement of the spleen in the district and infer therefrom criminal rashness in beating the deceased; but that they should also be satisfied that the accused was aware of the prevalence of such disease in the district and also aware of the risk to life involved in striking a person afflicted with that disease. EMRESS v SAPATULLA [I L R. 4 Cal. 816]

s 304 (a)—Penal Code ss 336 337 and 339—Rashness—Negligence—s 304 (a) of the Penal Code does not apply to a case in which there has been the voluntary commission of an offence against the person. If a man intentionally commits such an offence and consequences beyond his immediate purpose result it is for the Court to determine how far he can be held to have the knowledge that he was likely by such act to cause the actual result and if such knowledge can be imputed the result is not to be attributed to mere rashness; if it cannot be imputed still the wilful offence does not take the character of rashness because its consequences have been unfortunate. Acts, probably or possibly involving danger to others but which in themselves are not offences may be offences under s 336 337 338, or 301 (a) if done without due care to guard against the dangerous consequences. Acts which are offences in themselves must be judged with regard to the knowledge or means of knowledge of the offender and placed in their appropriate place in the class of offences of the same character. EMRESS v KATADDI MUNDUL

DASU LALL*

5 Bom. A. C, 123

24 ————— Bhagdari tenures in Broach.—Inheritance.—Special custom.—Priority of nearest male relative to daughter or sister.—The plaintiff as heir of her father (a deceased Hindu Bhagdari) sued the sons of sisters of her father's paternal uncle for possession of certain Bhagdari lands situate in a village in the Broach collectorate. The defendants pleaded that they were entitled to the property under a special custom regulating the succession to Bhagdari lands in the collectorate of Broach under which custom on the death of a Bhagdari whether Hindu or Mahomedan without male issue his nearest male relations (after the death of widow) whether sprung through male or female lines of the deceased Bhagdari succeed to his Bhagdari lands to the exclusion of his daughter or sister. Held that the custom alleged was sufficiently proved and that the defendants were entitled to possession of the Bhagdari lands in question. Curiam—The custom alleged being if not universal at least general in the Broach collectorate it is in the case of any particular village at all evidence being given of its continuance in it.

28 Record of cess by settlement officer—The fact that a cess leviable in accordance with village custom has been recorded by a settlement officer is important evidence of the custom, but not conclusive proof of it. Held on the evidence in this case that the village custom set up was not established. LALA v. HITA PRIOH [I. L. R. 3 All. 40

29 Manorial dues and cesses—The plaintiffs zamindars sued for a declaration of their ancient rights as against all the tenants of a certain village to appropriate all trees of spontaneous growth and the fruits of other trees planted by the tenants; also to receive as manorial tribute a certain number of ploughs annually and a lakh in offering of paddy seed and other farm produce on the occasion of the marriage of persons of the inferior caste of tenants with a further right to levy one-tenth proportion of the produce of the sugar-cane manufactories and fields in the village. The Muzo Courts having decreed the suit on venue and Mass of parol evidence as to the existence of the said custom—Held (a) that where a custom regarding cesses is alleged the existence of the custom is a question of fact which should be tried as a separate issue, that parol evidence as to the existence of such a custom should be tested by ascertaining the grounds of the plaintiff's opinion (c) that the best proof of the existence of a custom is the fact that it has been acted on and defended, contrary evidence that it has been enforced (d) occurs a custom to be good must be definite. *LALA v. CUSTOM—continued

32 Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-urz—Held that occasional instances in which a claim to pre-emption on the ground of a Wajib-ul-urz may have been admitted or for special reason the vendors submitted to the claim are not sufficient to prove the custom of pre-emption in a mahaballah but repeated instances of the assertion of pre-emption as a right and of its recognition or enforcement running over a long period of time and in various places should be shown. *SHRO CHURY KANDOO v. Upon the basis of this entry they claimed to be entitled to take a portion of the occupancy holding at a certain period of the year for the purpose of cultivating indigo. Held by the Full Bench that the word khushis used in the Wajib-ul-urz indicated that the land was only to be taken with the occupancy tenant's consent and the document created no right of the nature alleged namely to take the land despite the tenant. CHANDAYAL MAL v. (c)—The Wajib-ul-urz of a village is a document of a public character prepared with all publicity and must be considered as prima facie evidence of the existence of any custom which it records. Its record of the existence of a custom of pre-emption is sufficiently strong evidence to rest on those denying the custom the burden of proof; and in the same manner when it records a contract of pre-emption between the shareholders there is a presumption that it is binding on the shareholders. Looking to the public character of the document and the way it is prepared and that all shareholders whether signing it or not must be presumed to have assented to its terms the inferences to be deduced from it cannot be disregarded except when they are rebutted by evidence of an opposite character. 19 Right to timber—Lords of manor—Where a plaintiff sued for damages for value of timber carried away by Government after being washed on to his estate and to have his right declared as against Government to all timber that in the future may be washed on to his estate. Held that it was not necessary for plaintiff to produce documentary evidence in support of the right or some decree or decision of competent authority establishing the custom. Lords of manors are allowed to establish rights to wrecks etc. by long continued and adverse assertion of and enjoyment under such claim and the plaintiff was entitled to have the question tried by the evidence he had adduced. *Crofton Lall Singh v. (5 Bom. A. C. 123)

24 Bhagdari tenures in Broach—Inheritance—Special custom—Priority of nearest male relative to daughter or sister—The plaintiff as heir of her father (a deceased Hindu bhagdar) sued the sons of sisters of her father's paternal uncle for possession of certain bhagdar lands situate in a village in the Broach collectorate. The defendants pleaded that they were entitled to the property under a special custom regulating the succession to bhagdar lands in the collectorate of Broach under which custom on the death of a bhagdar whether Hindu or Mohammedan without male issue his nearest male relations (after the death of widow) whether sprung through male or female lines of the deceased bhagdar succeed to his bhagdar lands to the exclusion of his daughter or. Held that the custom alleged was sufficiently proved and that the defendants were entitled to the possession of the bhagdar lands in question. Quere—The custom alleged being if not universal at least general in the Broach collectorate in the case of any particular village at any evidence being given of its continuance in the adjacent villages, if not in the particular village to itself (though it would always be more established than this could be done) be held still to survive and until the opposite party proved the adoption of some other custom or of the ordinary rules of inheritance in the particular village or failing such proof the general prevalence of such rules or such opposite custom in other similar adjacent villages. Quere—Whether males sprung of male relatives of a deceased bhagdar have priority over males sprung of female relatives of the same. Quere—Whether a daughter or sister of a deceased bhagdar is wholly excluded by the custom from the line of inheritance or would on failure of male relations succeed to the bhagdar lands. *Pranjoyan Dayaram v. 28 Record of cess by settlement officer—The fact that a cess levied in accordance with village custom has been recorded by a settlement officer is important evidence of the custom, but not conclusive proof of it. Held in the evidence in this case that the village custom set up was not established. LALA v. HIRA SON [L. L. R. 2 All, 40]

29 Manorial dues and cesses—The plaintiffs, zamindars, sued for a declaration of their ancient rights as against all the tenants of a certain village to appropriate all trees of spontaneous growth and the fruits of other trees planted by the tenants; also to receive as manorial tribute a certain number of ploughs annually and a lawan offering of paddy seed and other farm produce on the occasion of the marriage of persons of the inferior caste of tenants with a further right to levy wajab proportion of the produce of the sugar varan manufactories and fields in the village. The MAHO Courts having decreed the suit on vague and illegible evidence as to the existence of the rights—Held (a) that where a custom regarding cesses is alleged the existence of the custom each cess should be tried as a separate issue; that prima facie evidence as to the existence of such a custom would be tested by ascertaining the grounds of breach of tenants opinion; (c) that the best proof of title breach instances in which it has been acted on and defence entire evidence that it has been enforced; (d) occasional custom to be good must be definite. *LACH v. 32 Pre-emption—Wajib ul ur—Held that occasional instances in which a claim to pre-emption on the ground of title name may have been admitted or for special reason the vendors submitted to the claim are not sufficient to prove the custom of pre-emption in a mahallah but repeated instances of the assertion of pre-emption as a right and of its recognition or enforcement ranging over a long period of time and in various places should be shown. *SHEO CHURN KANDOO v. Upon the basis of this entry they claimed to be entitled to take a portion of the occupancy holding at a certain period of the year for the purpose of cultivating indigo. A suit to enforce the right of pre-emption which was based on contract and custom as evidenced by the wajih ul urz of a village was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that any contract which might be founded on the wajih ul urz was not binding on the vendor-defendant as that document did not bear his signature, and the lower Appellate Court attached no weight to the wajih ul urz as proof of the custom of pre-emption because it was drawn up when Regulation VII of 1822 was in force, and at that time there was no legal presumption of its accuracy. The claim was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff's evidence did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the village. Held that the lower Appellate Court had erred in dealing with the evidence, and that although this particular wajih-ul urz was made before Act XIX of 1873 came into force yet the weight which would attach to its entries both as proof of the contract as well of custom was very strong. Iera Singh v Ganga I L R 2 All 876 referred to. MURRAY MADHAN v MURNA LAL I L R, 8 All, 434

36. Wajid ul urz—Mahomedan law—It having been alleged that an estate by custom descended to a single heir in the male line the High Court concerning with the Court of first instance found that this custom had not been proved to prevail in the family. On an appeal contesting this finding it was argued among other objections that the High Court had not given sufficient effect to an entry in the wajih ul urz of a zamindari village the principal one comprised in the family estate now in dispute the last owner of that estate who held all the shares in the village having caused an entry to be made to the effect that his eldest son should be his sole heir the others of the family being maintained. Held that though termed an entry in a wajih ul urz the document was not entitled to the name but was rather in the nature of a testamentary attempt to make a disposition contrary to the Mahomedan law of descent. MOHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN v FIDAYAT UN NISSA I L R, 8 All, 516

38. Dhardhura—Appliability of custom—Accretion—The custom of dhardhura applies to lands thrown up or formed by fluvial action either in one year or in the course of a number of years. Whether it is equally applicable to chuckee formations or tracts of land covered by a sudden change in the course of a river and yet preserving their identity of site and surface after the severance, must be determined by proof of the extent of the custom. KATTIYAN v MAHOMED SUTAR OOD DEEN 3 Agra, 180

39. Dhardhura—The custom of dhardhura is, when applied to lands gained otherwise than by gradual accretion, opposed to equity; and such a custom must be proved, not by the vague assertions of witnesses but by a sufficient enumeration of instances. ISRAEL SINGH v SARVAT OOMERAN 1 N W, 142 Ed 1873, 224

40. Dhardhura—Beng Reg XI of 1825, ss 2 & (11)—The question whether the custom of dhardhura applies to lands gained by gradual accretion only or also to lands which have been separated from a mouzah by a sudden change of stream must be determined in each case on the evidence for although the Court would be disposed to scrutinize with care evidence in regard to a custom which would have the effect of passing from one owner to another lands long held and enjoyed, and of which the character is in no way altered by river action, yet it cannot be said that such a custom can in no case be established and given effect to. KATTIYAN v MAHOMED SHAFUDDIN 3 Agra, 189 Iera Singh v Sharfoodien 1 N W, 142 and Rajendar Periah Sahai v Laljee Sahoo 20 W R 427, referred to. 42. Usage of mangrois—Policy of insurance—Evidence of average loss—Certificate of mangayans—An alleged usage that the mangayans' certificate is deemed to be conclusive evidence against the under writer without production of manifest and account sales, and that upon proof of the certificate alone and of the policy the owner is entitled to recover his average loss cannot be upheld such not being a reasonable usage. RANJODAS BHAGILAL v KESRISING MOHANLAL 1 Bom, 229

— Facts necessary to establish the existence of a customary right—Easement—Easement Act ss. 4 and 15.—The plaintiff sued for possession of a piece of land which, he alleged, formed part of the court-yard of his kothi and for demolition of a chabutra thereon. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title and alleged that they always used the chabutra as a sitting place and that during the Moharram the tazias and alams were exhibited upon the chabutra, and a takh was placed upon it. The Court of first instance found that the defendants had a right to use the land in the manner claimed during the Moharram. The lower Appellate Court on the question of the defendant's right to use the said land in the manner claimed by them, found as follows:—That various mirsas, whose connection with each other is not established, have within a period of twenty years or so placed tazias upon land and sung there. Held that this finding of fact did not necessarily in law lead to the conclusion that there was a local custom by virtue of which the easement now claimed by the defendants was acquired. Where a local custom excluding or limiting the general rule of law is set up a Court should not decide that it exists unless such Court is satisfied of its reasonableness, and its certainty as to extent and application and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by leave granted, or by stealth, or by force and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which it concerned. KUAN SEN v. — Local custom—Right claimed by a certain section of Mahomedans to bury their dead in a certain locality—Right of burial—Where a certain section of the Mahomedan community had been for many years in the habit of burying their dead near a darga in plaintiff's land, and the plaintiff sued for an injunction restraining them from exercising this right in future—Held that the right of burial claimed by the defendants was not an easement but a customary right which being confined to a limited class of persons and a limited area of land was sufficiently certain and reasonable to be recognized as a valid local custom. MORIDIN v.
